Defects Found In Third Of School Buses Inspected

One third of the 7,784 Minnesota school buses inspected in the second round of 1973 checkups by the state patrol had some safety defects, a summary released this week by the patrol reveals. This record represents a substantial improvement over the first round of inspections when 44 per cent failed.

All school buses except those newly put into service are required to display stickers on the upper left side of the windshield, certifying that they have passed inspection. When a bus fails an inspection, the operator has 15 days to make the necessary corrections and qualify the bus for the required sticker.

Altogether, inspectors found 4,922 defects on the 2,596 rejected vehicles. Lamps out of adjustment and faulty exhaust pipes were the most common defects, accounting for 527 rejections each. Other lamp and signal faults totaled 874, including inoperative head lamps, turn signals and flashers.

Faulty brakes were found on 220 vehicles, faulty tires on 142, carbon monoxide leakage in 88, and 383 lacked proper first aid kits or fire extinguishers.

Under a law which went into effect in 1973, school bus inspections are now made twice yearly. Formerly the buses were inspected once a year. The first round of 1974 inspections is now in progress and is expected to continue through May.

New Regulations Are Proposed On Food Program

Food and nutrition service (FNS) of the U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) recently proposed a series of changes in the regulations for the special food service program for children.

Comments on the proposed changes are invited, during the next 30 days, from all interested persons.

The principal changes proposed are increases in the rates of reimbursement that FNS pays to the sponsors of the programs, in both the special summer program, and the year-round phase of the program.

In the special summer program, it is proposed to increase the maximum rate of reimbursement by four cents for a regular meal, from 30 cents to 34 cents; and by one cent for supplemental food, from 10 cents to 11 cents. Extra cash assistance is available, where all or nearly all the children are in need of free meals, and the service institution can't financially meet this need. This assistance has been boosted by 10 cents, from 60 cents to 70 cents for a regular meal; and by three cents for supplemental food, from 15 cents to 18 cents.

Of these amounts, six cents of the regular-meal reimbursement, and 1.5 cents of the supplemental food reimbursement may be used only for "administrative costs" as distinguished from operating costs" of obtaining, preparing and serving food. This would be the first time, in this program, that reimbursement payments have been specifically earmarked for administrative expenses.

In the year-round day-care program, it is proposed to increase the maximum rate of reimbursment by four cents, raising it from 30 to 34 cents for a lunch or supper. Reimbursement rates for breakfasts would be increased by two cents, from 15 to 17 cents.

Rates for supplemental meals (snacks) would be increased one cent, from 10 cents to 11 cents. For year-round programs which serve especially needy children, a 10 cent increase is proposed for lunch or supper, raising the rate for breakfasts for such children would be increased from 20 cents to 23 cents. And the reimbursment rates for supplemental meals for them would be increased from 15 cents to 18 cents.

Two proposed changes would apply to service institutions which take part in both the special food service program and the special milk program. One of these would drop the experimental light meal—the so-called "summer meal"—which has not proved popular with children. Another pertains to the free milk provision of the new child nutrition law, P.L. 93-150, and would discontinue the serving of supplemntal between-meals food snacks when the institution furnishes free milk to children under the special milk program.

Another proposed change concerns the meal patterns for the special food service program, and would eliminate the requirement for use of butter of fortified margerine in the meal.

Auditing of the programs is the subject of another proposed change which would require States which do their own auditing to give USDA an updated audit plan every three years.

It is proposed that the changes in the special summer program would be put into effect on April 15, while the changes in the year-round program would be effective July 1.

Thought For The Day

Is there really an energy crisis? This question has no doubt been heard more frequently the last few months than any other question. I really don't know if there is an energy crisis, in the natural, but I can assure you, from the Word of God, that there is not an energy crisis in the spiritual realm.

No one need walk in spiritual darkness for Christ, who is the light of the world, promises to all the light of life (Jn 8:12). Why are there so many spiritually cold hearts, today? Christ, who warmed the hearts of two men, as they walked with Him to Emmaus, can warm your heart by His love (Luke 24:32). There is no power crisis with God. Jesus told His followers that they would receive power after the Holy Ghost was come upon them (Acts 1:8). If we lack spiritual life, Christ can surely give it to us, for He is the resurrection and the life (Jn. 11:25). So you see there is no energy crisis with God!

Not Again!

According to word received from the Minnesota legislature, the House subcommittee of the environmental preservation and natural resources committee has recommended a bill for counties to adopt predator control programs.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Tony Eckstein of New Ulm and holding the number H.F. 1299, appropriates $400,000 for counties who want to adopt a predator control program. Bounties would be set at $50 for a timber wolf, $25 for a coyote, bobcat or Canadian lynx; $6 for a fox; and $4 for a raccoon or skunk.

Only good thing about the bill is that it was likely introduced too late for legislative action this session.

Information which we received did not indicate where the money would come from for the $400,000 appropriation to help support the program. Previous bounty programs, which were proved to be costly, wasteful, ineffective attempts at predator control, were paid for with conservation funds sadly needed in other areas of wildlife work. The bounties were finally eliminated by legislative action.

There has been a period of relative quiet following the elimination of bounties. Problems of livestock producers and predators still persist, as they would with bounty or without. Many, if not most, of animals bountied under the old system were incidental kills rather than those taken by persons hunting or trapping them for bounty.

High fur prices in the past several years did more to encourage taking of predators than bounties ever did. Snowmobilers in this area have commented on the few foxes they have seen this winter. While any predator which takes livestock is a problem to a livestock producer, we do not feel that the state in general has a serious predator problem. Even if it did, bounty payment would be as wasteful, economically unsound and unsuccessful as it was before.

A bounty program? Not again!

Texas English

It must be amusing to residents of our Southern states to hear the way we Yanks talk while visiting their sunny winter climate. And it takes a little special effort at listening to understand what our Southern neighbors have to say.

For the benefit of those who have occasion to travel in the South, the following short course in Texas English was borrowed from the Minnesota school board association "Journal":

heidi—an expression of greeting. "Heidi, friend!"

yawl—a pronoun of the second person plural. "Good to see yawl."

Hep—to render assistance. "We're here to hep yawl."

Belly—a nickname for William, "Hey, Belly, where's the next meeting?"

moll—5,280 feet. "It's one moll to the Convention Center."

sod—positon of a person or group opposing another. "Whose sod are you on anyway?"

clinics—a soft, disposable tissue. "Ah'm gonna sneeze. Hand me a clinics."

fate—terminal parts of the legs on which the body stands and move. "Mah fate are killin me!"

paypal—A body of persons. "They've sure got a lot of paypal down here!"

stars—a flight of steps. "If yawl thank ah'm gonna walk up all them stars yawl are crazy."

are—sixty minutes. "I'll be there in about a are."

all—petrolum. "Look at them all wells."

grain—a color. "My, the grass sure is grain."

kwat—free from noise or disturbance. "Be kwat, I can't hear the speaker."

phrasing—extremely or uncomfortably cold. "It's phrasing outside."

ahs—organs of sight. "The speaker sure opened my ahs to a lot of thins."

cyst—to lend support and or help. "I'd like to cyst you if I may."

toad—a past tense of tell. "I toad you it would rain."

rum—a portion of space within a building. "Which rum is the meeting in?"

cheer—in this place or spot. "I'll meet yawl right cheer!"

tom—specific point in a day, a month, a year. "Be sure to be on tom for the luncheon."

tarred—exhausted. "Boy, am I tarred!"

bah—short for "goodbye." "Well, I'll see yawl later. Bah!"

Ainglish—the language spoken in the U.S. "Cain't yawl understand Ainglish?"

Interesting Point

Rep. John Johnson makes an interesting point in regard to a proposed tax check-off system to finance Minnesota political campaigns, and the same point would apply to the federal income tax check-off system.

"One of the principal features of that bill provides that taxpayers can check off $1 from their Minnesota state income tax returns and designate it to go into one of the major political parties or into a pool of money that will finance political campaigns," he states.

"A second feature permits a credit from your actual income taxes of one-half of contributions up to $25 for single individuals and one-half of up to $50 for married couples filing joint returns, for contributions made directly to political parties or individual candidate's campaigns."

Since the check-off does not directly require additional tax, the average taxpayer may be inclined to permit his dollar to slip into a political war chest. The actual result is not quite that way, as Rep. Johnson points out:

"The total cost of these two provisions in that bill could result in a revenue loss to the state of Minnesota of $142,105,292 over the next four-year period," he said. "This enormous potential loss of tax revenue would have to be made up by increasing taxes on all of the people of Minnesota. Consequently, the people who do not make contributions would be directly taxed to cover the contributions by those who do make them. In effect, every Minnesotan would be forced by this bill to make contributions to political parties and political candidates."

In addition, if the bill passes, the person electing to make the contribution is also taxed to make up for the deficit his deduction creates. Generally the same case may be made for the federal check-off on income taxes.

There are likely some politicians who would like to be able to draw from a financial pool without accountability to anyone but the party hierarchy. We believe political candidates should be responsible to the people and work to merit their support—both in the ballot box and the campaign coffers.

Rep. Johnson merits a "right on" label for his comment that "The answer to terminating the substantial influence on policies of those who make large campaign contributions is not to shift the expense to all taxpayers. The answer is to realistically reduce the amount of money being spent by all candidates in political campaigns. Much of that money is wasted, and if strict limits were placed on this type of expenditure, realistic limits could be placed on the amount any individual could contribute to campaigns and contributions from special interest groups could be outlawed altogether."

Borrowed Nonsense

A frightened house holder excitedly reported that he had been struck down in the dark outside his back door by an unknown assailant. A young policeman was sent to investigate and soon returned with a lump on his forehead and a glum look on his face and reported: "I solved the case!"

Chief: "Amazingly fast work. How did you accomplish it?"

The young officer replied, "I stepped on the rake, too."

"Now that we've won our case," smiled the lawyer, "there's the matter of my fee. I would like you to pay me $500.00 down and $100.00 a month."

"Sounds like buying a car," commented the client.

"I am," explained the lawyer.

A political sage suggests that if Rosemary Wood had been Moses' secretary, we would probably have only Three Commandments.

A member of the rock group didn't show up on time for a recording date. When he finally arrived, the other members were irate.

"What's with you, man?" one said. "If we don't make this record, how are we going to buy our bread?"

"Sorry about that," the slow one replied, "but I had a hangup at home. My little boy loosened one of my guitar strings and it got out of tune."

"What took so long about that?"

"He wouldn't tell me which one."

The handsome actor's mission in his new role is to persuade all adults to have regular checkups. "Anything I can do to alert the public to the importance of health checkups as protection against cancer is something I am sincerely committed to do," says this key volunteer in the fight against cancer.

notes from the governor

Insurance is a big ticket item in most family budgets. In 1972, for instance, Minnesotans paid out more than $1.16 billion in premiums to the more than 1,000 life, health and accident, fire and casualty and other insurance companies that operate in the state.

One of the many little-known activities of state government is designed to insure that this money is well spent. In addition to its licensing, auditing and rate analysis functions, the Insurance Division of the Minnesota Commerce Department conducts a vigorous consumer advocacy program.

In February, for example, Insurance Commissioner Berton Heaton reports that this program helped recover $68,049.52 in additional money for Minnesota policy-holders by interceding with insurance companies.

Claims by citizens range from a few dollars to much larger amounts. Last month, for instance, an investigator for the division was called upon to help resolve a dispute between an employee and employer over group coverage for the hospitalization of the employee's wife. The wife was 65. The husband was younger. The insurance company took the position she was covered under Medicare. Its group policy provided otherwise, and the company agreed to pay a $3,065 claim following intervention by the investigator.

One of the smaller claims involved $6.93, the amount returned to a policyholder because of an insurance agent's error in the cancellation of a mobile home owner policy.

One of the key features of the division's consumer advocacy effort is the use of "circuit riders"—state insurance investigators who tour the state to deal with insurance complaints on a first-hand basis.

The circuit riders' route takes them to 16 outstate communities at least once each month. Most of their work is of an informative nature. Certain cases, however, involve instances where an agent is negligent or in error, or where a company misinterprets a legitimate claim.

The communities visited on a monthly basis are Albert Lea, Austin, Bemidji, Brainerd, Duluth, Fergus Falls, Grand Rapids, International Falls, Mankato, Marshall, Moorhead, Rochester, St. Cloud, Thief River Falls, Virginia and Willmar.

The Insurance Division's "circuit riders" and related consumer advocacy personnel have saved Minnesotans hundreds of thousands of dollars in insurance costs over the past few years. If you need assistance in dealing with an insurance problem I urge you to make use of the services provided by the division.

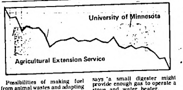
DEFECTIVE PAGE



Possibilities of making fuel from animal wastes and adapting this process and end product to American farms are being studied by University of Minnesota agricultural engineers James A. Moore, Richard Hegg and Philip R. Goodrich.

Also working on the project is Howard J. Hickman, research director of the university's center for studies of the physical environment.

The fuel, produced in an anaerobic digester is "bio-gas" and may contain from 30 to 70 per cent methane which is very similar to natural gas. With Minnesota being a major livestock producing state and with the current energy "crisis," attention is being turned to methane digesters as a source of fuel gas. Anerobic digestion does not provide, in the present state of the art, a good solution to energy problems. "The technology is there—it's just not economically attractive at present," Moore says.

A problem in producing methane in the digester is making sure that a complex system of microorganisms is closely controlled and the system survives. High temperatures are beneficial, so energy must be added to the system or else some of the gas generated must be used to heat the digester. "Bio-gas" probably would have to be cleaned if it was to be used in farm machinery and motor vehicles because the raw product contains engine-damaging hydrogen sulfide.

Even when operated at maximum output, a small digester using the waste from 20 cows probably would not provide enough methane to heat and light a home in Minnesota. Goodrich says "a small digester might provide enough gas to operate a stove and water heater.

University scientists are trying to give the methane digester a "real and just evaluation" and determine how to efficiently convert manure into methane. As part of that study, they are experimenting with frequency of mixing the wastes in the digester and the effect of heat on the production of methane.

Moore says the best use of the digester probably would be in animal agriculture, particularly to heat animal buildings, generating electricity for fans, lights and heat and for storage as is done with natural gas. The use could be year-around, converting the daily production of manure and thus eliminating the need for storage and transportation.

The research is being conducted as part of a study by the center for studies of the physical environment under a $90,000 grant from the Minnesota resource committee to study the use of agricultural wastes. The center is seeking $190,000 for a two-year pilot study on manure digestion and is expected to submit another proposal for funds to the pollution control administration for research on other aspects of wastes.

Gasoline prices at the pump have perplexed American consumers. Following a history of "gas price wars" and ready availability of gasoline at almost every street corner, we find prices climbing, service stations closing and gasoline often not available when we want it.

Our nation is moving from a period of abundant low-cost energy to an era of high prices and scarcity. The steady climb in gasoline prices is dramatized by the fact that it has taken place in such a short time—about six months. Consumers lived with relatively low gasoline prices when the prices should probably have been higher.

University of Minnesota agricultural economist Lee Martin says the market had failed to reflect what the future would bring in the way of gasoline scarcity. In fact, the market has given Americans very low petroleum prices and now we have to pay the price for the fact that our market system and government policies led us astray.

Controls on gasoline prices in recent times have had the effect of keeping the prices relatively low and not generally discouraging gasoline consumption. The price controls made it more profitable for oil companies to make more gasoline and less fuel oil for home heating, Martin adds. Turning down thermostats and a relatively mild winter to date has helped us avoid a crisis due to fuel oil shortages.

"This country has been subsidizing oil since we have had the oil depletion allowance," the economist says. The depletion allowance, actually a tax subsidy for petroleum, oil and natural gas industries, makes oil cheaper and results in more oil consumption. The purpose of the oil depletion allowance, according to the enabling legislation, is to encourage exploration of natural resources that are exhausted upon recovery by allowing owners of oil reserves to make deductions from their income tax for depletion.

Another way in which we subsidize oil is the way that oil companies are taxed. The federal income tax law allows corporations to deduct from their taxes what they pay to other jurisdictions as taxes. This has been interpreted by the Internal Revenue Service to mean that oil companies can deduct directly from their corporate income taxes almost all payments to foreign nations for oil. This provision enables the multinational oil companies to reduce their tax liabilities to the U. S. government almost to nothing, Martin adds. This tax saving makes gasoline cheaper for United States consumers as well as Western European consumers, who get much of their gasoline from affiliates of American oil firms. Nearly 90 per cent of the oil U. S. Multinational oil companies produce is sold outside the U. S.

Greater Number Of Motorcycles On Road Today

"Motorcycle registrations totaled 119,277 in Minnesota in 1973, representing an increase of 330 per cent in 10 years, commissioner of public safety W.R. Hoaglund pointed out today.

"Last year there was a 15 per cent increase in registrations and indications are that this rate of growth will continue. Along with this has come an increase in fatal motorcycle crashes. Last year there were four times as many fatal motorcycle accidents as 10 years ago, and these represented 7.3 per cent of all fatal traffic crashes. Ten years ago, motorcycles accounted for only 2.3 per cent of all fatals.

"There also appears to have an increase in the severity of the accidents during this period. Last year 2.7 in 100 motorcycle crashes were fatal. Ten years ago the rate was 1.6.

"With so many new vehicles coming into use each year, it is a reasonable assumption that there are also many new riders each year, including inexperienced and untrained riders."

He urged new riders to seek professional instruction and to obtain extensive off-road experience before venturing into traffic. "Our accident records indicate that lack of experience and training are important factors in motorcycle crashes. Many of the victims are young and unlicensed. Many of them have been using borrowed machines. Minnesota law requires motorcyclists to have a driver license and pass special tests before qualifying to drive a motorcycle. The law also requires special training for drivers under 18.

"This applies to the small, so-called mini-bikes as well as to full-sized machines. Parents should take special pains to see that their young ones comply with these laws.

"Motorcycle weather is just about upon us, and with this weather, the motorcycle accident season is about to begin. Help us keep the toll down this year," he said.

Antisubmarine Operators Are Needed By Navy

Ben Siebels from the Thief River Falls Navy recruiting station has announced that navy need for men to train as aviation antisubmarine warfare operators has recently been tripled.

Aviation ASW operators serve in locations throughout the world as flight crew members on patrol planes drawing permanent flight pay. They identify submarines by analyzing data obtained from electronic ASW sensors and perform all flight associated operation and maintenance of their electronic equipment.

Basic starting pay for Navy men ranges from $326 to $377 monthly. Training time for aviation antisubmarine warfare operators is approximately six months, excluding time spent in boot camp. Students, and other qualified Navy applicants, can sign-up now and delay the start of their training for up to one year.

Complete information on qualification requirements for ASW operators, and all other guaranteed Navy training programs, can be obtained from the Navy Recruiting Station, 209 East 3rd Street, Thief River Falls, Minn. 56701 (Telephone collect: 681-2104.)

Minnesotans Pay All Minn. Road Maintenance

Thanks to a 'dry' winter in 1973, snow and ice control on Minnesota's 12,000-mile trunk highway system cost the highway user $1.2 million less than in 1972, state highway maintenance forces report.

While highway maintenance costs increased 7.6 per cent on the national average from 1972-1973, Minnesota's outlay for maintenance of the turnk highway system increased by only 6.3 per cent.

By the end of December 1973 state highway commissioner Lappegaard's five per cent per annum cost-savings program had realized a savings of $4.6 million in the department's St. Paul central office and the nine district offices across the state.

Highway maintenance costs are paid entirely by the state highway user fund, which derives its income from motor vehicle registrations and the state tax on motor fuels of seven cents a gallon. There is no federal financial aid to help pay these costs, regardless of whether the highway is a federal-aid route or not.

Snow and ice control make up a large part of highway maintenance costs in the northern tier of states. Winter weather cost Minnesota highway users nearly $8.5 million in 1973; just about $800 per mile, annually, on the trunk highway system.

According to federal highway administrator Norbert T. Tiemann, states may expect a reduction of 15 per cent to 20 per cent in highway user revenues as a result of the gasoline shortage and the new 55 miles per hour speed limit.

Plans Progress For Exposition April 28

Plans are progressing for the annual Penn-Ro-Shall district Boy Scout exposition to be held on Sunday, April 28, from 2 to 5 p.m. in the National Guard armory in Thief River Falls, according to Art Heinze, chairman of the event for the sponsoring Thief River Falls Jaycees.

"The Scout exposition is a three-hour scout show where the general public is invited to see scouting in action," Heinze explained. "Scouting Rounds A Guy Out" is the overall general theme. Cub scouts, Boy scouts, and Explorer scouts will be demonstrating their learned scouting skills to the general public. All units in Penn-Ro-Shall district have been invited to participate.

In addition to local and area scouts participating in the district show, international flavor is again being added with the participation of more than 125 boys and leaders from the Seven Oaks district in Winnipeg, Canada. The Canadian boys will be staying with host family in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Any Boy or Cub scout who would like to invite a Canadian scout to stay with him that weekend is asked to contact his scout leader or Mrs. Oscar Elshaug at 681-4806.

Each scout demonstration will be judged against a standard. Points will be allowed on the following basis: Scout Participation — 20 points for a minimum of four boys presenting the theme of the booth; Uniforming — 10 points for proper uniforming or costumes; Presentation — 30 points for scouts giving explanation of their theme; Ingenuity — 20 points for displays and scouts using ingenuity with materials, signs, props and other boy made things; and Audience Interest — 20 points for the chosen theme to interest the general public in the demonstration.

Cub and Boy scouts will be selling tickets to the exposition being on April 6. A one dollar family ticket will admit the entire family to the show. The ticket sale will also help the boy's troop or pack raise money for the unit treasury. Tickets will be handed out to all Thief River Falls scouts on Saturday, April 6, at 10 a.m. at the city auditorium. All Thief River Falls Cub, Boy and Explorer scouts are asked to pick up their tickets at that time.

Jaycees assisting chairman Heinze are John Vik, publicity; Rick Kalinoski, physical arrangements; Ron Berning, special guests; Carl Anderson, ticket sales; and the Mrs. Jaycees, concessions. Adult scouters assisting with the hosting of the Canadian delegation are Mrs. Oscar Elshaug, housing; Mrs. Rick Contos and Mrs. Kermet Malberg, hospitality; Mrs. Lyle Johnson, finance; and Mrs. Joe Phelps, Sunday evening meal.

A special fellowship banquet will be held on April 27 at the Elks club to exchange international scouting ideas. Tickets for this

North Central Boardings Here 727 In February

North Central airlines established new February passenger and cargo traffic records, according to David E. Moran, vice president of traffic and sales. Bordings at the Thief River Falls airport in February totaled 727, accordig to unofficial figures kept here.

Scheduled revenue passenger miles for February 1974 were up 9.3 per cent for the airline to 69.4 million, compared with 63.5 million last year. The airline carried 317,099 passengers, seven per cent more than the 296,315 in February of 1973. The load factor in February rose to 46.9 per cent from 45.0 a yar ago.

"These new records are significant," Moran said, "since available seat miles in February decreased 3.1 per cent compared to last February. These results reflect both normal growth and the extra traffic generated by travelers choosing to fly rather than drive because of the fuel situation."

Cargo ton miles rose 12.3 per cent to 1,041,800 in 1974, compared with 927,613 the previous year. Freight ton miles alone jumped 22 per cent.

The company continued its outstanding operating performance by flying 2,046,289 of its 2,085,988 scheduled miles for a 98.1 per cent completion record. Of the airline's 16,200 scheduled arrivals, 82.3 per cent were on time.

Since inaugurating service in 1948, North Central has flown 39.1 million passengers some 7.7 billion passenger miles.

Immunization To Be Offered For Marshall County

Immunization clinics will be held in Marshall county on Saturday at Newfolden elementary school cafeteria from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and Marshall county court house, first floor, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. This is primarily for children entering school next fall for the first time.

DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus), oral polio vaccine and the combined hard red measles and German measles (rubeola and rubella) vaccine will be offered at a charge of 25 cents each, but no child will be turned away for lack of finances. Signed parental or guardian consent is required, and therefore, the child should be accompanied by an adult.

Certificates of immunity to rubeola and rubella are required by state law for those entering school for the first time, and these certificates will be issued at the clinic locations.

"It is worth noting that a child who has had one of the measles vaccines being offered in combination can safely receive the injection for immunity to the other, as there is no increase in side effects," states Viola L. Rud, Marshall county public health nurse.

Crop Marketing Meeting Slated Here Wednesday

A meeting on crop marketing contracts and price outlook will be held on Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. in the courthouse meeting room in Thief River Falls. University of Minnesota extension economist Willis Anthony will be here to present current information on various alternatives and the grain producer has for 1974 and beyond in selecting marketing strategy.

World grain supplies, rising economy in developing nations, food shortages, energy and transporation supply problems and many other factors influence the market for grain products. Even with favorable grain prices, the increased production costs make it necessary for grain producers to market wisely in order to maximize their return, states county agent Terry Courneya.

Nine Minnesota counties have been allotted more than $1 million each. Leading the list is Hennepin County with $3,987,109, followed by St. Louis with $3,698,337. In January 1974 there were five non-residential permits issued with a valuation of $40,000. As in 1974, there were no residential permits issued last January.

Minnesota's January valuation increased from $40,957,000 in 1973 to $45,497,000 in 1974. However, the number of permits issued remained about the same with 1,570 this year and 1,565 in 1973.

An increase was noted in the non-residential category where 1,185 permits were issued this year and 1,059 in 1973. They represented a valuation of $29,181,000 in 1974 and $21,534,000 in 1973.

The number of residential permits reflected a significant reduction in 1974. However, their valuation increased noticeably. In January 1973 there were 506 residential permits issued with a valuation of $19,424,000. In 1974 there were just 385 permits issued representing $20,503,000.

TYPICAL EXPRESSION of Lincoln high school Prowler basketball fans was mirrored by Tyson Treat, 9½-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Treat of Thief River Falls, following Saturday night's Region 8 championship victory. Treat is an assistant coach for the Prowlers. While fans were excited about the Prowlers' win, Tyson was more excited about the torn bits of paper which covered the UND fieldhouse floor.

"WE'RE NUMBER ONE" was indicated by the Prowler bench as co-captain Kent Christensen stepped to the free throw line for his 15th and 16th points with only seconds remaining in the Region 8 championship game Saturday night. Christensen saved his best game of the season for the title tilt to lead the Prowlers to a 60-54 win over the Blackduck Drakes.

A MAD RUSH onto the UND fieldhouse floor followed the final gun as the Lincoln high school Prowlers won the Region 8 basketball championship Saturday night. Enthusiastic fans engulfed the players amid a shower of torn paper as the Lincoln high school pep band (in the background) played the school song.

Debbie Olson Marries Wayne Paulson At Skime

Miss Debbie Olson, daughter of Mrs. Violet Pilgrim of Skime, became the bride of Wayne Paulson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kernel Paulson of Grygla at an afternoon ceremony at the Bethesda Lutheran church at Skime.

Rev. Erling Huglen officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by about 150 relatives and friends. Mrs. Huglen presided at the organ and also accompanied Mrs. Marlin Olson and Walter Storey as they sang "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was escorted to the altar by Hubert Olson. She was attired in a white floor-length gown styled with a lace empire bodice featuring long sleeves and a stand-up collar, embroidered with pearls. Lace motifs were appliqued across the front of the skirt. A lace headpiece reembroidered with pearls, held her bouffant veil of bridal illusion. She carried an arrangment of yellow mums and white carnations.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Vicky Olson of Skime. Other attendants were Mrs. Dave Menden of Shakopee, sister of the groom, and Virginia Paulson of Grygla, daughter of the groom. They wore identical floor-length, A-line gowns featuring dark lavender crepe skirts with long-sleeved bodice in coordinating flocked sheer. Each carried a solitary long-stemmed, large yellow mum.

Dave Paulson of Minneapolis attended his brother as best man. Dave Menden of Shakopee, brother-in-law of the groom, and Brett Hamilton of Skime, brother of the bride, served as groomsmen. The ushers were Tom Olson of Skime, brother of the bride, and Randy Loken of Pencer, cousin of the bride. All wore black trousers, ivory tuxedos with black trim, and lavender ruffled shirts. The groom had a yellow rose boutonniere and his attendants had white carnations pinned on their lapels.

The mother of the bride was attired in a crepe gown featuring a floor-length figured skirt and an orange long-sleeved bodice. Complementing the high neckline was a corsage of white mums, tinted brown. A similar corsage was worn by the mother of the groom, who was attired in a long sleeve bodice of rust crepe accented with figured satiness floor-length skirt.

Special guest at the ceremony was Tom Loken, grandfather of the bride.

A reception in the church parlors followed. Janeen Loken registered the guests, Karen and Laura Hamilton served the punch and Sharon Olson, Karen Sletten and Marlys Loken presided at the gift table.

Centering the serving table was a four tiered wedding cake, decorated with yellow roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom complemented by an archway, centered with a bell. Miss Sonia Olson, and Mrs. Chester Stratten, Jr., cut and served the cake as Mrs. Hubert Olson and Mrs. Larry Nordby poured. The women of the Bethesda Ladies aid served the reception.

Relatives and friends attending were from Thief River Falls, Goodridge, Gatzke, Wannaska, Roseau, Pencer and Warren.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

by Ellen M. Sproy

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

of rural Thief River Falls

Do we have the stamina of today's senior citizens of the patience of their grandchildren? Would we, like so many of our senior citizens, have the courage to leave the comforts of our homes and loved ones to pioneer a new country, build homes and establish laws, schools and churches? Three months ago, I would have answered in the affirmative. Today, I m not so sure.

A few of the hardy pioneers are still in our midst, living with their children or in nursing homes or hospitals. They, after years of hard work to obtain a home and property, have again faced the unpleasant role of giving up their cherished homes and possessions. This time, the task was more difficult. They didn't have the physical strength of their youth. Those that entered nursing homes had an extra problem. They had to conquer the stigma learned in the old-school, that only old folks who were extremely poor or who had renegade children were ever put into a home, commonly known as a poor-house. Some of the senior citizens lived in their own homes until their meager savings were depleted, except what had been saved for a "decent" burial. (For some, the prospect of a welfare funeral is a fate far worse than accepting "help" while living.)

Much has been done and is being done for the senior citizens of today. They are the ones who formed our government's foundation based on honesty. Today we have Watergating. They established schools for reading, writing and arithmetic. Today we are so complacent about obscenity that streaking is allowed in schools, colleges and on the streets. They established churches for the purpose of teaching that the Bible was God's holy word, completely true. Today the people are in an uproar because a church synod had the courage of firing instructors for teaching the Biblical stories, like Jonah and the Whale, are nothing but myths. (If those stories are myths, what will the learned men and women teach next. Will it be that the resurrection never took place?) And what are we doing about upholding the principles established by our forefathers?

In case you think that the problems of today are insurmountable, visit the physical thereapy department at our local hospital. There you will see peoples of all ages with problems. Of special interst are the senior citizens who aren't content to spend the rest of their days in a wheel chair. In spite of extreme crippling, due to arthritis or other problems, such as strokes, broken hips, amputations or the broken hip of their only leg, they are learning to walk. Guiding their footsteps and giving them moral support are the therapists, young enough to be their grandchildren. There are no magic buttons to push. It is all up-hill work, requiring time and patience and determination. No generation gap is evident as they work together; but there is joy in accomplishments.

There is much to be learned from the senior citizens and their grandchildren. By working together with them, using their determination and patience, the problems of today can be conquered.

Today's recipe comes from the files of Mrs. Kenneth Wagner, a member of the Silverton Homemakers club. Thanks.

Patricia Meglich Takes Four-Day Tour Of Navy

Miss Patricia Meglich, student counselor at Lincoln high school, boarded a navy DC-9 jet at Fargo's Hector airport last Tuesday as one of 60 area educators who participated in a Navy-sponsord four-day tour to various navy facilities at San Diego, Calif.

The educators were given the opportunity to visit recruits in various phases of their orientation at navy "boot camp," tours through the recruit's barracks, and mini lectures and demonstrations concerning such topics as drug education and race relations. Also included on the agenda was lunch in the recruit's dining hall where the educators were able to talk freely on an informal basis with the recruits.

At the navy's service school command the educators toured navy vocational schools where they had a chance to look over the sophisticated equipment and modern methods the navy utilizes to provide technical training for navy men and women.

The educators were also afforded the opportunity to tour one of the dozens of navy ships in San Diego harbor and observe sailors operating and repairing the intricate and complicated equipment and machinery found aboard modern navy ships. A highlight of their ship tour was dinner in the crew's "mess deck" (dining area).

Ben Siebels, recruiter in charge of the Thief River Falls navy recruiting station, reports the Navy sponsors frequent tours for educators to visit naval installations throughout the country.

SSI Program To Guarantee $140 Monthly Income

In the Pennington county area an intense effort to recruit individuals who are eligible for the new SSI program is underway. The local Red Cross chapters and community action workers are aiding the social security administration in this program, according to Charles Samuelson, Red Cross SSI representative for Pennington county.

Purpose of this new program is to provide payments that will add to the income of people age 65 or over, or people who are blind or disabled, so that they will have a cash income of at least $140 a month for one person and $210 a month for a couple, Samuelson said.

This doesn't mean that every eligible person or couple will be getting that much money every month. Amount of the payment any person gets will depend on how much other income he has. That is, the more other income a person has, the smaller will his supplemental security income payment be.

Whether or not a person or a couple is eligible for these payments at all will depend on the amount of income they have and on the value of the things they own.

To be eligible persons must be: Aged 65 or over, or blind or disabled—physically or mentally—of any age. Resources must be less than: Earned income, below $365 a month for an individual and $505 for a couple; unearned income, below $160 a month for an individual and $230 for a couple; and resources, below $1,500 for an individual and $2,250 for a couple.

A home of reasonable value will not be counted. In additon no lien will be put on the homes of people getting these federal payments.

Insurance policies or a car may not affect eligibility either, but it will depend on its value. Personal effects and household goods also will not be counted in most cases.

The new supplemental security income payments will be made by the social security administration, but the program will be financed from general revenues of the federal government, not from social security contributions that workers and employers make. It is not the same as social security.

The first payments under this new federal program were started January of this year.

People who need more information to decide whether they might be eligible for these payments should call their local social security office or who can be reached at 681-2181 Northland community college.

ONE SCHOOL BUS and nine or ten cars were involved in an accident about 8 a.m. Friday a mile north of St. Hilaire on Highway 32. Not all of the vehicles were involved in collisions but several of them were forced to drive into ditches to avoid other vehicles. The Thief River Falls school bus, driven by Jim Gunstad, was traveling north and still accelerating after making a regular stop for students. As the bus started, one vehicle passed it but Randy Gavin's car (left) struck the rear of the bus. His vehicle was considered a total loss. Diane Bucholz of Halstad had been driving north and also ran into the rear of the bus while trying to avoid oncoming traffic. Linda Opferkew of St. Hilaire was driving south and her vehicle slid into the front of the bus when she tried to stop. Phyllis Schmidt of Red Lake Falls struck the rear of a vehicle driven by Donovan C. Foss of St. Hilaire who was traveling north and slowed near the accident scene. Motorists running into ditches include Margaret Mercil of Red Lake Falls, Virgil Eckstein of Red Lake Falls and Walter Haas of St. Hilaire (right in photo). Damage to vehicles was estimated less than $200 each (other than Gavin's) and no injuries were reported.

Drugs Becoming More Common In Traffic Arrests

Drugs have become an increasing factor in traffic safety, a review of the arrest records of the Minnesota state patrol indicates.

In seven months of 1973, the department handled 29 traffic cases in which drugs were involved and another eight where they were suspected but were not confirmed. During the same period in 1972, officers handled 20 cases where drugs were involved and seven others where they were suspected.

Alcoholic intoxication was also suspected in seven drug cases in 1972 and 11 in 1973. However, tests were positive in only two cases in 1972 and six in 1973.

Marijuana was the most common drug found. It was proven in 17 arrests during this period in 1972 and 25 arrests in 1973. In most cases the amount involved was small. One arrest yielded 6.4 ounces of marijuana and several turned up supplies of seeds.

Amphetamins and barbiturates were involved in six or seven cases both years and in 1973 troopers found one supply of 160 and one of 150 tablets.

Opium was involved in one arrest and hashish in one. Several arrests involved more than one drug.

In addition to the cases initiated by the state patrol, the Minnesota Crime Bureau laboratory tests a large number of specimens submitted by other police agencies in all parts of the state.

On March 14, 1919, the 1st Pursuit Group conducted its first activities when an element of two pilots of the 95th Pursuit Squadron went on patrol in France.

J. K. Stadum, manager of the Minnesota department of employment services office in Thief River Falls, announced today that his office is taking applications for the youth conservation corps. (YCC).

All Minnesota youth who are at least 15 years of age but not yet 19 are eligible to apply, according to Stadum. Youth who are selected will be paid $5.50 per day plus board and room. Highway Deaths Decline During 1973 In Minn.

Minnesota's traffic fatality rate continued to decline in 1973, according to preliminary figures compiled by the state's department of public safety. If present prjections hold, the rate will be just above four per 100 million miles of travel. Last year the rate was 4.14 per 100 million miles.

Vehicular travel is calculated on the basis of actual traffic counts and motor fuel consumption. For several years travel on state roads has increased at the rate of 4 to 5 per cent annually. However, last year, Hoglund said, indications are that this declined to a 2 per cent increase, presumably because of the motor fuel shortage.

Since 1966, when the national highway traffic safety act went into effect, Minnesota has experienced an almost uninterrupted annual decline in the fatality rate per 100 million miles of travel.

The injury rate also improved to the most favorable on record. Last year an estimated 41,000 persons suffered traffic injuries, or 158 per 100 million miles of travel. In 1966, injured persons numbered 53,966 or a rate of 300 per 100 million miles.

Major General Lundberg Given Army Promotion

Governor Wendell R. Anderson announced this week that the U. S. Senate has confirmed the promotion of Brigadier General William S. Lundberg to the rank of Major General, Minnesota Army National Guard. General Lundberg is commander of the Guard's 47th Infantry "Viking" division which has units in 68 Minnesota communities including Thief River Falls and headquarters at the Capitol Hill armory in St. Paul.

General Lundberg enlisted as a private in the Anoka unit of the Minnesota Army National Guard in 1934, and through a career of varied assignments, tours of active duty and numerous military schools, rose through the ranks to his present position of division commander with the rank of Major General.

He was called to active duty with the Guard in 1941 and served at Camp Claiborne, La., and Fort Bragg, N.C., before being sent overseas where he participated in the combat campaigns of Naples-Foggia, Rome-Arno, South France, Central Europe, Rhineland and Ardennes-Alsace. Following World War II, General Lundberg, then a Chief Warrant Officer, rejoined the Minnesota Army National Guard.

He soon was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Guard and rose to the rank of Captain just prior to being called again to active duty during the Korean Conflict in 1951. He served at Camp Rucker, Ala., Fort Sill., Okla.; with the Third Infantry Division in Korea; and again rejoined the Guard when hostilities ended in 1952.

He was promoted to Colonel in 1964, served as chief of-staff for the 47th Infantry division, was named assistant division commander and promoted to Brigadier General in 1968. He served as assistant division commander until September of 1973 when he assumed command of the division from Major General Paul V. Meyer.

General Lundberg is a graduate of the U.S. Army command and general staff college and has completed numerous other military training courses. His awards and decorations include the Bronze Star, the Minnesota medal for merit, World War II victory medal, Korean service medal and the Minnesota service medal.

General Lundberg, his wife Mercedes, and family live at 721 Birch Street, Anoka.

New Product To Save Gasoline Is Distributed

An independent carburetor parts manufacturer has announced the development of a new product designed to help drivers save gasoline.

This sensor instrument connects to an existing vacuum line and can be mounted in any position in any convenient place on the dash of car, truck or boat. When the driver starts to over-accelerate, the device signals instantly. All drivers participating in tests—most of whom thought they were driving in the most economical way—reportedly improved gas mileage substantially after installing the device.

The product does not change the power of performance of an engine, and exhaust emissions are improved, according to information furnished by the manufacturer. The unit is available from Wilson Brothers company in Thief River Falls.

Taxpayers Asked To Check Checks Before Sending

Are you paying your federal taxes by check this year?

If you are, the Internal Revenue service would appreciate it if you first check your check before sending it in with your tax return.

"The Ogden service center receives a large number of checks every day that are not properly filled out," says R.C. Voskuil, district director of internal revenue for Minnesota. "The most common error is failing to sign the check."

The service center also receives checks made out for the wrong amount as well as some made out to department stores, gasoline companies, state tax agencies and grocery stores.

When an invalid check is received, the IRS sends it back to the taxpayer and begins processing the tax return as one on which money is owed. The taxpayer will receive a bill for the amount owed. In the case of returns received on a due date the taxpayer is billed for the amount with a failure-to-pay penalty added.

The American Conscience

by Dr. RUDY SKOGERBOE

"There is not enough darkness in the whole world to put out the light of one wee candle." (A Scottish Epitaph)

The dominating gloomy nature of the news could lead our nation to despair. Quite the opposite is more than possible if we can reflect enough to see the real picture.

If we were to look at the abduction of Patricia Hearst, certainly it is a symbol of the darkest nature of man. Those who did this are only able to curse the darkness and the nation grieves over it. On the other hand, even this has brought out a spirit of cooperation in thousands of people who help distribute food and are especially careful not to hurt the chances for the girl's release. This is a light that outshines even this dark hour and the memory of this effort will far outlast the terror these miserable outlaws created.

If we were to look at inflation, certainly with the highest one year rate in history, we would say our system is falling apart. Quite the opposite is true because working people will eventually realize that we must change the kind of men we sent to represent us.

We don't want socialism or countless plans for our lives at our expense. We want to work and create and produce, we don't want to be put into a class or a box by some idiotic Washington scheme. Inflation will be the catalyst that will create a new idea of politics and wit will help us. Honest hard work is still the backbone of our country and our lives and this light will never be shut out even by our present inflation.

If we listen to political news with its many charges and counter charges, we wonder if there is an honest man left in Washington. We could say that truth is obsolete and gone forever. It is not that way and even the pains of Watergate will create a self examination that will purify. The light of fact and truth cannot be eliminated even by men in high places.

Now the movie industry has sunk to a new low in its presentation of the Exorcist. Here the powerful triumph of Christ over the Devil, or of truth and goodness over eveil was clouded and missed by Hollywood. People who went to see it were definate in their criticism that it did not tell a spiritual story. This would be a very dark and dismal picture were it not for the countless readers who read the book and were able to receive spiritual help from it.

In a culture that tries to eliminate Christian truths, we find throughout our country a desire for the "real thing" in religion. Thus it can be said honestly that even this bad movie will be completely over shadowed by the light of Christian power and love. This resource has not left our country and as it did in the Victorian era in England, it can do the same here. It is a light that refuses to burn out.

While all these dark clouds continue to roll past us, our great country continues on its usual way. We continue to send tons of food and help to starving people in Africa. Our churches join in a massive effort to relieve the darkness of poverty and hunger even while we're hurting ourselves. We have no need to despair, we have everything going for us, just so we don't quit. The future depends on our will because we know it is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness.

The time to break the wild oat is before it breaks ground!

Use Far-Go® herbicide for early control of wild oats.

Before your wheat or barley comes up, wild oats start to steal moisture and nutrients that should go to your crop.

That can mean less yield (and profit) at harvest.

This spring use Far-Go® herbicide by Monsanto for early control of wild oats. Far-Go is absorbed by wild oat shoots and usually results in control before emerging through the soil surface.

And when used as recommended, Far-Go gives effective wild oat control without crop injury. Remember how bad wild oats were last year — be ready this year.

Apply Far-Go this spring to help get a better yield of barley, spring wheat or Durum wheat at harvest.

Wild oats:
if you can't sell 'em,
why grow em?

Thought For The Day

"There are quite a few of us living in Thief River Falls, but that doesn't mean that we can't know each other better than we do. Let's take the time and make the effort to know each other on a first-name basis and enjoy each other's company.

"Let's not be so time-conscious that we have to rush about as though we are always behind schedule for the next event. Let's not see our fellow towns' people as obstacles to run over or around as we hurry on to our next appointment. God has given us each other, let's enjoy the gift.

What It's All About

We read with interest an essay by Bob Cushman, high school counselor at Paynesville, regarding his school's competition in athletic endeavors. He tells of the basketball team's victory in spite of players lost to ineligibility, personal fouls and injury, and then turns to previous memories. What he has to say should be of interest to all persons who have any acquaintance with high school athletics:

"My mind was flooded with vivid memories. I remembered eighth graders pressed into service as varsity baseball players and I saw some of them get hits that helped win a few ball games. I remembered a depleted track and field team perform almost superhumanly in a valiant effort to win one more conference crown for a retiring coach. Not one regular returned for cross-country but I saw freshman on stubby legs fight doggedly over the golf course hills to salvage a measure of respect in that sport..

"I remembered an injury and ineligibility riddled football team fighting toe-to-toe with some of the toughest teams in the area. Inexperienced wrestlers found themselves forced into varsity jobs unexpectedly and they performed far beyond anyone's expectations.

"What these memories brought into sharp focus for me is important in understanding athletic competition. In this time I haven't seen a Paynesville athlete give less than the full measure of his ability. I haven't seen a team fold under pressure. I haven't heard the students complain, make excuses or ask for special consideration because they got some bad breaks. I haven't seen anyone quit because they were grossly mismatched or got far behind. I've seen the Paynesville athletes shoulder their responsibilities with both pride and dignity.

We haven't won a conference championship. Our won-lost record is below what we have been accustomed to in past seasons. But, in my opinion, this has been the most successful sports season we have had since I came here nine years ago—because this year I can honestly say I've seen boys turned into men. And that's what high school athletics is all about. And I'm deeply thankful that we have an administration and a coaching staff that recognizes it."

Everybody Makes 'Em

Follwing editorial comment was written by Colleen Walter, news editor of the Cosmos Sun:

In last week's issue of the Cosmos Sun an error was made. The time and date of the Cosmos Commercial Club meeting was reported incorrectly.

The mistake must have been of great and major consequence according to the reactions of a few people in the group.

I have no idea what kind of ideas people have on what a newspaper should be and what kind of people run them. But, I have met many and I know some of them far better than other people might. They are, surprisingly, very human creatures.

Like most human life, they make mistakes sometimes and, hopefully, learn from these mistakes. They are also just as vulnerable as people in any other business—vulnerable to pressures such as nervous tension caused by the constant threats of deadlines which are characteristic to the business. They come in assorted shapes, sizes and varieties, like other people in other businesses.

Some are forgetful while others are perfectionists, some are folksy in style while others are rigidly professional, some are callous and some are oversensitive, and some don't miss anything (regardless of whose toes get stepped on) while others don't get anything that isn't written up by someone else and turned in.

But for the most part, newspaper people are a mixture of varying degrees of all kinds of characteristics. Unfortunately, there is one major difference between newspaper people and people in other businesses. Because of the nature of the work, the mistakes made by newspaper people are exposed for everyone to see. And, because of the time factor involved, sometimes those mistakes cannot be corrected.

Statistics show that small town newspapers are dying at a much faster rate than the small towns that support them. I did an extensive study while I was doing my journalism work at college, on the reasons behind the deaths of those papers. And in a nutshell, the editors I interviewed (who were now in completely different lines of work) said that they quit because the price, in terms of tension and time, which they had to give up to be in the newspaper business, far outweighed benefits in terms of public approval and profit, which they gained.

Sometimes I wonder if certain people aren't trying to see just how fast they can create one of those statistics.

Steel Not Hot Shot

Use of substitute metals instead of lead for shot in shotgun shells has been subject of experimentation for some time. Current situation is summarized in this article by the staff of "National Rifleman" magazine:

Steel shot—remedy or wrecker?

The U.S. Department of the Interior, concerned because bottom-feeding waterfowl ingest spent shot and suffer lead poisoning, is considering the mandatory substitution of steel shot for lead. It believes this will save perhaps millions of ducks from poisoning.

To some conservationists and firearms experts, however, the balance of evidence in favor of steel shot over lead is not nearly as positive or conclusive as Federal bureaucracy seems to view it.

Among the questions that yawn unanswered or inadequately answered, in the opinion of these people, are:

Will steel shot cripple and leave to die, more ducks than lead shot poisons?

Will the steel pellets, being bulkier, force the elimination of 2¾" shells and guns chambered for them in favor of 3" shells or longer?

How badly will steel shot damage the bores of shotguns, especially the thin-barrelled expensive guns? And how much more will steel shotshells cost?

Above all, why does a U.S. Government agency come to a conclusion unswervingly in favor of steel shot whereas the Canadian Government, with much expertise of its own, is far less sure about it?

At a special press luncheon in New York City Feb. 4, Assistant Secretary Nathaniel Reed of Interior said American hunters must choose between eliminating lead shot or giving up duck hunting. Some of his subordinates were less positive.

Dr. R. I. Smith, discussing lead poisoning research at Patuxent Wildlife Center near Baltimore, Md., inferred that at least part of the lead found in ducks there came from liquefied car exhaust emissions of leaded gasoline, rain-washed from highways into duck feeding areas.

Dr. John Rogers, also of the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, came up with two answers. Based on 1973 field tests, he asserted, there is little difference in the crippling effect of steel and lead shot—"miniscule," he said. Dr. Rogers dismissed the Canadian research as too small-scale "to be significant."

The damage probability exists and so does the ballistic deficiencies, according to recent study by The American Rifleman Staff. Here are some statements of fact:

A 1 one-eighth oz. load of No. 4 steel shot (now available) approximates a 1 oz. load of No. 6 lead shot in effectiveness.

A 1 and one-eighth oz. load of No. 2 steel shot approximates 1 oz. load of No. 4 lead shot.

A 1 and one-eighth oz. load of any size of steel shot is the maximum that can be loaded in any 2¾" 12-ga. shotshell. There simply is not room for more shot.

A load of 1¼ oz. (1.3 oz.) of steel shot is near the maximum that can be loaded in a 3" Magnum 12-ga. shell.

Under the rules by which the Department of Interior must play, before regulations may be promulgated an Environmental Impact Statement must be filed. Following that filing, a 30-day waiting period for response is mandatory. At this writing, it seems likely that the required EIS wil be filed about March 1st, 1974.

Unless substantial contrary evidence or objection is developed, hearings are not required. Having complied with the law, the Department of Interior will be free to make such regulations concerning ammunition used in hunting migratory birds as it chooses.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Many times in the past few days I have wanted to sit down and write a "sour grapes" letter about the manner in which the District 31 BB championship game was played. However, I figured that, rather than blow my cool, appear to be somewhat bitter and a bad loser (which I was), I would just put it off, at least, until I saw what the "pro-Prowler Times" (and why shouldn't they be) would have to say.

Before I comment on that report I should relate some of the things that bothered me after the game was over when the dreaded disease of "analysis" had set in. Who really knows how close the game could have been or, for that matter, by how many additional points TRF may have beat the Huskies if the incredibly poor officiating had been anywhere near an average night for a good official (which, in the eyes of a spirited fan, may still be far from perfect).

And why should we even be content with average officiating, when in important (and even heartbreaking) games such as this one, we should have the best available. Perhaps we should adopt a method such as used in the district wrestling tourney, where officials on the sidelines may overturn the primary official's call if an apparent error or poor call was made.

Instead of discussing the crucial play or time period or talents of a ballplayer which may have been a key to the end results, the post-mortem was about poor officiating. A person or a team can accept a loss if the loss can be attributed directly to the fact that the winner was the better team on the court that night. But with such mismanagement of the game by the officials (no, the Goodridge team was not angelic in their play), one can only wonder if at the final buzzer of another match-up, the results may have been different. Or, at least, one wonders if the heart-pounding excitement of a well-played game would be felt by everyone—the winners and the losers—had the two men that night posing as officials called in sick or had taken an extended vacation so that officials with a head for their job could have filled in.

Now, back to the Times. Not bad! We Huskies, being as bitter and down-in-the-mouth as we were, expected to get it a second time from the Times. Not so! The writer of that article had the courage to call erratic officials erratic, even though he did a good job of not stepping on two many toes. A good give and take effort. I hope there are other Prowler fans that are also courageous enough to admit that perhaps another night, another place, with two good Minnesota officials, the game may have indeed ended differently with heads held high for being the better team—the undisputed winner—on the floor that night.

Best of luck to the Prowlers in the region play-offs!

Sincerely,
Roger K. Humbert
Goodridge, Minn.

Congressman Says Oil Crisis Solution Lies In Cooperation

by Elizabeth Petrangelo
University News Service

Answer to the oil crisis in the U.S. lies in further cooperation with the rest of the world and not in independence, Minneapolis Congressman Donald Fraser said at a University of Minnesota conference recently.

"This is more than a petroleum crisis," he said. "It is a monetary crisis, a political crisis and a security crisis. Our answer must lie in closer collaboration with the rest of the world, not in further self-sufficiency."

Fraser spoke to a group of about 250 people in Minneapolis last week at a conference on the politics of oil.

Fraser said there is not really a shortage of oil and that "the issue today is price rather than supply. Our imports now are almost back to normal, something the Shah of Iran pointed out the other day to the great irritation of our government."

He said that U.S. policy has long been to let the price of domestic oil rise to the level of the world market. "World prices now exceed estimated prices for alternative sources of energy and are now well above what even the oil industry has said is sufficient for incentive," he said.

Fraser said Third World countries will be especially hard-hit by rising oil prices, adding that non-oil producing countries will have to pay $10 billion more this year for oil and that the prices they will have to pay for food will also skyrocket.

This situation will hurt the U.S. and industrialized countries, he said. "If they have to spend more on oil, they're going to have less to spend for American goods and services." About one-fourth of the exports of industrialized countries go to Third World countries, he said.

"In my view, richer countries have no choice but to extend even more assistance to poorer countries," he said. "This means direct aid, export credits and increased world bank loans."

Fraser said that attempts by the U.S. to attain energy self-sufficiency are not in the economic interests of the U.S. or the world community. "The cost of self-sufficiency far exceeds what our energy cost would be through continued world trade," he said.

"In our efforts to achieve independence, we've had a series of conflicts with Europe. The increased tendency of the U.S to rely on the old balance of power instead of establishing new institutional relationships is really bothering our European friends," he said.

"Whether we can repair our relations with western Europe remains to be seen," he said.

John Kareken, University of Minnesota economics professor and economic adviser to the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis, said the Arab oil embargo and the announced cutback on oil production are non-existent and that the only thing that has changed is an increase in the export tax on oil from Arab countries.

"An embargo that is levied by a few producers is without effect," he said. "It only rearranges the sources of supply. The announcement that there would be a cutback in oil production was made for dramatic effect and seems to have worked."

Kareken said there are indications that the price of oil on the world market will go down soon, but that "some countries are still entering into bad long-term contracts for oil at high prices and this could have a serious effect on international affairs."

He said that the U.S. is going to see higher oil costs for some time and that this is largely a result of President Nixon's Project Independence. "If we are going to be independent, we are going to have to impose a tariff that guarantees oil will not come into this country at a price below what it will cost to exploit our tremendous resources of shale."

Kareken said this cost would be about seven to eight dollars a barrel while the world cost of oil may dip as low as four dollars a barrel.

Both Fraser and Kareken emphasized that importance of continued work on conservation. Kareken said that the greatest impact of oil production from shale would be on the country's environment. "Oil-shale extraction is monstrously ugly," he said.

Fraser said there are tremendous reserves of oil beneath the oceans and that international talks on the exploitation of that oil are scheduled to begin this June in Caracas, Venezuela. "It is estimated that there are nearly 2,200 billion barrels of oil in the oceans, almost four times the estimated existing oil reserves in the rest of the world."

He said that it will be necessary to develop an international mechanism to administer the development of these resources and that the cooperation that it would require could improve relations in the international community.

The conference was sponsored by the university's world affairs center and the department of conferences.

Prowlers Top Blackduck 60-54 For Region Title

Thief River Falls won its first region eight basketball tournament title since 1960 Saturday with an exciting 60-54 conquest of stubborn Blackduck in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse in Grand Forks.

Exuberant Thief River Falls fans spilled onto the tartan covered fieldhouse floor immediately after the final gun sounded to congratulate the Prowlers who qualified for an enviable state tournament berth with the triumph. Thief River Falls will face region one champion Waseca in the first class A state tournament game Thursday at 1:05 p.m. in the St. Paul Civic Center.

"This is like a dream—it's fantastic," sounded elated Prowler coach Lee Swanson in the locker room after claiming his first region championship. "I love everyone of these kids," shouted Swanson over the boisterous Prowler locker room celebrations. "This team has the best attitude I've ever encountered in 14 years of coaching. The team unity is something else, it's really hard to describe."

The surprisingly strong district 29 champion Drakes, making their first appearance ever in the region eight tournament, battled down to the final seconds before surrendering their title dreams to the Prowlers.

Blackduck, entering the tense fourth quarter trailing 44-42, cashed in on several free throw opportunities to take a 49-47 lead with 4:47 remaining, but unfortunately for the Drakes, losing 6-3 team leading guard Tom Gilstad on fouls in the process.

Thief River Falls capitalized on Gilstad's absence to outscore the faltering Drakes 11-2 over a 2:35 span to go in front 58-51 with 1:38 left. A single free throw by tournament standout Dallas Kemmer had sliced the Blackduck lead to only 49-48 before center Wayne Peterson banged a rebound shot back in to give the Prowlers the lead for keeps. Peterson added a pair of free throws moments later and Kent Christensen, who starred in the game as the Prowler sixth man, scored on a fast break to force the Drakes into a hasty time out. Blackduck center Lee Cluff made two free throws to trim the difference to 54-51 with 2:42 to play, but Christensen and Peterson both scored from close range to push the Prowlers lead to seven, 58-51.

The never say die Drakes remained in contention, however, when Dave Cross hit from long range and Baltes, a Blackduck all-state football player, made the first of a bonus free throw situation for a 58-54 ball game with still 22 hectic seconds remaining.

Seemingly appropriate, Christensen wrapped up the Prowler win with a pair of net-swishing free throws with three seconds left. The two free throws gave the 6-1 senior co-captain a game high 16 points to go along with nine key rebounds.

"Kent did a marvelous job for us in there," pointed out Swanson who has praised Christensen throughout the year for his clutch off-the-bench performances.

An obviously dejected Blackduck coach Jim Ross pointed to Gilstad's departure as the game's turning point. "No doubt about it, when Tom went out it turned the game around. We had to play him with four fouls, though, it was our only chance in the world. I knew it was going to be close and I felt we had a 50-50 chance of winning; but our 50 game up short—we only got 48. We just lost our cool at times and made some costly mistakes."

Thief River Falls led nearly the entire ball game after two back to back long jump shots by Duane Dicken supplied the Prowlers with a 13-12 edge at the first quarter break.

The Prowlers enjoyed the game's biggest lead in the second quarter when Thief River Falls led 26-17 with 2:49 remaining. Blackduck rallied to pull within 26-23, but Christensen scored on a fast break and Peterson potted a pair of free throws for a 30-23 halftime cushion.

Thief River Falls struggled, but managed to hold off the scrappy Drakes in the third quarter until Blackduck scored five straight points to grab a 40-38 lead with 2:07 left. A rebound shot by Gilstad gave Blackduck its first lead since the opening quarter, rocking the fieldhouse with a deafening roar from the partisan Blackduck crowd.

Christensen followed a Thief River Falls time out by hitting a long base line jumper, followed moments later by a pattened Jerry Sandahl driving lay-up, to boost Thief River Falls in front 42-40. Baltes banked in a 10 foot jump shot with 25 seconds left, but Peterson slipped inside for an easy basket with just three seconds showing to give Thief River Falls a 44-42 advantage at the final quarter break.

Thief River Falls mixed up its offense effectively and as a result notched a strong 48 per cent shooting effort from the floor on 23 of 48 tries. Blackduck, forced to shoot outside a tough Prowler zone most of the night, shot only 32 per cent on 18 of 56. Thief River Falls made 14 of 23 free throw attempts and Blackduck sank 18 of 27 gift tosses. Thief River Falls held a 35-25 rebound edge with Peterson playing another strong game by collecting 17 big caroms. Thief River Falls also led the turnover charts, though, 18-11.

Prowlers Beat Mahnomen 62-52 In Region 8 Opener

Juniors Dallas Kemmer and Wayne Peterson combined their contrasting talents for 42 points Friday to spark Thief River Falls to a thrilling 62-52 first round region eight basketball tournament triumph over defending champion Mahnomen in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse in Grand Forks.

Kemmer, a 6-0 sharpshooting forward, continued his blistering post season tournament shooting by hitting seven of 12 medium range jump shots to go along with a seven for eight showing at the free throw line for 21 points. Peterson also scored 21 points, but in a different manner as the junior pivotman used his 6-8 frame to shake free for 10 close-in buckets around the basket.

The final 10 point margin was not indictive of the game's closeness—reflected more accurately in the three one-point quarter leads. Mahnomen led 14-13 at the first quarter break, but Thief River Falls managed a 28-27 halftime edge and a 43-42 lead after three quarters.

An outstanding fourth quarter effort by Thief River Falls found the Prowlers scoring the first nine points of the deciding final stanza to suddenly boost the precarious one point third quarter lead to a startling 52-42 bulge two minutes into the period. A flying lay-up by Kemmer ignited the impressive Prowler scoring spurt. Kemmer added a running 10 foot jump shot moments later, Peterson shook himself free for a lay-up and Kemmer completed a big three point play to force the back-pedaling Indians to call a hasty time out.

Dave Mittet momentarily interupted the Thief River Falls scoring spree with a pair of free throws, but Peterson and Kemmer both scored again to account for the game's biggest lead, 56-44 with only 3:55 left.

Just when a Thief River Falls victory was apparently locked up, Mahnomen stunned the large fieldhouse crowd by clamping on a smothering full court press and ripped off eight lightning-light points in just 50 seconds to shave the difference to only 56-52 with 1:45 still remaining.

Thief River Falls managed to withstand the heart-stopping Mahnomen surge, however, as the Prowlers followed a strategy-planning time out by scoring six straight game ending points. Peterson and Randy Dallmann each sank the first shot on bonus free throw situations for a 58-52 lead with 54 seconds left and Kemmer broke the still-stifling Mahnomen press by finding Kent Christensen wide open under the Prowler basket for an easy two pointer with 45 seconds to go. Peterson banged in a rebound shot with five seconds left to complete the scoring.

"We felt we could bust loose sometime during the game," explained relieved Thief River Falls coach Lee Swanson after the contest. "We just happened to do the right things at the right times."

A key three point play by Kemmer in the final seconds of the first quarter enabled the Prowlers to slice a growing four point Mahnomen lead to just 14-13 at the first quarter stop, but the Indians' accurate free throw shooting expanded the margin to 23-15 with 5:45 remaining in the second quarter.

Thief River Falls battled back, though, with Kemmer and Duane Dicken hitting from the field after a pair of Mahnomen turnovers and Kemmer dumped in three successive free throws to pull the Prowlers to within 23-22 with 2:41 to go.

Mahnomen guard Roger Larson, the only senior starter on the Indian squad, pumped in a set shot from deep in the corner to push Mahnomen in front 25-22 with 2:33 remaining.

Peterson scored twice from close range and Sandahl added a fast break lay-up after Peterson had blocked a Mahnomen shot to give Thief River Falls a 28-25 lead with one minute left.

Two free throws by sparkplug Mahnomen guard Guy Strandemo after time had expired knocked the difference to just 28-27 at halftime.

Thief River Falls managed to hold onto its slim lead through a tense third quarter, building a seven point 43-36 advantage with 1:30 remaining before Mahnomen scored six points in the period's final minute to trail only 43-42 heading into the last quarter.

"We didn't play that bad," said disappointed Mahnomen coach Ray Stinar. "We didn't quit. They (TRF) could have buried us, but the kids battled back. Our kids are still young and they didn't react quite like they should have at times. We'll be tough next year, though," he promised. "We figured if we held Peterson outside we'd do alright. It worked for a while, I guess. It really hurt when Thompson went out," said Stinar in reference to starry Frank Thompson who was forced to miss most of the game because of a severe first quarter ankle sprain. "His replacement (sophomore Paul Muckenhirn) did a good job, but we missed Frank."

Thief River Falls shot an impressive 55 per cent from the field for the game as the Prowlers connected on 24 of 44 attempts. In contrast, Mahnomen struggled through a disheartening shooting night, making only 15 of 53 attempts against a strong Prowler zone for just 28 per cent. Thief River Falls made 14 of 21 free throw tries while Mahnomen cashed in on 22 of 27 gift shot opportunities to stay with the Prowlers. Thief River Falls held a 30-25 rebound edge.

Canton Skaters Rip Hibbing 8-2 For NJCAA Hockey Championship

Defending champion Canton agricultural and technical college of New York won its second straight national junior college hockey championship in the four year history of the tournament with an impressive 8-2 triumph over Minnesota state champion Hibbing in the 1974 NJCAA title game Saturday in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Terry Sykes collected the three goal hat trick to pace the strong New York school to its second national championship. Sean McCrossan added two goals to the Canton attack while single markers were credited to Bill Paradise, Paul Hargreaves and Dick Nobes.

Canton skated to a 2-0 first period lead, rolled to a 5-0 second period advantage and led 8-0 before starry Dave Herbst scored a pair of late game Hibbing goals.

Paradise, a standout Canton defenseman reportedly being watched by Philadelphia of the National Hockey League, scored the game's first goal with 3:21 elapsed. McCrossan made it 2-0 at the first period stop by scoring with just 28 seconds left in the opening stanza.

Three different Canton players scored second period goals to push the Northmen in front 5-0. Sykes scored his first goal at 5:38, Hargreaves tallied at 14:29 and Nobes scored 23 seconds later.

McCrossan made it 6-0 by scoring his second goal at 4:11 of the third period before Sykes scored twice in a 1:17 span.

Herbst, watched closely all night by Paradise and the rest of the Canton defense, finally found room to operate in the game's later stages and combined with Tim Ewals twice, at 13:26 and 15:00, to avert a Hibbing shutout.

Despite taking 10 of the game's 15 penalties, Canton kept constant pressure on Hibbing goalie Jeff Baynes, forcing the Cardinal netminder to make 42 saves. Canton's Eldon Jarvis turned aside 34 Hibbing shots.

Canton Spoils NCC Tourney Hopes 9-3

Defending national champion Canton agricultural and technical college (ATC) of New York exploded for seven second period goals Friday and coasted to a 9-3 win over host Northland in a first round game of the 1974 national junior college athletic association hockey tournament in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Although Canton kept steady pressure in the Northland end throughout the 20 minute first period, Northman freshman goalie Pete Sullivan turned in a strong performance in kicking out 16 of the 18 New York shots. Following a season long pattern, Northland coach Swede Lund employed all three Northman goalies, with sophomore Gordin Landin suffering through a nightmarish second period that saw Canton open up a gapping 9-0 lead. Sophomore Craig Carter held Canton scoreless in the final period while Northland teammates scored three face-saving goals against the coasting New York players.

Eight different Canton players scored for the well balanced Northman (too) squad with only Terry Sykes scoring twice.

"We worked hard, but we were just outmanned," noted disappointed Northland coach Swede Lund. "At times we played very well, but at other times they really got us going. We played the entire first two periods in our end till they eased up a little in the third period. They have a real good team—probably weakest in goal, but we never got a chance to test him."

Canton posted a 2-0 first period lead on a pair of deflected shots tipped in by Tom McDonald and Sykes. McDonald scored on an assist from Mike Kelly at 11:13 and Sykes made it 2-0 with help from Paul Hargreaves at 17:19.

Hargreaves began the Canton second period surge against Landin by scoring with just 49 seconds elapsed. Sean McCrossan scored 51 seconds later and Jerry Stacy scored at 2:50 to push Canton in front 5-0.

Richard Kemp, Jeff Lawrenz, Sykes and Steve Wilkins all added second period goals to the mounting Canton total.

Northland finally got on the scoreboard midway through the third period when freshman wing Jon Jensen scored on an assist from Tony Demarais at 10:17.

The homestanding Northmen added two goals in the game's final minute for a more respectable final score as sophomore center Merlin Nelson beat Canton goalie Eldon Jarvis with help from Rick Vatnsdal at 18:59 and freshman wing Rob Eisenzimmer scored on an assist from Rob Almquist with just 40 seconds remaining.

Jarvis kicked out 29 Northland shots during the game while the Northland goaltending trio combined to stop 48 Canton drives. Landin followed Sullivan's 16 save effort with 15 stops while Carter turned aside 17 Canton scoring attempts.

First Period

Scoring—Canton, McDonald assisted by Kelly, 11:13. Canton, Sykes assisted by Hargreaves, 17:19.

Saves—Northland, Sullivan 16. Canton, Jarvis 7.

Second Period

Mahnomen Takes Consolation Title

Defending champion Mahnomen bounced back from a disappointing first round loss to Thief River Falls to beat Argyle 64-59 in the consolation game of the 1974 region eight basketball tournament Saturday in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse in Grand Forks.

Mahnomen jumped out to a 19-10 first quarter lead and built a 13 point second period advantage before settling for a 34-26 halftime cushion. The scrappy Eagles battled back to within 45-44 at the end of three quarters and gained an early fourth quarter tie before falling to the taller Indians.

Roger Larson, the only senior starter used by Mahnomen, led all scorers with 22 points while teammates Paul Muckenhirn and Guy Strandemo added 13 and 11 points respectively. Glenn Stoltman led Argyle's scoring with 14 points while Ken Safranski and Ron Magnusson each added 10.

Both teams shot 42 per cent from the floor, but Mahnomen cashed in on 24 of 32 free throw opportunities while Argyle made only nine of 19 gift tosses. Mahnomen held a 35-28 rebound edge.

NORTHLAND DEFENSEMAN Kevin Thomson (13) tried unsuccessfully to shoot the puck between Canton goalie Eldon Jarvis and the goal pipe on this play during Friday's opening round game of the National junior college hockey tournament played in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Canton defenseman Paul Hargreaves (8) watched the action on the play. Canton beat Northland 9-3 and added an 8-2 triumph over Hibbing Saturday to claim its second straight NJCAA championship.

MAHNOMEN GUARD Guy Strandemo tossed this wild lay-up attempt toward the basket despite the defensive efforts of Thief River Falls' Duane Dicken during Friday's first round region eight tournament action. The Prowlers beat the Indians 62-52 to move into Saturday's championship game against Blackduck, a 68-48 winner over Argyle in Friday's nightcap.

Blackduck Rips Argyle By 68-48

A surprisingly strong Blackduck quint crushed Argyle 68-48 in Friday's second first round region eight basketball tournament game played in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse in Grand Forks.

Making their first appearance ever in the region meet, the district 29 champion Drakes utilized their pronounced height advantage to easily handle the smaller district 32 champion Eagle in the elongated turnover filled mis-match.

Blackduck's potent one-two offensive punch of 6-3 guard Tom Gilstad and 6-6 center Lee Cluff scored the first two baskets of the ball game and the Drakes were never-headed.

Back to back short base line jumpers by Argyle's Gayle Stoltman tied the game 4-4, but Blackduck's Bob Baltes and Bob Cluff responded with a pair of two pointers to give the Drakes the lead for keeps.

Gilstad's drivng lay-up with 20 seconds left gave Blackduck its biggest lead of the first quarter, 18-12, at the first period break.

The accurate shooting Drakes then slowly pulled away from the eagles who were never able to use their publicized full court press. Driving lay-ups by Dave Cross and deft ball handling Doug Lemon in the second quarter's final minute provided Blackduck with its biggest lead of the first half, 36-18, at intermission.

A combination of deadly Blackduck shooting and Argyle turnovers enabled the Drakes to pull away to a 23 point 55-32 bulge after three quarters, with Blackduck once again building its biggest lead at a quarter break.

Gilstad completed a three point play at the start of the fourth quarter to push Blackduck to its largest point spread, 58-32, before the Drakes coasted to a 20 point victory.

Blackduck's deadly shooting was reflected in the final game statistics as the Drakes checked in with an eye-catching 59 per cent field goal figure making 30 of 51 attempts. Argyle shot only 30 per cent on 19 of 61 attempts. Blackduck made eight of 18 free throw tries while Argyle sank 10 of 18 gift tosses. Blackduck held a 34-23 rebound advantage, but the Drakes also led the staggering turnover totals, 31-25.

CANTON FORWARD Richard Nobes flipped the puck past Hibbing goalie Jeff Baynes and high into the net on the play during Saturday's national junior college hockey tournament championship game in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Canton skated past Hibbing 8-2 for its second straight NJCAA title.

Hibbing Rally Notches 9-5 JUCO Win Over Henry Ford

Minnesota state champion Hibbing rallied from a 3-0 first period deficit to beat Henry Ford community college of Dearborn, Michigan 9-5 in a penalty marred opening game of the 1974 national junior college hockey tournament in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

In a match-up of high scoring centers; Hibbing's starry Dave Herbst out-gunned Henry Ford standout Tim Caldaron 4-2 to lead the Cardinals to a third straight tournament win in the sports arena dating back to the MJCAA state meet.

Caldaron scored the game's first two goals in just a 17 second span to give Henry Ford a 2-0 lead with only 6:37 elapsed. Teammate Dan Durst notched a third Hawk goal at 13:58 to give the Michigan skaters a startling three goal bulge against the favored Hibbing sextet.

Herbst copied, and even surpassed Caldaron's earlier offensive feat by scoring twice in just 11 seconds to slice the difference to only 3-2 with 5:15 remaining in the first period.

Hibbing completely dominated the game's hard hitting second period by peppering beleaguered Henry Ford goalie Bob Locher with 34 shots, scoring on four of them, to take a 6-3 lead. Herbst scored his third straight goal with just 19 seconds gone in the stanza to tie the game 3-3. Bob Myers gave Hibbing its first lead at 5:38 and Herbst scored again at 7:12. Jeff Biondi made it 6-3 at 16:33.

Henry Ford rallied in the first half of the final period to trim the margin to just 6-5 as Jerry Feistel scored at 5:40 and John Perkovich tallied at 9:18.

Hibbing maintained its composure, though, and scored the game's final three goals to win going away. Bob Erickson scored at 12:25, Myers collected his second goal at 15:30 and Erickson scored again with just 30 seconds remaining.

Although he didn't score, Hibbing's Dave Mlaker shared the game's spotlight with Herbst and Caldaron by collecting five assists.

Locher was blitzed with an astronomical 71 shots in the game, with the Michigan netminder handling 62 drives successfully. Hibbing's Jeff Baynes was tested 23 times.

A total of 27 penalties were called in the game, including 16 against Henry Ford.

Wildlife Week Chairman Named

For the second straight year, former actress and internationally-known environmentalist Shirley Temple Black will head up efforts during the annual national wildlife week this week.

Mrs. Black, a member of the board of directors of the National Wildlife federation and a U.S. delegate to the U.N. conference on the human environment held in Stockholm in 1972, has been tapped as honorary chairman for the 1974 observance of wildlife week.

While acting as a delegate to the U.N., Mrs. Black served as a U.S. representative in 13 different international assignments. Long-known as a "gentle crusader" for the environment, she has served on the NWF board of directors since last year.

Sponsored annually by the NWF and its state affiliates, the focus of 1974 wildlife week is on the plight of endangered species with the theme, "We Care About Endangered Wildlife." At present, over 100 animals are on the department of interior's official endangered species list, including the southern bald eagle, the American peregrine falcon, the whooping crane and the eastern timber wolf.

National wildlife week provides an annual opportunity to mobilize interest in conservation programs in communities and schools across the country and to lay the groundwork for continuing effort. "If all of us care enough and are willing to support public efforts to help endangered species," NWF executive vice president Tom Kimball noted, "we believe these efforts will succeed."

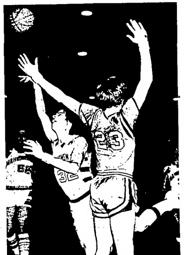
NORTHLAND DEFENSEMAN Kevin Thomson (13) tried unsuccessfully to shoot the puck between Canton goalie Eldon Jarvis and the goal pipe on this play during Friday's opening round game of the National junior college hockey tournament played in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Canton defenseman Paul Hargreaves (8) watched the action on the play. Canton beat Northland 9-3 and added an 8-2 triumph over Hibbing Saturday to claim its second straight NJCAA championship.



MAHNOMEN GUARD Guy Strandemo tossed this wild lay-up attempt toward the basket despite the defensive efforts of Thief River Falls' Duane Dicken during Friday's first round region eight tournament action. The Prowlers beat the Indians 62-52 to move into Saturday's championship game against Blackduck, a 68-48 winner over Argyle in Friday's nightcap.

Blackduck Rips Argyle By 68-48

A surprisingly strong Blackduck quint crushed Argyle 68-48 in Friday's second first round region eight basketball tournament game played in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse in Grand Forks.

Making their first appearance ever in the region meet, the district 29 champion Drakes utilized their pronounced height advantage to easily handle the smaller district 32 champion Eagle in the elongated turnover filled mis-match.

Blackduck's potent one-two offensive punch of 6-3 guard Tom Gilstad and 6-6 center Lee Cliff scored the first two baskets of the ball game and the Drakes were never headed.

Back to back short base line jumpers by Argyle's Gayle Stoltman tied the game 4-4, but Blackduck's Bob Baltes and Bob Cluff responded with a pair of two pointers to give the Drakes the lead for keeps.

Gilstad's drivng lay-up with 20 seconds left gave Blackduck its biggest lead of the first quarter, 18-12, at the first period break.

The accurate shooting Drakes then slowly pulled away from the engles who were never able to use their publicized full court press. Driving lay-ups by Dave Cross and deft ball handling Doug Lemon in the second quarter's final minute provided Blackduck with its biggest lead of the first half, 36-18, at intermission.

A combination of deadly Blackduck shooting and Argyle turnovers enabled the Drakes to pull away to a 21 point 55-32 bulge after three quarters, with Blackduck once again building its biggest lead at a quarter break.

Gilstad completed a three point play at the start of the fourth quarter to push Blackduck to its largest point spread, 58-32, before the Drakes coasted to a 20 point victory.

Blackduck's deadly shooting was reflected in the final game statistics as the Drakes checked in with an eye-catching 59 per cent field goal figure making 30 of 51 attempts. Argyle shot only 30 per cent on 19 of 61 attempts. Blackduck made eight of 18 free throw tries while Argyle sank 10 of 18 gift tosses. Blackduck held a 34-23 rebound advantage, but the Drakes also led the staggering turnover totals, 31-25.

CANTON FORWARD Richard Nobes flipped the puck past Hibbing goalie Jeff Baynes and high into the net on the play during Saturday's national junior college hockey tournament championship game in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Canton skated past Hibbing 8-2 for its second straight NJCAA title.

Hibbing Rally Notches 9-5 JUCO Win Over Henry Ford

Minnesota state champion Hibbing rallied from a 3-0 first period deficit to beat Henry Ford community college of Dearborn, Michigan 9-5 in a penalty marred opening game of the 1974 national junior college hockey tournament in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

In a match-up of high scoring centers, Hibbing's starry Dave Herbst out-gunned Henry Ford standout Tim Caldaron 4-2 to lead the Cardinals to a third straight tournament win in the sports arena dating back to the MJCAA state meet.

Caldaron scored the game's first two goals in just a 17 second span to give Henry Ford a 2-0 lead with only 6:37 elapsed. Teammate Dan Durst notched a third Hawk goal at 13:58 to give the Michigan skaters a startling three goal bulge against the favored Hibbing sextet.

Herbst copied, and even surpassed Caldaron's earlier offensive feat by scoring twice in just 11 seconds to slice the difference to only 3-2 with 5:15 remaining in the first period.

Hibbing completely dominated the game's hard hitting second period by peppering beleaguered Henry Ford goalie Bob Locher with 34 shots, scoring on four of them, to take a 6-3 lead. Herbst scored his third straight goal with just 19 seconds gone in the stanza to tie the game 3-3. Bob Myers gave Hibbing its first lead at 5:38 and Herbst scored again at 7:12. Jeff Biondi made it 6-3 at 16:33.

Henry Ford rallied in the first half of the final period to trim the margin to just 6-5 as Jerry Feistel scored at 5:40 and John Perkovich tallied at 9:18.

Hibbing maintained its composure, though, and scored the game's final three goals to win going away. Bob Erickson scored at 12:25, Myers collected his second goal at 15:30 and Erickson scored again with just 30 seconds remaining.

Although he didn't score, Hibbing's Dave Mlaker shared the game's spotlight with Herbst and Caldaron by collecting five assists.

Locher was blitzed with an astronomical 71 shots in the game, with the Michigan netminder handling 62 drives successfully. Hibbing's Jeff Baynes was tested 23 times.

Wildlife Week Chairman Named

For the second straight year, former actress and internationally-known environmentalist Shirley Temple Black will head up efforts during the annual national wildlife week this week.

Mrs. Black, a member of the board of directors of the National Wildlife federation and a U.S. delegate to the U.N. conference on the human environment held in Stockholm in 1972, has been tapped as honorary chairman for the 1974 observance of wildlife week.

While acting as a delegate to the U.N., Mrs. Black served as a U.S. representative in 13 different international assignments. Long-known as a "gentle crusader" for the environment, she has served on the NWF board of directors since last year.

Sponsored annually by the NWF and its state affiliates, the focus of 1974 wildlife week is on the plight of endangered species with the theme, "We Care About Endangered Wildlife." At present, over 100 animals are on the department of interior's official endangered species list, including the southern bald eagle, the American peregrine falcon, the whooping crane and the eastern timber wolf.

National wildlife week provides an annual opportunity to mobilize interest in conservation programs in communities and schools across the country and to lay the groundwork for continuing effort. "If all of us care enough and are willing to support public efforts to help endangered species," NWF executive vice president Tom Kimball noted, "we believe these efforts will succeed."

Participation In Food Program Is Up In January

U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) recently reported preliminary estimates on the operation of the federal-state food assistance programs in the month of January 1974.

A total of 15 million people is estimated to have taken part in January in the two family food programs—the food stamp and food distribution programs. This is an increase of 400,000 over the preceding month, and it equals the number of people taking part in these programs in the same month last year.

Of the total, participation in the food stamp program increased to a new peak of 13 million persons. This is a gain of 400,000 persons over the previous month, and of 600,000 over the same month a year ago, as counties continued to switch from food distribution to food stamps under the mandate of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973.

The number of persons taking part in the food distribution program in January held at 2 million, despite the switch-over of 48 projects from food distribution to food stamps. But the 2 million participation is down 600,000 from the same month last year.

A total of 24.9 million children took part in the national school lunch program in December. This is the same number as in the preceding month, but participation has swung upward to pass last year's level; the month's total is estimated to be 100,000 over January 1973.

AVTI In EGF Offers Classes To Begin April 8

Russell H. Beier, director of the East Grand Forks area vocational-technical institute, announced that a nursing assistant and orderly class will be offered starting April 8.

The seven-week program was developed in cooperation with regional hospitals, the UND medical center rehabilitation hospital, area nursing centers and is endorsed by the Agassiz health planning council. Students have five weeks of classroom instruction and receive two weeks of supervised clinical experience in a hospital or nursing home.

Completion of the program qualifies persons for part-time and full-time employment as nursing assistants, geriatric aides and orderlies in hospitals and nursing homes.

Persons desiring to enter the program should apply early as applicants are accepted on a first to-apply basis—conditional on meeting entrance requirements.

Applications and further information can be obtained by writing or calling the East Grand Forks AVTI, East Grand Forks, Minnesota; (218) 773-9672.

Weekly HEALTH TIP

Hardening of the arteries is the result of higher living, says Dr. John Houston, Dir. of Cardiology, Milwaukee City Hospital. Other civilizations are less susceptible to the disease because they burn up more energy thru exercise and physical work. Dr. Houston blamed animal fats, smoking and alcohol along with lack of proper exercise. The natural effect of cigarette nicotine is to contract the arteries. Alcohol increases the appetite, encouraging overeating, a direct cause of cardio-vascular diseases, he said.

Roemer Reminds Senior Citizens Of Tax Credits

"In 1973, Minnesota took the notable step of ensuring that our senior citizens need not fear the burden of rising property taxes on their homes," states Arthur C. Roemer, commissioner of revenue for Minnesota.

The senior citizen's property tax freeze provides a rebate by the state of any increase in property taxes over the "base year" tax. The base year is 1973 for persons who have reached age 65 on or before May 31, 1974.

The 1973 legislature also increased the benefits of the senior citizen's income tax credit and rised the income limit to $6,000. The credit provides a refund of a portion of the property taxes paid, with the amount depending on income level. Both homeowners and renters are eligible for this refund.

"If you are eligible for the senior citizen's property tax freeze and the senior citizen's income tax credit, or for either, file your application soon—in time to use your refund to make your first property tax payment," Roemer suggests.

Application for either or both credits is made on the same form, M—ISC, which can be obtained along with state income tax forms from the state revenue department, county treasurer or at most banks and post offices.

"The credits apply to property taxes payable this year," Roemer added "If you file early, you should get your refund of the full year's credit before you make the May 31 tax payment."

Corporations In Farming Must File With State

Corporations engaged in farming operations in Minnesota were reminded recently by agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald of the April 15 deadline for state registrations required by the family farm act of 1973.

"Only 193 corporations had registered by March 5. This figure represents less than one third of the more than 600 farming corporations that filed under the old law last year," commissioner Wefald reported.

Failure to file a required report, or the willful filing of false information, are treated in the law as gross misdemeanor violations, he warned.

The registration is the first under the new law intended to restrict new and existing non-family corporate ownership or control of farming operations in Minnesota, as a legal tool to preserve family farming enterprise.

Minnesota's new Family Farm Act assigned the registration responsibilities to the commissioner of agriculture and designated the attorney general as the enforcement agency. The earlier law required only a registration and contained no restrictions.

Commissioner Wefald said the new registration and April 15 deadline apply to all corporations engaged in any type of farming operation, owned, leased, or contracted, including family, non-family, domestic, foreign, public, private and non-profit corporations.

Registration forms were previously mailed to all prior registrants. Forms are available on request by mail from the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, 420 State Office Building, St. Paul, Mn. 55155.

Johnson Co. Named Dealer In Farm Buildings

The new building line offers roof and wall panels in either galvanized or pre-coated, baked on, warranted finishes in a variety of colors. Models range from 6x6 feet to 60 feet wide in unlimited length.

Although some of the buildings can be erected by the purchaser, Johnson will also offer full construction service.

UMC Will Hold American Indian Week April 1-5

Plans for American Indian week 1974 are in the final stages, with the week's events to be held April 1 through 5.

The program is sponsored by the University of Minnesota technical college, Crookston (UMC), and is supported in part by the Minnesota Humanities Commission, an agency of the National Endowment for the Humanities. The Commission has awarded a grant for $1,825 to UMC for Indian Week seminars.

The purpose of American Indian week 74 is to bring together Indian leaders, Indian and non-Indian academic humanists, and the adult population of the area to discuss significant issues that affect Indians in northwest Minnesota.

The four basic issues to be discussed include political self-determination, economic determination, the treatment of Indian history and culture in contemporary education, and socialization problems of Indians in a non-Indian society. The discussions will be supplemented by the motion picute "Little Big Man", demonstrations by local Indian artists, and performances by Indian singers and dancers.

Sessions will be held at various locations in Crookston, and several city service clubs, as well as the Crookston public schools, have agreed to help promote the week's events.

Midwest Breeder Co-op Reports Record Sales

General manager K.E. Wallin reports 891,046 units of cattle breeding sales were utilized by over 43,800 farmers and ranchers.

For the first time in history, sales volume topped the $6 million mark at $6.1 million, and working capital increased by $362,500. Net savings, totalling $397,063, set at an all-time record high. Wallin cited a favorable earning rate of 6.5 per cent of sales and a 20 per cent return on member equity.

With production facilities at Shawano, Wis. and Stewartville, Minn., the organization employs 220 sales and service technicians and 160 distributors to carry out the various service functions.

Garden Industry To Have Record Sales In 1974

Garden supply retailers will ring up record sales this year, Emmet J. Hoffman, a Minneapolis magazine editor, said Thursday at the University of Minnesota's garden store operators short course.

Hoffman, editor of "Home and Garden Supply Merchandiser," spoke at the student center on the St. Paul campus.

Although he did not predict total industry volume for '74, he said garden stores and garden departments will average about $265,000 each in gross sales for the year. Average individual grosses for 1972 were $200,000.

Seed sales should pattern last year's experience, which was a "sell-out". One seedman reports that lawn seed supplies are short and available supplies are going up rapidly in price, Hoffman said. Some seed varieties will double in price from last year. Particularly in large demand are vegetable seeds with an even greater number of homemakers planning to plant vegetables as food prices continue to climb.

The nursery stock situation is both good and bad—good because many species will sell out during the year and bad because 85 per cent of the growers say the supply is not adequate. Substitutions and missed sales will result, he added.

"A year without precedent" is the industry prediction for pesticide sales, Hoffman reported. Spot shortages may occur, but the supply generally is adequate.

A positive side to gasoline shortages and high gasoline prices is that families will curtail leisure driving and do more gardening. Neighborhood garden stores should benefit, since most garden store customers come from a five-mile radius, Hoffman said.

Garden store operators gathered at the University campus for the day-long educatonal program. Besides hearing from Hoffman, they received information on requirements for living plants, selecting plants for shade, handling shrubs and trees in the garden center and consumer concerns.

Roseau Receives EDA Grant For Library-Museum

Approval of a $326,400 grant to help create immediate construction jobs for unemployed workers in Roseau county, was announced recently by William W. Blunt Jr., assistant secretary of commerce for economic development.

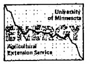
The village of Roseau applied for the grant from the economic development administration, U.S. department of commerce.

Funds will be used to help construct a steel reinforced concrete block library and museum. The 120x110-foot building will be located adjacent to the village municipal building.

EDA approved the grant under an amendment to the public works and economic development act authorizing funds for needed public works projects in areas of high unemployment.

It is anticipated that 23 workers from the ranks of the unemployed will be hired for the project. Work is expected to get under way within 90 days and be completed in a year.

Village of Roseau will add $81,600 in other funds to complete the $408,000 total project cost.



Gasoline prices at the pump have perplexed American consumers. Following a history of "gas price wars" and ready availability of gasoline at almost every street corner, we find prices climbing, service stations closing and gasoline often not available when we want it.

Our nation is moving from a period of abundant low-cost energy to an era of high prices and scarcity. The steady climb in gasoline prices is dramatized by the fact that it has taken place in such a short time—about six months. Consumers lived with relatively low gasoline prices when the prices should probably have been higher.

University of Minnesota agricultural economist Lee Martin says the market had failed to reflect what the future would bring in the way of gasoline scarcity. In fact, the market has given Americans very low petroleum prices and now we have to pay the price for the fact that our market system and government policies led us astray.

Controls on gasoline prices in recent times have had the effect of keeping the prices relatively low and not generally discouraging gasoline consumption. The price controls made it more profitable for oil companies to make more gasoline and less fuel oil for home heating, Martin adds. Turning down thermostats and a relatively mild winter to date has helped us avoid a crisis due to fuel oil shortages.

"This country has been subsidizing oil since we have had the oil depletion allowance," the economist says. The depletion allowance, actually a tax subsidy for petroleum, oil and natural gas industries, makes oil cheaper and results in more oil consumption. The purpose of the oil depletion allowance, according to the enabling legislation, is to encourage exploration of natural resource that are exhausted upon recovery by allowing owners of oil reserves to make deductions from their income tax for depletion.

Another way in which we subsidize oil is the way that oil companies are taxed. The federal income tax law allows corporations to deduct from their taxes what they pay to other jurisdictions as taxes. This has been interpreted by the Internal Revenue Service to mean that oil companies can deduct directly from their corporate income taxes almost all payments to foreign nations for oil. This provision enables the multinational oil companies to reduce their tax liabilities to the U.S. government almost to nothing, Martin adds. This tax saving makes gasoline chaper for United States consumers as well as Western European consumers, who get much of their gasoline from affiliates of American oil firms. Nearly 90 per cent of the oil U.S. Multinational oil companies produce is sold outside the U.S.

Robertson Has Increase In Net Earnings

Robertson Companies, Inc., announce record net earnings in 1973 of $301,087 or 46 cents per share. This represents an increase in net earnings of 70 per cent over 1972 earnings of $178,338 or 27 cents per share, according to Hugh S. Robertson, president.

Revenue increased approximately eight per cent to $14,237,235 for 1973 as compared to $13,149,023 in 1972.

Robertson Companies, Inc. (formerly Robertson Lumber company) has been operating since the late 1800's and operates 35 lumber yards in Minnesota and North Dakota. Robertson Comapnies, Inc. is publicly owned and its stock is traded on the local over the counter market.

Officials of the company indicated the increase in 1973 earnings is primarily attributed to the implementing of operating efficiencies during 1973 and the elimination of unprofitable opeations in late 1972 including the discontinuance of construction of factory built homes and the sale of its Redi-mix operations, which resulted in improved gross margins without any relative increase in operating expenses during 1973.

Arctic Workers Reject Proposal On Contract Work

Union employees of Arctic Enterprises, Inc., have rejected a company offer to provide a limited amount of sub-contract employment at the Arctic plant here at a reduced hourly wage. Union members voted to reject the offer by a substantial margin at a meeting held Thursday, local officials for the union said.

Arctic management had offered employment to approximately 80 employees for about seven weeks (union spokesman time estimate) for construction of 1,000 gravity grain boxes. Wage offer was 80 cents per hour below the contract wage which the union has with the company.

Wayne Bjornrud, business agent for the International Woodworkers of America local 4-348, said the proposal was made to the union as bargaining agent for the employees. He noted that the relatively short duration of manufacture was a main consideration by the employees in rejecting the offer. Union contract does not restrict employees to manufacture of snowmobiles, he said, but does control the wages paid for manufacturing done in the local plant.

In response to a Times inquiry for further information, Lowell Swenson, chairman of the board of Arctic Enterprises, issued the following statement this morning:

"We are concerned over the outcome of the union meeting where our employees turned down an opportunity to return to work on a voluntary basis. The work that we had proposed for our Thief River Falls operation was sub-contract work from the farm implement industry.

"Because of our distant location, this sub-contract work would be unprofitable in Thief River Falls under present hourly rates. In case our employees did not fully understand the basis of our proposal, we would reconsider our decision to do this work and other similar sub-contract work outside of Thief River Falls if notifed within the next few days."

Swenson said the average hourly rate the company proposed would be approximately $3.40 per hour plus the same fringe benefits that apply to the regular union contract.

City To Receive $78,581 As Share Of Street Funds

Thief River Falls is one of 94 Minnesota communities sharing the 1974 municipal state aid street fund of $21,728,373 and will receive $78,581 as its share of the total.

The fund, a part of the state highway user fund, gets nine per cent of the receipts from state taxes on motor fuel and motor vehicle registrations. The money is allotted according to formula among municipalities with a population of 5,000 or more.

Leading the list of recipients is Minneapolis, eligible for $3,912,508, followed by St. Paul with $3,007,348, Duluth with $1,250,131, Bloomington with $686,367, St. Cloud with $527,902, Edina with $466,682 and Rochester with $419,737. Smallest amount is $35,211 to Falcon Heights.

While dollar allotments to the municipalities increased 16 per cent since last year, the highway construction costs index rose from 144.4 in the fourth quarter of 1972 to 167.8 in the fourth quarter of 1973. The index is a national average using the base year of 1967 as 100.

In northwestern Minnesota Bemidji is scheduled to receive $110,597; Crookston $111,282; Detroit Lakes, $59,481; and East Grand Forks, $78,298.

Curtis Johnson and Leonard Skaar were reelected to three-year terms on the board of directors. Officers include Si Hanson, president; Kermit Finstad, vice president; and Harry Solberg, secretary-treasurer, with Roy Nelson and Kermit Maidment also serving as directors.

CHECKS TO HELP the Falls Day activity center purchase the building and property which it has been leasing for the past two years were presented Tuesday to Evan Armstrong, director of the center for retarded citizens. Mrs. Andrew Lehrer (left) and Mrs. Jon Larson, general chairman and ticket sales chairman for the Mrs. Jaycees charity ball, presented a check to Armstrong for $1,625.01 as proceeds from that event. Adolph Oseid, who headed the business area canvass for the United Way, awarded a special United Way appropriation of $7,000. Funds from the Mrs. Jaycees and United Way will permit the day activity center board to make a down payment on the $35,000 purchase.

Day Activity Center Purchases Property

As a result of contributions from the Thief River Falls United Way and the local Mrs. Jaycees charity ball, Falls day activity center for the retarded has purchased its building and adjoining property, according to Evan Armstrong, director. Purchase agreement will be effective April 1 when the contract for deed replaces the prior lease agreement.

Special allocation of $7,000 from the Thief River Falls United Way and proceeds of $1,625.01 from the Mrs. Jaycees charity ball enabled the day activity center board to make an $8,000 down payment on the $35,000 purchase. Financing for the remaining amount over a 10-year purchase period will cost the activity center only a few dollars per month more than the previous rent figure, Armstrong said.

Purchase of the property was made from Bro-Mac, Inc., which purchased the building and land several years ago from Tunberg Motor company. Bro-Mac remodeled the building specifically for the day activity center. Property includes 100 feet of frontage on Main avenue in the 1200 block.

Currently the activity center serves 21 retarded people age 16 and older, primarily trainable mentally retarded, Armstrong said. It is open from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday with participants engaged in activities from approximately 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Total budget requested for the 1974-75 fiscal year beginning July 1 is $44,188. Three assistants are employed on a daily basis in addition to the director. The center is supported by community, county and state funds.

The activity center is governed by an 11-member board. Wallace Sparby serves as chairman with George Gilbert, vice chairman; Mrs. Judy Dimich, secretary; and David Strong, treasurer. Other board members are John Peterson, Alta Larson, Mrs. James Nepper, Rev. Jonathan Law, Larry McDowell, and Art Heinze. There is presently one vacancy to be filled on the board.

Barbara Malwitz And Donovan Culkins Wed

Four pair of candelabras trimmed with purple and white flowers, and purple ribbons, graced the chancel at the St. Vincent de Paul Catholic church at Plummer for the wedding of Miss Barbara Jean Malwitz and Donovan Raymond Culkins.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Malwitz of Plummer. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Culkins, also of Plummer.

Rev. Larry Wieseler officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was Betty Hegge, who played "Theme from Love Story" for the processional and "Romeo and Juliet," as the bride was escorted to the altar by her father. Lynn Arntson sang "Wedding Song" and "Morning After." Both are friends of the bride.

For her wedding, the bride selected a floor-length gown of white satin with an overlay of lace. Styled in empire fashion, the gown was designed with satin Camelot sleeves featuring a lace cap. White satin buttons graced the front of the bodice and satin ribbon marked the waistline. Matching lace edged her chapel-length veil held by a Juliet headpiece. She carried three long-stemmed white roses accented with six long stemmed white roses tipped with purple.

Miss Lynn Arntson of Moorhead was the bride's personal attendant.

Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. Bonnie Wichterman of Red Lake Falls, cousin of the bride. Bridesmatron was Mrs. DeLyne Waldal of Plummer, a friend of the couple. They were attired in identical floor-length gowns of crushed velvet in deep purple, featuring short pleated sleeves. White daisy appliques graced the front of the gown and tipped the purple velvet ribbons that they wore in their hair. Each carried three long-stemmed white carnations, tipped with purple and tied with white ribbon. To accent their attire, they wore white wrist-length gloves, and white shoes. Their pearl necklaces were gifts from the bride.

Flower girl and ring bearer were Kristi and Daniel Wichterman, children of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Wichterman of Red Lake Falls. The flower girl was attired in a deep purple crushed velvet gown styled like those worn by the bride's attendants. The ring bearer wore purple crushed velvet bell-bottom trousers and vest, white long-sleeve shirt and a purple velvet bow tie.

Richard Culkins of Plummer attended his brother as best man. Groomsman was Mitch Norby of Plummer, a friend of the couple. The groom and his attendants wore black tuxedos with velvet trim, lavender shirts with black trimmed ruffles and white carnations boutonnieres, tipped with purple.

Serving as usherettes and acolytes were Doreen and Janice Culkins, sisters of the groom. Their identical floor-length gowns of green velvet featured gold trim on the cuffs, at the empire waistline and around the neckline.

The mother of the bride wore a floor-length gown featuring a black long-sleeve bodice with a V-neckline. Her skirt was a multicolored floral print. The mother of the groom wore a blue and white plaid floor-length skirt, topped by a matching vest with white long sleeves and collar. Both wore identical corsages of yellow roses.

Special guests at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Emil Malwitz, grandparents of the bride, and Mrs. Sadie Sorenson, grandmother of the groom.

- 1 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese

For pancakes, heat griddle to hot (400°F.). Place pancake mix, milk, egg and melted or liquid shortening in bowl. Stir until batter is fairly smooth. Pour batter onto hot, lightly greased griddle. Sprinkle bologna pieces over eight pancakes. Sprinkle tablespoonful corn or olives over each remaining pancake. Serve immediately with Curried Cheese Sauce (see below).

For sauce, combine butter, flour, curry powder and salt; mix well. Gradually stir in milk. Cook, stirring constantly over medium heat until thickened. Add cheese; reduce heat to low and cook, stirring constantly until cheese is melted.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—About six months ago, the Veterans Administration issued me a Service-Disabled Veterans Insurance (RH) policy. Does this policy pay dividends?
A—No. Dividends are payable only on National Service Life Insurance and U.S. Government Life Insurance policies with "V" or "K" prefixed policy numbers.

Q—As a World War I veteran drawing compensation from the Veterans Administration for a service-connected disability, am I eligible for a $2,800 automobile allowance?
A—No. This benefit is restricted by law to eligible veterans of World War II, Korean Conflict, Post-Korean period, Vietnam-era and servicemen currently on active duty.

Q—Do persons 72 years old or more who draw pensions from the Veterans Administration have to file annual income questionnaires?
A—No. But while a recent law excludes these pensioners who have been on the rolls during two consecutive years from filing questionnaires, they still must report changes in income.

Q—I took out a Service Disabled Veterans Insurance (RH) life insurance policy following discharge after service in Vietnam. Does the Veterans Administration pay dividens on this type of policy?
A—RH is not a participating policy because the extra-risk costs are paid by the government.

Mobile Health Unit To Offer Feeding Program

Mobile health unit of the Minnesota department of health is one of three health agencies in the state to receive grants for supplemental feeding programs. The special supplemental food program for women, infants, and children (WIC) is designed to provide pregnant and lactating women and children under four years of age with nutritious foods. The Minneapolis health department and the St. Paul division of public health will also have WIC programs.

The program, to be carried out by local health agencies under Public Law 92-433, will help the United States department of agriculture identify the benefits of food in combating physical and mental deamages that might affect nutritionally at risk infants and children.

The mobile health unit WIC program will initially be limited to infants and children under four. They will be eligible for WIC if they attend a mobile health clinic.

The unit serves Marshall, Beltrami, Clearwater, Cass, Itasca, Koochiching and St. Louis counties. Anyone living in these counties is eligible for clinic services. Clinics are located in Walker, Squaw Lake, Grygla, Federal Dam, Tower, Buyck, Orr, Waskish, Bear River, Linden Grove and Nett Lake. For dates and hours of clinic services, contact the Minnesota department of health district office in Bemidji (218-755-2983).

Mothers of WIC participants will be issued vouchers to enable them to purchase fruit juices and fortified formulas and cereals for infants and extra milk products, fortified cereals, fruit and vegetable juices and eggs for children under four.

The expected starting date of the WIC program is March 1.

Health Proposal Promoted By Sen. Humphrey

Most serious need in promoting quality health care for mothers and children in America today is the early identification of health problems and their immediate treatment, reports Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

"To assure that such care is received," he said, "I have introduced legislation to establish a national program of health care for all infants, children and pregnant women, without regard to their place of residence or family income.

"My bill, which would make early medical examination, diagnosis, screening and immediate treatment readily accessible to them, provides for:

"Establishment of mobile health care facilities, with adequate staff, in physician shortage counties across the nation;

"Increased use of pediactric nurse practictioners;

"Comprehensive health care and services for prematurely born and full-term infants who have defects or conditons which are life-threatening or handicapping;

Comprehensive health care and services to all children under six years of age whose health is threatened or has been impaired by a major trauma, a life threatening illness or an illness of catastrophic nature; and

"State plans to provide comprehensive maternity and infant care for low-income families."

Medical examinations by the mobile health care team are to be free to all children and expectant mothers. The costs of further treatment for lower income families are to be covered under appropriate public health programs, the senator said.

Examinations by the mobile health care team must include diagnosis of child abuse and neglect, nutritional deficiencies, dental problems, emotional problems, visual and hearing defects, mental retardation and learning disorders, crippling and handicapping conditions and catastrophic illness.

When these conditions are screened, the child must receive immediate treatment by the mobile health care team and be referred to the nearest major facility which provides health care on an inpatient or outpatient basis.

This referral must be followed up by a team assistant to assure that the further required treatment actually was received.

Former Pastor Here To Head Project For Aged

Rev. G.S. Thompson

Rev. Gjermund S. Thompson, former pastor of Trinity Lutheran church in Thief River Falls, has been named project coordinator for an 18-month project designed to provide models for serving the nation's aging who continue to live in their own homes.

Scheduled to begin April 15, the project is funded by a $200,000 grant from Lutheran Brotherhood insurance company and is known as "Life Enrichment for the Elderly".

In Minnesota the coordinating agency will be Lutheran social service and the project will be conducted in communities ranging in size from 10,000 to 12,000 people. In the three other project states the size of communities will be larger or smaller.

Lutheran social service will select four communities in Minnesota as sites for demonstration programs, which will vary according to the local needs of the aging population, Rev. Thompson said. Volunteers will be recruited and trained from local Lutheran congregations and the aging themselves will be involved in the programs as much as possible.

Project planners have been urged to avoid duplicating existing programs and to tie-in with public programs where possible. Ultimate objective is to produce "innovative, feasible and not-too-costly" models of services to the aging which can be used in future planning of the churches.

Rev. Thompson retired in 1971 after serving four years as executive secretary of the division of welfare services for the Lutheran council in the U.S.A. For four years prior to that he was executive secretary of the division of welfare of the National Lutheran council.

If the Shoe Fits...
How long should a leather sole last?
The perplexing aspect of the life of sole leather is that adults' shoes last six months, a year, or more while children who are sitting in school much of the day can go through a good leather sole in four weeks.
Recent studies show that sole leather does not wear out - it washes away. When leather gets wet, the oils that lubricate and hold the fibres together ooze out of the leather. Lacking the oils, the leather shreds and quickly scuffs off.
A silicone chemical solution is available to render shoe leather more water repellent and is reputed to increase the life of leather soles up to 30%.

Next In Cancer Study Meetings Starts Monday

If a woman wants to know what's new in the fight against breast cancer, she may be in for some long names: Mammography, xeroradiography, thermography. The first two are X-ray techniques — mammograms are developed on film, xeroradiograms on paper. Thermography is a heat image picture of the breast that can be "read" to reveal possible cancer.

Classes covering breast and uterine cancer will be held Monday at the school in St. Hilaire, Tuesday at the Lincoln high school cafeteria in Thief River Falls and Wednesday, March 27, at the school in Goodridge. Classes begin at 8 p.m. and everyone is invited to attend. Sponsored by the Pennington unit, ACS, the classes are free of charge.

According to the American Cancer Society, Minnesota division, none of the above methods is perfect by itself. But when you use them in combination with a medical history and careful clinical examination by a trained professional, there's an opportunity to spot breast cancer in its earliest possible state—before the appearance of a detectable lump.

Right now the ACS and the national cancer institute are sponsoring 20 breast cancer detection demonstration projects across the country to serve at least 100,000 women a year and to learn how to deliver these new examinations to great numbers of women. The examinations are given free of charge to women 35 years of age or older.

"There is tremendous excitement about these projects, because we know that the way of lowering the breast cancer death rate is early diagnosis and treatment," states Raymond Ptacek, Pennington county society president.

This April the ACS is conducting its annual fund-raising and educational crusade under the slogan, "We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime". The breast cancer projects are one way.

"Breast cancer is a national problem—in the next 10 years more women will develop the disease than there are people in the city of Boston! Happily, thousands of women are saved from breast cancer each year. But we just aren't doing well enough. Most women discover breast tumors by themselves and that is why we want every women in this community to make monthly breast self examination a habit," Ptacek said.

This simple, quick technique begins in the shower or bath, when the skin is slippery and it is easy to feel an unusual lump or thickening in the breast. The ACS office here has a leaflet of instruction free for the asking.

"But, does a breast lump mean cancer? Absolutely not! The overwhelming majority of such conditions indicate something perfectly harmless—but only a physician can make such a diagnosis. It's up to each woman to have herself checked promptly," the president said.

"Yet, many women delay because of hidden fears. We tell women, don't be afraid, it's what you don't know about cancer that can hurt you. By doing breast self examination regularly and seeing a physician if you notice anything unusual, you offer yourself the chance for peace of mind if nothing is wrong and of life if cancer should be present."

Legislators To Be Given Tests For Glaucoma

Upon nearing the end of the 1974 legislative session, Minnesota's bone-weary legislators will be given a chance to recline and relax while having their eyes tested for glaucoma.

Governor Wendell Anderson will be first to have his eyes tested followed by each legislator and constitutional officer wishing to take advantage of the free screening service sponsored by the Minnesota society for the prevention of blindness (MSPB), the committee on ophthalmology of the Minnesota state medical association, the Minnesota state services for the blind, and St. Paul-Ramsey hospital.

About two per cent of the U.S. population over age 35 has some form of glaucoma and in Minnesota it is estimated there are over 30,000 undetected glaucoma cases. Glaucoma causes one out of every eight blindnesses.

Glaucoma is a condition where elevated pressure in the eye results in the gradual loss of sight and possibly blindness if not discovered early and treated properly. With glaucoma, sight fails so slowly that its victim may not notice a difference in his vision until after damage is done. Then a physician can arrest glaucoma but lost sight cannot be restored.

During the screening the ophthalmologist will measure the legislators eyeball pressure from outside the eye. The test is quick, painless and simple. Diagnosis of glaucoma, however, is much more complicated. The screening is not intended to replace a complete eye examination but it can detect a tension in the eyeball which requires further examination and evaluation.

Besides screening the legislators, the MSPB offers its screening service to businesses and communities upon request.

Activity Center Buys Property From Bro-Mac

Armstrong noted that the day activity center also has an active supporting parent organization.

Falls day activity center traces its origin to 1962 when it was organized with financial support of the Pennington-Red Lake association for retarded citizens and direction by Mrs. Melvin Grinde and Mrs. Kron. The latter worked one year with the retarded while Mrs. Grinde, assisted by Mrs. Betsy Molden and Mrs. Donald Olson, continued for some time.

The center was located at the old Redeemer Lutheran church at the corner of LaBree avenue and Fifth street. It has since been torn down.

Next move for the center was to the Community Methodist church under the directorship of Mrs. Orin Green. Then the center moved to Trinity Lutheran church where Mrs. Nancy Fellman served as director, and she was succeeded by Mrs. Karen Dablow. When the center was moved to St. John Lutheran church the director was Lon Miller, and he served until 1971 when Armstrong became director. After another year in St. John church, the day activity center was moved to its present location.

"Throughout my association with the day activity center I have greatly appreciated community support of the center and willingness to be of assistance to the retarded," Armstrong said. "This latest act by the United Way, in which all contributors may feel they had a part, and the Mrs. Jaycees assures us of a place to continue our program. The board and myself and the people who use the center are most grateful for this generosity to us."

At the age of 17 years, she moved to Warren. In 1914, she moved to Fergus Falls and in 1932 to Willmar, where she resided until entering the nursing home at Walker.

Three From TRF Attend Delegate Assembly of MEA

Three School District 564 educators from Thief River Falls are among more than 600 education leaders from throughout the state who will gather March 28-30 for the 51st annual delegate assembly of the Minnesota Education association.

The three are Mrs. Clarice Gallher, mathematics instructor, Franklin middle school; Frank Womack, fifth grade teacher, Washington elementary school; and Robert Reeve, TRF Education association president and AVTI counselor.

The record-setting 559 delegates—representing most of the MEA's nearly 500 affiliated locals along with other affiliated and associated organizations as well as its student program—will participate in something new, an open hearing on vital issues of concern to teachers. During the hearing, delegates will have the opportunity to express their concerns and acquire information about legislation, negotiations, instruction and curriculum, other professional matters and internal affairs.

In addition, delegates will elect a treasurer and a National Education association director, nominate candidates for MEA president-elect and deal with scores of resolutions covering welfare of youth, utilization of professional resources, financial support for education professional standards, economic welfare of teachers, personnel policies and agencies affecting education.

Resolutions adopted and other actions taken provide overall policy for the MEA. As the MEA's determiner of policy, the assembly directs action of the board of directors. Program and policies are implemented by the officers, some 50 professional staff members, and scores of councils, commissions, committees, task forces, subject matter sections and other voluntary groups.

14.7 Million In U.S. Received Food Assistance

U. S. department of agriculture (USDA) has reported preliminary estimates on the operation of the federal-state food assistance programs in the month of December, 1973.

A total of 14.7 million people is estimated to have taken part in December in the two family food programs—the food stamp and food distribution programs. This is an increase of 200,000 from the preceding month, and of 400,000 over the same month a year ago, as counties continued to switch from the food distribution program to use of the food stamp program. The value of bonus food stamps issued to participants totaled $193 million in December, an increase of $3 million over the preceding month, and of $16 million over the same month a year ago.

The number of perons taking part in the food distribution program in December held at 2 million despite the drop of 10 projects from the program. This figure is down 600,000 from the same month a year ago.

A total of 24.7 million children took part in the national school lunch program in December, according to the preliminary estimates. This is 300,000 over last month, but it is 400,000 less than in December a year ago.

Of these 24.7 million, 9.1 million children received their meals free or at reduced prices—an increase of 100,000 over the previous month and the highest figure for 1973. It is an increase of 600,000 over December of last year.

It Pays To Shop At Home

Both Nutrition And Weight Loss Are Possible

Good nutrition need not be sacrificed in order to control weight or save money.

That reminder is offered by Jan Schonwetter, founder and director of Weight Watchers of the Upper Midwest, as National Nutrition Week got underway March 3.

Mrs. Schonwetter joined the American Dietetic Associaton, sponsor of Nutrition Week, in urging sensible eating habits, including eating breakfast each day.

"Many people who need to lose weight skip breakfast in order to reduce the amount they eat. But that merely deprives the body of fuel it needs during the early hours of the day. And surprisingly it can also make a person more hungry during the evening hours, which leads to nibbling and defeats the original purpose," Mrs. Schonwetter said.

Fad diets are another popular means of weight control. Mrs. Schonwetter warned that these can be very dangerous since they do not provide the body with the proper nutrients.

"The safest, sanest way to permanent weight control is to re-educate our eating habits and to have a balanced diet each day. That means using foods from the basic four food groups in three sensible meals," Mrs. Schonwetter said.

The basic four are (1) cereals, breads and pasta; (2) meat, fish and poultry; (3) eggs, milk and cheese; and (4) fruit and vegetables.

These foods can be combined nutritionally and economically to control weight. Mrs. Schonwetter said buying in season and taking advantage of store specials can help economize without sacrificing needed nutrients. She offered some examples of lower cost yet nutritional substitutions: powdered skim milk for regular skim milk; soybeans, lentils and other beans for meats; canned fruit juices for fresh fruits.

Labor Dept. To Seek Roll Bars On Farm Tractors

Proposed job safety rules announced by the U.S. Department of Labor would require rollover protective structures on new agricultural tractors purchased after August 31 and used by employees.

Rollover structures, which may be a frame or a frame and enclosure, are designed to protect farm workers from injury in tractor accidents.

While there is no reliable national data on farm fatalities, the National Safety Council reports that a 1969-1972 survey of 10 states with nearly one-third of the nation's farm workers showed that on-the-farm deaths due to overturns occurred at a rate of 8.6 per 100,000 tractors.

Officials of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) said the proposed rules are based substantially on the recommendation of its standards advisory committee on agriculture.

The requirement for a rollover protective structure would apply to all agricultural tractors of more than 20 engine horsepower.

Structures would have to meet specified performance requirements based on prescribed test procedures. These procedures are essentially adaptations of standards developed by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The rules would apply only to tractors used by employees—not to those used by farm employers or members of their immediate family.

Written data and requests for a hearing should be submitted no later than March 6 to the OSHA Office of Standards, Room 203—MNWA, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. 20210.

Taxpayers Have Less Than One Month To File

Less than one month remains for Minnesota taxpayers to file their 1973 Federal income tax returns, R. C. Voskuil, District Director of Internal Revenue for Minnesota said the deadline this year is the traditional April 15.

"March is a good time to file," said Voskuil. "Returns filing is at a low ebb and our service centers can more easily process returns filed at this time. We also know from our statistics that taxpayers who wait until April 15 to file make more mistakes. So we urge taxpayers not to wait until the deadline to file."

Voskuil gave these suggestions for an accurate return and a faster refund: Read the tax instructions carefully; use the peel-off address label received on your forms package; check your arithmetic; attach all W-2 forms and schedules; sign your return (both spouses, if jointly filing) and—file now!

Mondale Offers Bill On Mortgage For Homeowners

As inflation, unemployment and the energy crisis take their toll in both prices and jobs, many Americans find it increasingly difficult, and eventually impossible, to meet home mortgage payments.

For these unfortunate citizens, a major investment—quite possibly the largest investment of their lifetimes—will vanish and their shelter will suddenly be gone.

"To avoid this tragic possibility, I have introduced legislaton designed to assist homeowners who face the prospect of losing their homes due to an ever-growing rate of mortgage foreclosures," states Sen. Walter F. Mondale.

"My bill would reactivate the home owners' loan corporation (HOLC) when and if foreclosures on one-to-four family dwellings reach about 100,000 a year, or five-tenths of one per cent. Because the foreclosure rate has already reached an alarming four-tenths of one per cent, I feel that stand-by legislation is urgently needed.

"We are seeing an ominous trend toward mortgage foreclosures on a widespread basis for one-to-four family dwellings. For instance, the present mortgage delinquency rate—the most accurate measure of potential foreclosures—has already reached the highest level in 20 years at 4.7 per cent. In addition, seriously delinquent loans, with two or more payments past due, rose to a record high of 1.26 per cent at the end of the third quarter of 1973," the senator said.

"The home owners' loan corporation was first developed during the depression," he noted "It represented then, as it should again, an attempt to counteract mortgage foreclosures by allowing the HOLC to purchase mortgages from private lending institutions and to refinance mortgages of homeowners faced with foreclosure because of temporary hardship. The corporation was liquidated in 1951, after helping about 800,000 homeowners save their homes.

"It is important to note that the HOLC will not become operative—and will cost nothing—until we are faced with a national foreclosure crisis.

"When and if that crisis comes, we will be ready with a mechanism for helping thousands of American families save their homes," Sen. Mondale said.

Sen. Committee Passes Amended State Wolf Bill

An amended version of a bill providing the department of natural resources authority to enter into an agreement with the federal government to manage timber wolves and other species classed as threatened or endangered has been approved by the senate natural resources committee.

Under terms of a federal law, the U. S. department of interior determines whether the states are proposing regulations adequate to protect threatened or endangered species. States which submit a satisfactory management plan including such protection may retain the right to continue managing such species found within their borders.

Failure of a state to submit such a plan or to enact laws giving a state agency the authority to regulate the taking of endangered species means that the federal government will take control over management of these species within that state.

Presently, the timber wolf is classed as an unprotected species under Minnesota law and not subject to regulation or protection by the department of natural resources.

Since the timber wolf has been classed as endangered by the department of interior, the Minnesota department of natural resources must acquire authority to regulate the taking of wolves or this function will be taken over by the federal government.

The bill now before the Minnesota legislature gives this authority to the commissioner of natural resources. If passed, the DNR may then submit a proposed plan for wolf management to the department of interior for approval.

Details of the plan are not included in the bill since they will be subject to negotiation between the DNR and the federal government; however DNR officials have stated that the plan they will offer will include a provision for regulated taking of timber wolves raiding livestock.

Commissioner of natural resources Robert Herbst said he believes the federal government will approve this feature of the plan "since it is inconceivable that government officials would deny farmers and ranchers the right to protect their herds."

Veteran's Day To Be Observed On November 11

Veteran's day will again be celebrated on November 11 in Minnesota under a bill signed into law by Governor Wendell Anderson March 4.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Al Patton of St. Cloud, changes the Veteran's day holiday back to November 11 instead of the federal three-day holiday created for the fourth Monday in October.

Rep. Patton said the legislation "restores the celebration of Veteran's day to its proper place in history." November 11 was designated Veteran's day following World War II to include veterans of all wars. The day originally had been known as Armistice day to signify the end of World War I.

The new law will not affect federal employees in the state; they will use the October holiday. State of Minnesota employees will celebrate Veteran's day holiday on November 11.

If November 11 falls on a Sunday, the following Monday will be the holiday; if it falls on a Saturday, the previous Friday will be the holiday.

BSC Will Hold First Ojibwe Art Exhibit

Bemidji state college will be the site of the first Ojibwe tribal art exhibit April 6-21, sponsored by six cooperating organizations.

The exhibit is entitled "Ojibwe Art 1974" and is co-sponsored by BSC council of Indian students, Ojibwe art exhibition committee, BSC Indian studies department, BSC, Minnesota Chippewa tribe, and the Red Lake Tribal council.

"Our exhibit, and contest, is open to all Ojibwe (Chippewa) artists and craftsmen who are over 16 years of age and at least one-fourth degree Ojibwe," spokesmen for the exhibit say. "Entries may be acrylic, oil or watercolor paintings; clay, wood or metal sculpture; woodcuts, silkscreens, etchings or engravings; pencil, pen or ink drawings; silver, bone, stone or bead jewelry; porcupine quillwork; beadwork; birchbark work; cradleboards; paddles and drums; baskets; quilts; sashes; woven bags; pipes or any other media."

According to the rules of the exhibit, there will be no separate classification prizes for the exhibit, but there will be about $1,500 in purchase prizes awarded—meaning that the various prize sponsors will have the opportunity to purchase works selected, with the first prize purchase being $400 sponsored by the Minnesota Chippewa tribe.

Entry deadline for the exhibit is March 16 and further information is available by writing the Ojibwe Art Exhibition Committee, 218-751-3977 in Oshki-Anishinabe Family Center, 1206 Birchmont Dr., Bemidji 56601.

Dep't. Of Interior Will Increase Law Enforcement Effort

A restructuring of the law enforcement division of the department of interior's fish and wildlife service has been announced by director Lynn A. Greenwalt.

"The changes we've made will give us a harder hitting federal force that will be able to deal more effectively with wildlife violations," Greenwalt said.

"Because of additional responsibilities given us by Congress and the changing nature of wildlife violations, we need to step up our investigative and law enforcement efforts. This new structure and certain administrative changes will provide more flexibility and eliminate cumbersome procedures that, to some extent, have hampered the coordination of law enforcement efforts in the past."

Greenwalt emphasized that the new organizational changes also will strengthen the bureau's cooperative efforts with the states and increase its capabilities in protecting waterfowl and other migratory birds.

Under the old structure, special agents were assigned to specific sites in each state within the fish and wildlife service's six regions. This resulted in jurisdictional and administrative problems that often delayed responses to law enforcement matters.

Under the new structure, the six regions have been divided into 13 Districts, each managed by a special agent-in-charge. Based on geographical and functional considerations, several field offices will be located in each district to give the special agent-in-charge a capability to respond to the district's investigative and law enforcement needs.

In the last few years, the public's increasing recognition of the need to protect all wildlife, not just the hunted species, has resulted in new legislation and amendments to existing laws that provide both broader protection and increased restrictions in the taking, transportation, sale, import, and export of wildlife.

In 1972 Congress enacted legislation to regulate the hunting of wildlife from aircraft (amendment to the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956) and to protect marine mammals (Marine Mammal Protection Act). The Endangered Species Act of 1973 regulates in the United States the import and export of those species declared by the Secretary of the Interior to be endangered or threatened. This Act also prohibits the interstate commerce of endangered wildlife.

Last year, the Government negotiated a treaty with 80 other countries to add further protection to endangered and threatened wildlife. When this treaty is implemented, both imports and exports of all fish and wildlife will be controlled.

Proposed regulations now being considered would also severely restrict the importation of foreign wildlife thought to be potentially dangerous to man or the environment.

One unfortunate aberration of the renewed public interest in the environment has been a greater demand for endangered species and an increase in the use of their parts in jewelry, furs, wearing apparel and curios. The value of some rare species has skyrocketed. Leopard skin coats, now prohibited from importation, sell for as much as $30,000. The motiled brown shell of the endangered hawksbill sea turtle is sold as tortoise shell and is frequently ued in expensive jewelry, combs and mirrors.

Carved ivory (scrimshaw) made from the walrus, whale and other animals is used in figurines, hair pieces, pins and various curios. Skins, feathers and other parts of animals are also used in making hundreds of items, some of which are sold to tourists abroad who are unaware they are buying contraband. Similar items find their way to department stores, jewelry stores, antique shops and many other commerical outlets in the country.

Demand for these items has been so great that it has generated a new breed of wildlife violator and new kinds of wildlife violations radically different from what they typically were in the past. Instead of a hunter, the violator is often a seemingly reputable importer, businessman or corporation, and with increasing frequency the crimes investigated involve large numbers of individuals who are often involved in intricate, well-planned operations.

The modern violator is often quite sophisticated and especially mobile. He can fly across the country, illegally bag an animal, and be back home with his trophy the next day. Recently, several rings of "trophy hunters" were investigated and prosecuted in the Far West where unscrupulous guides and taxidermists were employed by those willing to pay up to $10,000 for rare bighorn sheep trophies. Deer and alligator poachers, encouraged by high black market prices, can kill and transfer animals or hides across state lines in a matter of hours.

Last year in New York City, a fur investigation involving foreign commerce transactions was completed with over 60,000 documents obtained by search warrants and grand jury subpoena. It took thousands of manhours for special agents of the fish and wildlife service to assimilate the data and match the various transactions in order to substantiate the violations. Also last year, a prominent wild animal dealer who frequently did business with zoos throughout the world was sentenced to a year in jail for falsifying records in an attempt to import 20 live cheetahs.

In more and more cases, these wildlife profiteers are conspiring with others in elaborate schemes. With increasing frequency, their violations transcend state and national boundaries and often those of foreign countries. Contacts with embassies, foreign governments and agencies such as Interpol are necessary and are now occurring with greater frequency.

Investigations of this scope and magnitude require techniques and skills not commonly used in the past. These new developments pointed the way for the redirection and intensification of the nation's ~~wildlife law en~~forcement program.

In the last year, the support staff of the division of law enforcement has also been restructured and supplemented to include personnel with legal backgrounds and with experience in criminal investigation, public administration, criminology and police science. The staff includes former FBI agents, treasury agents and military investigators. This backup support has been augmented by increased training and additional equipment for agents in the field.

"The historical role of our wildlife law enforcement efforts has changed," Greenwalt said. "The present restructuring is a major step in developing the kind of sophisticated and professional law enforcement program we need to meet the challenges of today's wildlife problems."

Politics Controls Chinese University

by Bill Huntzicker
University News Service

Political control of universities has inhibited traditional scholarship in the People's Republic of China, according to Robert J. Poor, a University of Minnesota art historian who recently visited Peking University.

"A new generation is growing up with limited alternatives," Poor said, because students and teachers have to justify their work in political terms. Poor was one of 12 American specialists on Chinese art and archaeology who completed a month-long tour of China in December.

Their one-hour-and-15-minute tour of the Peking University campus was conducted by a young man, about 28 years old, who was the spokesman for the academics while a number of "more reputable scholars," about 55 to 60 years old, were not allowed to speak out of turn, Poor said.

"When they started to say something, the young man looked up and they quit talking," Poor said. "It was perfectly obvious that the 'Revolutionary Committee' was running the university and the academics were held captive."

Students at Peking University graduate in three or four years, but they spend one-third of their time doing productive labor, perhaps in a factory attached to the university, one-third of their time on political participation and self-awareness, and one-third of their time in studies, Poor said. The four-year programs are mostly technical courses in science and medicine.

A Chinese education is practical. "No one in China is in an ivory tower," Poor said. "You can find brain surgeons working in the fields and physics professors in the factories. The tour guide said: 'Our graduate students know what it is to have dirty hands. They will be sympathetic to the needs of the people.'"

During his visit to the campus, Poor said, he saw only six students, five of whom were laying sewer pipe and one who was in the men's restroom. There's an enrollment of 6,000 students and 2,300 faculty members at the university and the campus cannot attract as many students as it wants, he said.

"A prerequisite to attending the university is two years of productive labor or three years in the army and the student has to be recommended by his peer group, such as other farmers or soldiers," he said. Students are examined on the basis of their "moral awareness," political activities and political orthodoxy.

"More courses on Chinese art are available at the University of Minnesota than at Peking University," Poor said. "All of Chinese art is covered in one course there and one general course covers the rest of the world.

"Throughout all of China, I didn't meet one young man who seemed knowledgeable about art," Poor said. "Every major professional publication was authored anonymously by a committee or by people who were writing the books before 1949 (when the Communists came to power)."

The young tour guides quoted their information about art from the signs posted at the exhibits, he said.

Although he described the intellectual environment as "hostile" and "chilling," Poor said, the physical setting of Peking University is a beautiful garden which survives from the Ming Dynasty which ended in the mid-seventeenth century.

Physically, the campus is symbolic of the Chinese attitude toward art and history. Although they do not study it, Poor said, they consider it very important to preserve their artifacts and works of art as part of a proud national heritage. Construction on a major building could be held up for months while archaeologists work on a site where an artifact is discovered, he said.

Local teams study the sites of digging for industrial purposes and if a discovery is considered important enough, a team of experts is invited from Peking. The most valuable objects are preserved in Peking with copies sent to the local villages, he said.

"They are making imitations that you wouldn't believe—they have excellent restorations," Poor said. Some of the works are restored so well that the experts on Poor's tour couldn't tell what parts of the objects were original and what was restored.

Archaeology has more political value and so is given more consideration than painting and works of religious art, Poor said.

"They are not destroying their past," he said. "China has had a past-oriented culture. It is present and future oriented today because that is demanded and reinforced by the Communist system. The longer Chinese experience has been toward the past and tends toward racial pride."

"The only man-made feature of the Earth visible from outer space is the Great Wall of China and they know that," Poor said. "The Imperial gardens are protected."

The Forbidden City which was the home of centuries of Chinese emperors is preserved in all of its splendor. "It takes an astronomical commitment just to maintain it. Everyone on the tour said the Forbidden City never looked so good. It was deteriorating before the Communists controlled the government," Poor said.

"The People's Square in Peking which is the center of government is designed to be an extension of the Forbidden City. "The People's Square is the final note of the Forbidden City," he said.

The square, which has been the site of political rallies of 8 million people, is designed to carry on the traditional motif but to denote progress from imperial slavery to revolutionary democracy, Poor said.

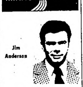
MIRACLE WATER

Jim Anderson



The pretzel was invented by Charlemagne, King of the Franks and first Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire. When he subdued the heathen Saxons more than eleven centuries ago, he forced them to bake the sign of the cross into all their bread and pastries in token of their conversion to Christianity. Thus the pretzel was born. Down to our time it had to be twisted by hand. But just a few years ago high speed machines were developed to loop and tie the dough into a perfect product of the pretzel maker's art. Today the pretzel not only comes in all sizes of the traditional shape but comes in circles, twists, and sticks of all sizes.

Thursday's opening game of the Minnesota state class A basketball tournament in the St. Paul Civic Center matches Waseca of basketball rich region one against Thief River Falls of not so highly regarded region eight.

Not since 1971 when the Kurt Knoff led East Grand Forks Green Wave finished a highly respectable third has a region eight team even so much as won one game in state tournament competition—a poor showing that has brought wrath upon all region eight teams from realignment enthusiasts, particularly in the metropolitan area who seem to take great joy in pinpointing the "below standards" caliber of region eight competitors.

In 1972 and 1973 region eight representatives Littlefork-Big Falls and Mahnomen were totally embarrassed in state tournament play, losing both first round and consolation games by hefty margins.

The lack of region eight state tournament success doesn't bother Thief River Falls head coach Lee Swanson, though. "We're not concerned about turning the region eight fortunes around," said Swanson, who is enjoying his first Minnesota state tournament berth in his three year Prowler reign. "There's no great burden or pressure on us to win for the prestige of region eight. We're going down there with the idea of winning for Thief River Falls, and I certainly wouldn't count these guys out of it either."

The Prowlers left Thief River Falls Tuesday following a pep fest in the Lincoln gym. The team was scheduled to practice in St. Cloud's Halenbeck Hall gymnasium Tuesday night, spending the evening in St. Cloud before leaving for St. Paul this morning (Wednesday). Swanson said the team has been presented with an opportunity to practice today in the St. Paul Highland Park high school gym. The team is staying at the St. Paul Hotel.

Swanson wanted to stress how thankful he was for the community's support during the region eight tournament held last week in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse in Grand Forks. "I was really impressed with the community support—it was the best I've seen in five years here," he said.

A large number of Thief River Falls supporters are expected to follow the Prowlers to St. Paul this weekend. For fans unable to make the lengthy journey to the Twin Cities, it was announced Tuesday that Thursday's Thief River Falls-Waseca game will be televised in this area by WDAZ channel 8 and WDAY channel 6 starting at 1 p.m. The two North Dakota television stations will televise any championship session game involving the Prowlers. A Thief River Falls win over Waseca would put the Prowlers on the tube again Friday at 7 p.m. against the Simley-Mound winner. The two class championship games will definitely be televised Saturday with the class A game starting at 2:45 p.m. and the class AA contest scheduled for 8:45 p.m. Monday's A and AA play-off game may be televised, as well. All class A games are also being aired by (Dandy) Don Howe and (Humble) Andy Lia of KTRF radio in Thief River Falls.

Melrose and Richfield are heavy pre-tournament favorites for their respective class A and AA titles with most observers giving the Mark Olberding-led Melrose Dutchmen a slight edge to win the over-all play-off title against the pride of the prestigious Lake Conference Richfield quint.

We'll go out on a limb and predict that the Prowlers will advance to the class A championship game with wins over Waseca and Simley. But we'll pick Melrose to win the A crown after picking up wins over Marshall and Chisholm. Our thinking finds Richfield beating Bemidji for the class AA title after defeating Minneapolis Washburn and Hopkins Lindberg. Bemidji will best Roseville Alexander Ramsey and Rochester Mayo. We'll pick Richfield to beat Melrose in the play-off game.

Thief River Falls Enters 1974 State Class A Basketball Tournament Thursday

Thief River Falls and Waseca clash at 1:05 p.m. tomorrow (Thursay in the opening game of the 1974 Minnesota class A state high school basketball tournament in the ultra-modern one-year-old St. Paul Civic Center in downtown St. Paul.

Simley and Mound meet at 2:45 tomorrow to round out the first afternoon class A session. Thursday night's class A pairings will find defending champion Chisholm playing St. James at 7:05 while Marshall takes on pre-tournament class A favorite Melrose at 8:45.

This year's 16 team state classic actually began today (Wednesday) with a full slate of four class AA games being played. Bemidji was scheduled to face Roseville Alexander Ramsey at 1:05 and Rochester Mayo played Anoka at 2:45. Tonight's class AA schedule will find Minneapolis Washburn meeting Hopkins Lindberg at 7:05 while Willmar goes against class AA pre-tournament favoite Richfield at 8:45.

Thief River Falls, still savoring its first region eight championship since 1960, will enter the tournament opener as a definite underdog against Waseca, but Prowler coach Lee Swanson is quick to point out his team's positive winning attitude. "Right after the regon eight championship game our ball players were talking about beating Waseca," pointed out Swanson. "We're not going down there just being satisfied with the region eight championship. We want to win down there too.

Coached by veteran Manny Beckmann, Waseca is appearing in its first state tournament since 1948. The Bluejays boast an impressive 21-2 season record to go along with their region one title. Waseca beat Lake City 47-37 in a first round region one game before adding an eye-catching 51-36 championship game triumph over defending champion Preston.

Waseca is led by lightning quick guard Gene Glynn, a 5-8 speedster who accurately shoots 20 foot jumpshots for a team high 19 point scoring average. Glynn has already forced Swanson to abandon a normal Prowler zone defense in favor of a more personal contact man to man set-up. Pete Hoehn, a 5-7 senior who also possesses excellent quickness, combines with Glynn to form an explosive Bluejay backcourt.

The tall Waseca front line is manned by 6-6 junior center Steve Cunningham, 6-5 senior forward Jim Keane and 6-3 senior forward Bob Pazera. A smooth player, Keane shoots well from the outside, averaging 18 points per ball game this winter. Cunningham scored at a 13 point clip this season and Pazera also averaged in double figures at 10 points per game. Keane and Pazera do the bulk of the Bluejay rebounding.

A fast breaking, full court pressing team, Waseca enjoys strong bench support, headed by 6-1 senior Glenn Miller.

"We know Waseca's a good team, but we don't rate them a super ball club," explained Swanson. "I think we'll be able to play with them all the way."

The familiar Thief River Falls line-up will remain unchanged this week with Swanson employing 6-0 senior Duane Dicken a 5-9 junior Jerry Sandahl at guards, 6-1 senior Randy Dallmann and 6-0 junior Dallas Kemmer at forwards and 6-8 junior Wayne Peterson at center. Kent Christensen, a 6-2 senior who starred in the Prowler region eight championship game win over Blackduck as a sixth man, will also see extended playing time during the tournament.

"We feel that we belong down there with the rest of those teams," said Swanson. "We'll have to hustle and work hard against Waseca, but if we can do those things we can beat them."

A Thief River Falls win over Waseca would pit the Prowlers against the Simley-Mound winner in the class A semifinals Friday at 7:05. A Thief River Falls first round loss would force the Prowlers to play the Simley-Mound loser in the class A consolation bracket Friday morning at 8:30 a.m.

The class A third place and championship game session will be played at 1:05 p.m. Saturday.

The class AA semifinals will be played Friday at 1:05 with the AA third place and championship game session scheduled Saturday at 7:05 p.m.

The A-AA state championship play-off game between the A and AA winners will be played Monday at 7:05.

A look at each class A state tournament team, as compiled by the Minneapolis Tribune, is as follows:

Waseca—Coach: Manny Beckmann. Record: 21-2. Led by 5-9 guard Gene Glynn, who has great quickness and averaged 19 points. Center Steve Cunningham, at 6-6, and forward Bob Pazera, 6-3, are also in double figures. Strong bench. Beat St. James, Rochester Mayo and half a dozen other strong teams. First tournament trip since 1948.

Thief River Falls—Coach: Lee Swanson. Record: 17-6. Has tallest player in tournament in 6-8 junior Wayne Peterson, who averaged 15 points. Duane Dicken and Dallas Kemmer, two 6-footers, also average double figures. Team is defensive oriented, with 50-point defensive average. Good depth, although no starter was a regular last year. Hasn't been in tournament since 1960.

Simley—Coach: Don Roberts. Record: 21-2 Physically strong team that likes to run. Top six players averaged nine points or better. Only senior among top six is 6-2 forward Rich Zellmer, leading scorer with 13-point average. Scott Quittem, at 6-3, is leading rebounder but 6-4 Pat Kavanagh and 6-4 Kurt Jonker are close. This is school's first tournament berth since it opened in 1960 and its first time ever past its district semifinals.

Mound—Coach: John Blomlie. Record: 11-11. At one time was 3-11. Jerry Gibbs and Terry Seeman are main returnees from last year's state tournament entry. Gibbs, who is 6-7, averaged 19 and Seeman, 6-3, averaged 15. Gibbs led Lake Conference Blue Division in scoring after a big early start. Additional size comes from 6-3 Bob Huff and 6-2 Bob Berglund. Last year's tournament entry was Mound's first.

Chisholm—Coach: Bob McDonald. Record: 21-0 Led by 6-4 sophomore center Paul McDonald, who can do it all. He, along with 6-2 guard Mike McDonald, are sons of the coach. Four players averaged double figures, with Paul McDonald's 14.3 tops. Scored 108 points against Bigfork and 37 in the region finals against Rush City's stall. Team has great speed. Won Class A last year and has won 48 of last 49 starts.

St. James—Coach: Arnold (Judge) Veglahn. Record: 19-4. Features good balance and little size. Veglahn's son, Mark, leads scorers with 15-point aveage while Steve Shellum, at 6-2, is second in scoring and leads in rebounding. All senior team. Stresses defense and allowed fewer than 50 points per game. Shoots about 50 per cent from the field. Won Class A and play-off two years ago.

Marshall—Coach: Lowell Ziemann. Record: 21-2. Top scorers and rebounders are 6-6½ Ken Peters and 6-6 Steve Otto, although 6-2 Dave Scheele also scores in double figures. Won Southwest Conference despite losses to Pipestone and Jackson. Doesn't boast a lot of depth. Guard Ron Moorse averaged nearly 10 points during season. Last went to state tournament in 1970.

Melrose—Coach: Del Schiffler. Record: 23-0. Has enough balance of keep pressure off of All-State center Mark Olberding, who is 6-7½ and has scored nearly 1,600 points as a prep. Junior forward Linie Dumont is excellent shooter. Ron Danzl, at 5-11, can go to boards well. Kurt Schulzetenberg was a starter last year and can hit from outside. Will go to Olberding for big play and he'll come up with it. Fifth straight tournament trip.

LHS Track Team Will Open Indoor Season Saturday

Lincoln high school track team will open its 1974 indoor season Saturday when the Prowlers compete in the power-laden Shanley Invitational meet in the North Dakota State University fieldhouse in Fargo.

A total of 63 varsity hopefuls—the largest turnover in recent years—have been working out under second year Prowler head coach Marv Walter since March 11 in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

Walter and assistant coaches John Kopari and Bill McGann will be handicaped for the Shanley meet, however, with two of the team's top performers missing from the meet line-up because of other comittments. Senior Tony Dorn and junior Jerry Sandahl, a pair of state tournament performers last spring, will not be in the Thief River Falls line-up Saturday. Dorn, a shot putter and discus thrower, will be attending the WCCO all-state team banquet in Minneapolis while Sandahl, a hurdler, will be playing for the Prowler basketball team in the state class A tournament in St. Paul.

About 15 schools are expected to be competing in the Shanley meet, annually one of the finest high school track meets in the area. Among the teams entered will be Minnesota state champion Moorhead, North Dakota state champion Bismarck and South Dakota state champion Sioux Falls Lincoln. Saturday's activity starts at 1 p.m. with the field events, followed by the preliminary running events at 1:30. The meet's finals will start at 6:30.

The youthful Prowler Shanley line-up will include just six seniors—immediately pointing to a Prowler sore spot this season. "We're inexperienced," admitted Walter who quickly adds, though, "We're young, but we do have talent. I think because of our inexperience and lack of depth this year is a big question mark, but the future looks bright."

The Prowler line-up for the field events in the Shanley meet will include sophomore Kent Ehrenstrom, sophomore Neil Johnson and freshman LeMarr Hanson in the shot put, senior Jim Carlson, junior Keith Johnson and freshman Jay Kverno in the high jump, sophomore Tim Benedict, sophomore Kevin Anderson and Kverno in the pole vault; and Carlson, Benedict and freshman Brad Swanson in the long jump.

The Thief River Falls entries in the Shanley running events will include junior Tom Barry, junior Jim Elleson and Benedict in the 60, Elleson, junior Keith Johnson and sophomore Don Parks in the 220, junior Jeff Houfek, junior Jeff Johnson and freshman Tony Brosseau in the 440; senior Brian Phelps, senior Dave Cork and junior Dave Midthun in the 880; junior Kevin Voecks, senior Joe Kezar and sophomore Dan Heieren in the mile; senior team captain Lonnie Olson, junior Gary Heaten and sophomore Dan Kezar in the two mile; senior Joe Sorvig, Barry and freshman Jeff Hendrickson in the 60 yard low hurdles; and Sorvig, Hendrickson and Kverno in the 60 yard high hurdles.

The Prowler 880 relay team will be comprise of Barry, Elleson, Houfek and Sorvig. The Thief River Falls mile relay team will be made up of Cork, Phelps, Jeff Johnson and sophomore Mike Burstad.

The rest of the current Prowler track roster includes seniors Martin Dirks and Gerald Trickle, along with juniors Brad Brown, Gary Heaton, Dan Johnson, Craig Swanson, Kevin Swanson and basketball team members Dick Johnson and Greg Leach. Other sophomores on the squad include Kevin Anderson, Tom Burger, Kurt Erickson, Tom Genereux, Jerry Kamen, Gary Krueger, Mike Leach, Jay Narverud, Joe Nelson, Mike Nessen, Scott Oen, Randy Olson, Keith Poissant, Kirk Reed, Scott Steedsman and Dave Wysoski.

Other freshmen working with the team include Scott Bergland, Steve Erickson, Mike Hvidsten, Greg Omdahl, Tom Rambeck, Dale Sande, Tim Brudeau, Dan Vigness, Craig Vollan, Kraig Wangsness and Monte Worner.

Although inexperience haunts the Prowler thinclads this season, Walter is cautiously optimistic entering the new campaign. "We've got a lot of real good young talent, we'll just have to wait and see how they develop as the year goes along. 'It's the finest group of underclassmen I've had a chance to work with."

"We'll be putting most of our emphasis on field events," noted Walter, "We think the field events will keep us in some meets this year."

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I was noticing the similarities between the 1974 Region 8 champs and the team I played on in 1960.

The head coach in 1960 was Hartley Story. In 1974 it is Lee Swanson. Both last names start with an "S".

Argyle made its first appearance in the Region 8 semifinals in 1960. They made their second showing in the 1974 semis. In 1960 we beat Argyle 62-53. This year TRF beat Mahnomen 62-52.

Thief River defeated the District 29 champ for the Region 8 championship in 1960. Thief River defeated the District 29 champ for the Region 8 championship in 1974. In 1960 the District 29 winner was Bemidji. This year it was Blackduck. The scores are similar, too, 60-53 and 60-54 (1960 and 1974).

Prior to our first game in the state tournament, our season record was 17-6. The Thief River team of this year has an identical record.

TRF started the 1960 state tourney off by playing the Region 1 champion. TRF starts this 1974 tourney by also playing the Region 1 champ.

Chisholm and Melrose were in the 1960 state tournament. Chisholm and Melrose are in the 1974 state tournament.

In 1960, TRF had the tallest player in the state tournament. Likewise, TRF has the tallest player in the 1974 tournament.

And how about the starting line-ups for the 1960 team as opposed to the 1974 team?

Center—Ron Hanson, junior, Wayne Peterson Junior

Forward- Don Ulferts, Junior, Dallas Kemmer, Junior.

Forward Bob Pearson, Senior, Randy Dallmann Senior.

Guard, Steve Embury, Senior, Dewey Dicken, Senior.

Guard, Eddie Lietzow, Junior, Jerry Sandahl, Junior.

There is one more similarity; the starting center for both teams had the same number for their "away" uniforms—55.

Just thought that you would be interested in these oddities!

Mentor Captures Amateur Crown

Mentor Marauders performed the "iron man" act on Saturday and Sunday as they won the Minnesota state amateur basketball championship in a repeat of last year's performance. Only seven players were able to make the trip to Mankato for the grucling tournament where teams in the finals must play five games in a total of only 28 hours.

Participating were Bob Matzke, Henry Holte, Bob Johnson, Tom Super and Tom, Mike and Nick Neibauer. Regulars unable to go were Curt and Al Jensen and Al Salverson. Most of the players are familiar to Thief River Falls area sports fans.

On Saturday noon the Marauders vanquished Stillwater 95-59, at 4 p.m. they defeated a good Hutchinson team 84-64 and at 8 p.m. they outscored St. Peter 78-66 for their third win in 9½ hours. Sunday noon found the Mentor team pitted against Hermantown in the semi-final and pulling out a 76-74 win. At 3 p.m. they squared off against Windom in the championship game and claimed the big state trophy in an 84-79 win.

Mentor was one of the smaller teams in the tournament with only two men hitting 6'4" in height. Speed, stamina and passing ability on the fast break was too much for the other teams in the 46-team "Class A" division. Several of the Mentor victories were "come from behind" thrillers.

Semi-Final Game

Hermantown, with Frank Huss and Russ Adkins drilling almost every shot, took the lead at the outset and maintained it at the quarter stop 20-15, but Matzke, with 10 points, kept Mentor in the game. Nick Neibauer took over the scoring chores in the second quarter which ended 36-33 for Hermantown.

The Marauders tried hard to stop the aggressive opponent but in doing so had to foul, allowing Hermantown to drop in eight free throws without a miss. The third quarter stop found Mentor trailing 58-51. Fed by his brother Nick, Mike Neibauer stuffed in 15 big points in the final eight minutes of the game. Nine of the points came on three driving layups which resulted in three point plays. The others were jump shots from the outside. Bob Matzke added three baskets and Henry Holte a field goal and two free throws to complete a 25-point final quarter and a 76-74 victory. The win gave the Marauders a shot at the championship.

Scoring showed Mike Neibauer with 21 points, Bob Matzke, 19; Henry Holte, 14; Nick Neibauer, 12; Job Johnson, 6; and Tom Super, 4.

Championship Game

Mentor took a quick lead in the championship game as Bob Matzke and Nick Neibauer connected consistently. Lorenzen, a rugged 6'6" center, got eight points for Windom who trailed 21-14 the first quarter. The second quarter saw the opponents outshoot and outdrive the Marauders to the tune of 24-12 and grab a 38-33 half-time lead. In spite of a tough defensive job by Henry Holte, Lorenzen hit 15 points for Windom by half time. Bob Matzke matched this output with 15 points of his own during the first two quarters.

With eight minutes to go for another state title, Holte, Matzke, Mike Neibauer and Tom Super grabbed the rebounds and two steals by Nick Neibauer for driving layups gave Mentor a five-point lead. Windom, with Lorensen, Meyer, Fossing and Spilman leading the way, fought back with great shooting under pressure.

Free throws played a big part in the final quarter. The Marauders hit 12 out of 12 charity tosses and added seven field goals for 26 last quarter points.

Nick Neibauer topped the balanced scoring in the championship game with 20 points. Matzke got 17; Mike Neibauer, 16; Super, 11; Holte, 10; Bob Johnson, 6; and Tom Neibauer, 4. Holte went to the bench with five fouls with four minutes to play.

Stan Hayes Wins Top Sno-Pro Title

Stan Hayes

Thirteen races, 228,000 spectators and some $120,000 later, the United States snowmobile association's first SnoPro racing season is over. Stan Hayes, a 23-year-old veteran of 11 years on north America's snowmobile race courses, earned the right to wear SnoPro's Number one racing bib next season, a designation SnoPro's 26 registered competitors and more than 50 challenging non-pros battled for all season.

For Hayes, however, the Number one bib meant considerably more than prestige. For one thing, there was the $24,000 in prize money he earned. For another, it meant championship cups for winning the SnoPro total point title and the SnoPro 340cc engine class high-point race for the Polaris professional racing team of Roseau. The SnoPro 440 class title went to Ed Schubitzke of Duluth, whose little Yamaha SRX 440 proved its durability in the largest, most competitive SnoPro class. Larry Rugland, Hayes' Polaris teammate, won the SnoPro 650 class point championship at the final race in West Yellowstone, Montana.

Stan won 340 races at Ironwood, Beausejour, Manitoba; Montreal, Quebec; Rhinelander, Wis.; Eagle River, Wis.; Alpena, Mich.; Bangor, Me.; Syracuse, N.Y.; and Eagle River's USSA world series of snowmobiling. He won the 340 title by a remarkable 566-point margin. Hayes also claimed 650 victories at Montreal; Peterborough, Ontario; Rhinelander; and Butte, Mont. Six other times he cashed in either second or third place in his two events.

"I thought SnoPro was great," Hayes said, "and I hope it keeps going. I started racing when I was 12...back when everyone has a six-horsepower engine; and if you went 25 miles per hour, you thought you were really going fast. Everyone cheated back in those days. That was before USSA. "I know a lot of people have knocked USSA, but I'm all for it. You can't race without rules."

The attention-getter on the SnoPro tour this season was Alouette's unusual twin-tracked, rear-engine racing machine, designed and raced by 23-year-old Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Quebec. It was the one machine visibly unique, but the other machines were also new, different and a preview of things to come in snowmobiles. Polaris' secrets weren't really very radical. The fastest, most durable entrants in SnoPro won consistently because of technical excellence in matching [illegible] design, clutch and drive systems, carburetion and horsepower.

Yamaha's SRX models introduced radical departures in steering and handling characteristics in addition to a powerful lightweight liquid-cooled engine. Arctic Cat's machines likewise were highspeed laboratories for liquid-cooled engine research.

Even some of the factories that didn't rank among the winners learned valuable lessons. Kohler of Canada, an engine supplier, ran exhaustive tests on new power sources despite season-long problems in trying to match the proper chassis and clutch systems to its engines. Suzuki experienced similar frustrations with new designs. Kalamazoo-MTD Columbia used a combined accessories-snowmobile manufacturer approach to explore traction systems as well as basic snowmobile design improvements.

SnoPro, as a concept, also fought battles all season. The energy crisis was a severe problem. The fuel situation was serious enough to convince Bombardier, Ltd., to idle its Ski-Doo racing team (although Ski-Doo paid its full entry fee for the season to help support SnoPro). It also convinced Arctic Cat to cut back its participation...and the two races Arctic missed might have cost Larry Coltom a chance to catch Hayes in the high-point championship race. Coltom finished third in points, and was the only SnoPro driver to finish in the top five in all three classes.

Lack of snow didn't stop a single SnoPro race, although there were close calls. But the snow shortage did help foster a third straight miserable selling season for manufacturers. As the season closed, the economic dilema forced Alouette, Chaparral and several other non-SnoPro factories to terminate their snowmobile production operations. Other SnoPro factories were pondering their own futures in racing.

Final SnoPro standings

Committee OK's Amended Type Of Wolf Bill

Amended version of a bill providing the Minnesota department of natural refources authority to enter into an agreement with the federal government to manage timber wolves and other species classed as "threatened" or "endangered" was approved in the senate natural resources committee Saturday.

Under terms of a federal law, the U.S. department of interior is given authority to determine whether the states are proposing adequate regulations, but provides that if states submit a satisfactory management plan they may retain the right to continue managing resident endangered or threatened species.

Failure of state to submit such a plan or to enact laws giving state agencies the authority to regulate the taking of such species mans that the federal government would take control over management of these species within the individual states.

Presently, the timber wolf is classed as an "unprotected" species under Minnesota law and not subject to regulation or protection by the department of natural resources.

Since the timber wolf has been classed as "endangered" by the department of interior, the state must acquire authority for its protection and management or this function will be taken over by the federal government.

The bill now before the Minnesota legislature gives the authority to the commissioner of natural resources. If passed, the DNR will then be allowed to submit a proposed plan for mangement to the department of interior for approval.

Details of the plan are not included in the bill since they will be subject to negotiation between the DNR and the federal government.

DNR officials have stated that the plan they will offer will include provision for regulated taking of timber wolves raiding livestock.

Commissioner of natural resources Robert Herbst said he believes the federal government will approve this feature of the plan "since it is inconceivable that government officials would deny farmers and ranchers the right to protect their herds."

Co. 4H Carnival Saturday Drew Good Attendance

Carnival booths and a king and queen contest were highlight activities at the Pennington county 4-H carnival Saturday at the city auditorium in Thief River Falls.

Each of the 14 clubs in the county was responsible for one of the events that took place. Taking part in such activities as bowling, cake walk, ball and bottle toss, darts, dip the duck, etc., participating 4-Hers and area youth won our 4,000 prizes.

Each club sponsored a king and queen candidate. Votes were obtained before the carnival by donating a penny or more to favorite candidates with 42,963 votes received.

King and queen candidates representing the county clubs were: Happy Acres, Billy Reterson and Kerry Madunich; Star, Scott Stenvik and Sheila Johnson; Smiley, Peggy Hamre and Dale Schindler; Black River, Lynn Mosbeck and Tom Reep; City View, Michelle Solseng and Paul Waswick; Satellite, Alan Lull and Jan Suronen; and Silverton, David Spengler and Candi Rupprecht;

Also Mavie, Rhonda Sanders and Tom Panek; Kratka, Kim Koropatnicki; New Solum, Mark Johnson and Libbe Holmes; Deer Park, Dean Hagen and Wendy Hanson; Good Hope, Randy Henrickson and Karen Walls; and Steiner, Tommy Pederson and Nita Prestegaard.

Tom Panek from Mavie club received a total of 2,794 votes and was crowned king. Libbe Holmes of the New Solum club received 4,145 votes and was crowned queen.

The carnival was very successful, accoring to Wayne Odegaard, associate extension agent. Profits will be used to sponsor upcoming 4-H activities with a portion of the profit to be donated to the Fergus Falls youth service corps. The service corps works with retarded and physically disabled youth.

Two Candidates Refuse Interview For U Presidency

A five-member committee of University of Minnesota faculty and members of the board of regents will interview each of the 12 preferred candidates for university president if they will consent to an interview.

Neil C. Sherburne, chairman of the regents' search committee, said that of the people contacted so far, two of them have turned down an interview.

The interviewers panel, consisting of three regents and two faculty members, travels to visit the prospective candidate rather than bringing them to Minnesota for an interview, he said.

The interviewers are not always the same group except for Sherburne and Elmer L. Andersen, chairman of the board of regents, who have tried to get to each of the interviews conducted so far.

"Within a week we'll get a yes or no from all 12 on whether they will accept an interview," Sherburne said.

"The idea of the interview is not to scrutinize the candidates because they're all well qualified," Sherburne said. "The 12 are not ranked and they are equal in stature until we have a chance to meet and talk with them."

Sherburne announced last month that a committee of students and faculty had narrowed the list of 435 nominees for the position down to the 12 and that the regents would further narrow the list before making an offer.

Sherburne said the regents will not be bound by a time limit, but will try to have a new president appointed by July 1 when Malcolm Moos leaves to become chief executive officer of the center for the study of democratic institutions in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

We understand that Goodridge is considering building a new liquor store. We feel that a community center would be desirable as well.

This center could benefit all ages. Some of the activities that a community center could offer are bowling, juke box, snack bar, pinball machines and pool.

Also, this could be used for private group organizations such as Farmers Union, school board, Luther league, Lions club, Boy scouts, firemen, 4-H, village council, garden club, senior citizens and snow cat club meetings.

This community center could get youth off the street, out of the cars and into better surroundings. It would also be an opportunity for community employment.

Perhaps one building, housing both a liquor store and community center, could be constructed. Of course, they would be completely separated with only exterior entrances.

Interested persons please send any and all comments to the Goodridge Council.

Sincerely,
Mari Lou Miller

Educational Rights Of Handicapped Are Summarized By Board

Summary and interpretation of Minnesota laws relating to the educational rights of handicapped children in Minnesota has been prepared for parents, school boards and agencies, by the Northwest developmental disabilities advisory board of Region I.

This is an attempt to describe the law as well as to include an interpretation and implementation of that law delivered by a special education consultant of the Minnesota department of education.

Minnesota statutes (Laws) Sections 120 and 124 and their subdivisions are those laws which pertain to the handicapped.

Handicapped children are defined in these laws as those who: are "deaf, hard of hearing, blind, partially seeing, crippled," have defective speech; are physically handicapped, mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed; or have special behavorial problems; and as a result of the above handicaps are in need of special instruction and services as defined by the Minnesota state board of education. These laws were enacted in 1957, and were amended in 1971 to include trainable mentally retared under the mandate.

The 1957 law and the 1971 amendment requires schools to provide appropriate special educational services to any and all handicapped children as defined above; this means that even if a school district has only one handicapped child as defined above, it must provide appropriate services for that child. The law further specifies that school districts with less than minimum number of handicapped children (5) as determined by the state board of education, shall cooperate with other districts to provide appropriate services.

All handicapped children are considered of school age from ages 4-21 (except MR ages 5-21). Furthermore, schools may provide special instruction or services earlier than the above ages. Prior to 1971, education to TMR children was also permissive. Subsequent to that amendment, we now have essentially a zero demission policy.

According to a consultant from the special education section of Minnesota department of education, in a speech delivered on June 9, 1973, the burden of proof that a child cannot benefit lies with the school; and the school cannot reasonably state that the child cannot benefit until it has demonstrated an appropriate attempt at providing services and can prove the child has not benefited.

Parents or guardians of a handicapped child have the right of appeal if they feel their child is not receiving appropriate services. A shortcut in this appeal process is for a dissatisfied parent in appeal directly to the school superintendent, preferably in writing. If after a reasonable period of time (one to two months) there has been no response, or action, a formal documented appeal to the state commissioner of education would be indicated.

Schools have several options as to how appropriate services shall be provided. They can provide services ranging from regular classroom placement with or without special instruction; in a special class; at the home or bedside; purchase service from other school districts; or any other public or private agency approved by the commissioner of education; or placement in schools in other states.

Should the placement be outside the school district, the local school board must do so with parental consent; the parents have the right to appeal the placement to the commissioner of education.

Intent of the law is that all handicapped children should be educated at no cost to the parent.

If the school chooses to demit a child after having determined that the child "cannot benefit" as outlined above, it is recommended that the school board apply "due process" to a demission action which would include written provision of reason leading to exclusion or expulsion; a meaningful prior hearing which would allow parents to confront the witnesses and have counsel as desired. This is outlined in a memorandum from Mr. Farley D. Bright, Commissioner of Education, dated November 22, 1971. The school board must notify the Commissioner of Education of any demission action on Form F 20-7 within 30 days of the official action.

Possible Method Of Predicting Disease Found

A possible method to predict a person's susceptibility to certain diseases was revealed recently by two University of Minnesota immunologists.

Speaking at a meeting of the American society of pathology and bacteriology, Dr. Leonard Greenberg and Dr. Edmond Yunis said they have found what may be the first "test tube" method to detect a gene responsible for an immune response in humans.

Studies with inbred mice have indicated that susceptibility or resistance to cancer or disease in general is under the control of a gene complex that controls both cellular identity and the immune response.

Previous attempts at finding a consistent relationship between histocompatibility antigens (cellular identity) in man and susceptibility to diseases associated with specific antigens have failed. Acute leukemia, multiple sclerosis, psoriasis and chronic hepatitis are some of the diseases associated with specific antigens.

Greenberg and Yunis, from the department of laboratory medicine and pathology, found that white blood cells from normal individuals, when exposed to small amounts of streptococcal antigens in tissue culture, either responded vigorously or not at all.

Genetic analysis of the white blood cells that responded showed a significant increase in the occurence of two histocompatibility antigens and a decrease in the incidence of a third.

The researchers said they didn't know at present whether the relationship was directly linked to the two histocompatibility antigens themselves or to some closely related gene product.

According to Greenberg, if there is a direct link "it would not only constitute a major breakthrough in our understanding of the role of host factors in susceptibility or resistance to streptococcal disease but also neoplasia (cancers) and disease in general."

VA To Offer New Medical Care Program

Veternas administration identification cards showing eligibility for the agency's new medical care program, CHAMPVA, are now being issued at VA hospitals and outpatient clinics in Minnesota, the agency announced recently.

CHAMPVA, which stands for civilian health and medical program-veterans administration, is for widows and children of veterans who died of service-connected disabilities after leaving military service, and for dependents of veterans who have service-connected total and permanent disabilities.

Care under the program is provided at VA expense at non-VA hospitals.

The VA Center in St. Paul has mailed notices of eligibility or potential eligibility to almost 500,000 beneficiaries identified from VA compensation rolls in the United States.

Recipients were advised to apply to VA hospitals and outpatient clinics for verification of eligibility and identification cards. In Minnesota, VA hospitals are located in Minneapolis and St. Cloud.

CHAMPVA pays 75 per cent of the reasonable costs of hospital care. For outpatient care, CHAMPVA pays 75 per cent of the remaining costs in any calendar year after the patient has paid the first $50. For families, the deductible is limited to $100 per year.

The VA explained that the new medical care program does not cover all wives, widows and children of veterans. The veteran must be totally and permanently disabled from a service-connected cause or have died from a service-connected cause after leaving service. Also excluded from coverage by CHAMPVA are those already eligible for the military program CHAMPUS, and most persons with entitlement for Medicare.

CHAMPVA closely parallels CHAMPUS, which is for dependents and survivors of military retirees. Benefits are essentially the same and claims will be paid through existing CHAMPUS claims offices.

CHAMPVA covers a wide range of hospital care and outpatient services, but approved patients should confirm in advance that the physician or other provider of medical care will participate in CHAMPVA. Those who have agreed to participate will bill CHAMPVA after the patient's share of the cost is paid. Patients who use non-participating medical care facilities must request reimbursement from a CHAMPUS claims office subject to deductible and cost sharing requirements.

A VA spokesman said that most medical facilities in the nation have received forms and instructions for making claims for reimbursement, and forms are available also from CHAMPUS fiscal agents throughout the country. Names of fiscal agents and full information on the CHAMPVA program are available at VA's 170 hospitals.

The VA stressed that eligible dependents and survivors can be admitted to VA hospitals only when a hospital has a unique capability not available in the community, and when the facility is not needed for veteran care.

Minnesotans To Report Sick Pay On Tax Returns

R.C. Voskuil, district director of IRS. offices in Minnesota, said recently that taxpayers receiving sick pay from insurance companies, union welfare plans, or any source other than the employer, must report the total amount of sick pay on their returns. The IRS. has noted that sick pay is frequently understated because of misunderstandings by employees.

Voskuil explained that sick pay benefits are not included in the total wages reported on the Form W-2 furnished by the employer if the employer has a sick pay plan in which sick pay benefits are to be paid by an insurance company or from a special fund. Therefore, any sick pay received from another source must be reported as miscellaneous income on line 27 of the Form 1040.

The employee may be entitled to an exclusion of part of all of the sick pay, but the income must first be reported and the allowable exclusion, if any, deducted on line 30 on page 2 of Form 1040. The taxpayer must attach a statement showing the computation of the sick pay exclusion. The IRS office can furnish Form 2440, which is provided for this purpose.

Voskuil added that, in most cases, there is no allowable sick pay exclusion unless the employee was continuously absent for a period of at least 30 days. He said that in no case could the employee be entitled to a sick pay exclusion if the pay was for brief periods of illness during which the employee received full pay. Therefore, the sick pay benefits are treated as being regular income without an offsetting deduction.

The IRS has also noted that some W-2's show sick pay incorrectly. The W-2 should show excludable sick pay only if it is included in the gross wages entered on the W-2 and only if the wages were actually paid by the employer.

Taxpayers who have questions about the tax treatment of sick pay may call IRS office. The telephone numbers are listed on page 2 of the Form 1040 instructions and page 7 of the Form 1040A instructions.

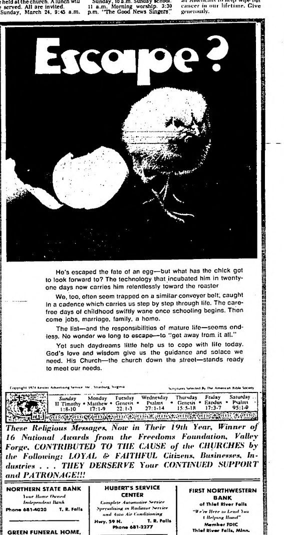
The American Cancer Society urgently needs the help of all Americans to help wipe out cancer in our lifetime. Give generously.



He's escaped the fate of an egg—but what has the chick got to look forward to? The technology that incubated him in twenty-one days now carries him relentlessly toward the roaster.

We, too, often seem trapped on a similar conveyor belt, caught in a cadence which carries us step by step through life. The carefree days of childhood swiftly wane once schooling begins. Then come jobs, marriage, family, a home.

The list—and the responsibilities of mature life—seems endless. No wonder we long to escape—to "get away from it all."

Yet such daydreams little help us to cope with life today. God's love and wisdom give us the guidance and solace we need. His Church—the church down the street—stands ready to meet our needs.

MFT Calls For Seniority In Teacher Layoffs

Officials of the Minnesota Federation of Teachers have called for speedy passage of an MFT backed bill dealing with teacher layoffs. The proposal (SF 2083 and HF 210) has been passed by the full House and was expected to be heard before the Senate education committee Friday.

The measure would impose seniority principles in teacher layoffs. If a school district decided it must layoff teachers because of declining enrollment or merging classes, it would be required to consider a teacher's seniority when determing which teachers would be laid off.

Henry Winkels, assistant executive secretary of the MFT, says his organization is "very concerned" that such a principle be enacted into law to apply to teacher layoffs. "We want it to apply to the present layoff situation: the nearly 1,000 teachers that are being laid off this year," Winkels said." We would like to see the bill amended to make it effective on the day that it is signed into law by the governor. As it now stands, the bill would not become effective until August 1."

Winkels also said the Minnesota Federation of Teachers has become "increasingly uncomfortable in its positon due to the wide range of amendments offered by the Minnesota school boards association to the bill." Winkels said that the amendment has delayed passage of the measure. It would, he said "include layoffs due to a shortage of money in school district budgets" as a cause for such layoffs. The MFT, he said, opposes the amendment.

Winkels said his organization believes it is mandatory that the bill, without the MSBA provision be enacted into law "to protect the rights of teachers who have worked long and hard in the various school districts of the state."

GI Advance For Summer School Is Authorized

Veterans attending institutional school training under the G.I. Bill, and who would like to receive an advance payment for summer school enrollment, may apply for advance payment by requesting the school to certify summer enrollment to the VA.

Another method of applying for advance payment is to notify the VA in writing that you have been accepted by the school for the summer term and that you have notified the school of your intention to re-enroll. Also, tell the VA the beginning and ending dates of the summer term and the number of credit or clock hours you will be taking.

If either procedure is followed, an advance payment check can be mailed to the school for delivery upon registration, but not more than 30 days before the term is scheduled to start.

Advance payment will be for the month or part of a month in which the enrollment period will begin, plus the allowance for the next month.

MFT Calls For Seniority In Teacher Layoffs

Officials of the Minnesota Federation of Teachers have called for speedy passage of an MFT backed bill dealing with teacher layoffs. The proposal (SF 2083 and HF 210) has been passed by the full House and was expected to be heard before the Senate education committee Friday.

The measure would impose seniority principles in teacher layoffs. If a school district decided it must layoff teachers because of declining enrollment or merging classes, it would be required to consider a teacher's seniority when determing which teachers would be laid off.

Henry Winkels, assistant executive secretary of the MFT, says his organization is "very concerned" that such a principle be enacted into law to apply to teacher layoffs. "We want it to apply to the present layoff situation: the nearly 1,000 teachers that are being laid off this year," Winkels said." We would like to see the bill amended to make it effective on the day that it is signed into law by the governor. As it now stands, the bill would not become effective until August 1."

Winkels also said the Minnesota Federation of Teachers has become "increasingly uncomfortable in its positon due to the wide range of amendments offered by, the Minnesota school boards association to the bill." Winkels said that the amendment has delayed passage of the measure. It would, he said "include layoffs due to a shortage of money in school district budgets" as a cause for such layoffs. The MFT, he said, opposes the amendment.

Winkels said his organization believes it is mandatory that the bill, without the MSBA provision be enacted into law "to protect the rights of teachers who have worked long and hard in the various school districts of the state."

GI Advance For Summer School Is Authorized

Veterans attending institutional school training under the G.I. Bill, and who would like to receive an advance payment for summer school enrollment, may apply for advance payment by requesting the school to certify summer enrollment to the VA.

Another method of applying for advance payment is to notify the VA in writing that you have been accepted by the school for the summer term and that you have notified the school of your intention to re-enroll. Also, tell the VA the beginning and ending dates of the summer term and the number of credit or clock hours you will be taking.

If either procedure is followed, an advance payment check can be mailed to the school for delivery upon registration, but not more than 30 days before the term is scheduled to start.

Advance payment will be for the month or part of a month in which the enrollment period will begin, plus the allowance for the next month.

Thought For The Day

A brilliant professor at the University of California after hearing a man who was enthusiastic about his religion, said. "I'd like to get the feel of a faith like that." So many people feel that way. Why does fiath escape them? Hans Denk wrote this prayer:

"O my God, how does it happen in this poor old world that Thou art so great and yet nobody finds Thee, that Thou callest so loudly and nobody hears Thee, that Thou art so near and nobody feels Thee, that Thou givest Thyself to everybody and nobody knows Thy Name? Men flee from Thee and say they cannot find Thee; they turn their backs and say they cannot see Thee; they stop their ears and say they cannot hear Thee."

Before You Call . . .

Today's issue of the Times contains a special State Tournament Section designed to offer congratulations to the Thief River Falls Prowler basketball team on winning the Region 8 tournament championship and best wishes for the state tournament which begins on Thursday.

We thought you might like to know a little bit about what goes into the making of such a special section. Before you call to ask why we did or didn't do something, read the following:

First, the Prowlers had to win the tournament. We thought they could, believed they should, prayed they would. That turned out good. But we had to take a few calculated gambles and exert quite a bit of extra effort to produce that special section.

In our opinion, a process color photograph was one of the keys to an attractive section. We do not have equipment to make color separation negatives which are required for process color printing, nor do we develop color film in our own darkroom. This meant dealing with at least two specialized out-of-town companies.

Mike Lundgren, our sports editor, took the color photo as soon as the Prowlers won the District 31 title. We sent the film to a Minneapolis company and also called them by phone to request special handling and quick service. They were to develop the film negatives, make conversions to 4x5 transparencies (slides) and ship them to a Fargo, N. D., company.

We called the Fargo firm to tell them what we needed and to also request special and speedy handling in making the separations and getting them to us. The procedure which would normally take three weeks was thus accomplished in six days, thanks to understanding people and excellent cooperation.

With some $100 or more already invested in film, processing, separations and telephone calls, we had to wait to contact advertisers until the Prowlers won the Region 8 title Saturday night. Heartened by the Prowler win over Mahnomen in the first round Friday, we made some contacts on an "if" basis Saturday. Nearly all of the contacts were otherwise made on Monday—after the win—and the ads were drawn up that afternoon—after our regular Monday paper was published.

Because use of four color process restricts the number of pages we can run on our press to four regular newspaper pages or an eight-page tabloid (which we selected), the special section with color photo required an extra press run and offered a limited amount of space.

Display ads with photos of Prowler players and Coach Lee Swanson proved so popular that most advertisers were not given an opportunity to purchase one. We began our contacts from both ends of the alphabet with Mike Lundgren and Dennis Johnson doing the calling. They soon filled the space available for display advertising, and that meant no more could be offered.

Because of the limited amount of space and time, many advertisers who would have liked larger ads were compelled to participate in the listing in the center of the section. We are sorry there was no alternative known to us to do things more equitably or differently within the afore-mentioned confines of time and space.

Special effort to get the section ready and printed Tuesday was also given by our computer typesetting operator Mike Johnson, compositors Leif Erickson and Jim Rude, offset cameraman Bill Mehrkens and pressman Harry Tollefson.

There may have been ways we could have done things better or different, but we feel we conveyed the support of the local community to the Prowlers as they enter state tournament competition against Waseca.

Go, Blue....show'em that Prowler Power!

Confusing Statistics

"Figures don't lie, but liars figure." That bit of colloquial expressionism holds a great deal of truth as well as common sense. Many times we are overly impressed with statistics tossed at us by people who want to "prove" a point or fortify an opinion.

Quite often, we feel, the person using the statistics just doesn't take the time to think them through but accepts them at face value and uses them as a basis for argument. That's probably what happened to Sen. Walter Mondale or whoever writes his column in a recent offering.

"Up until last year, the number of wealthy tax avoiders had been declining steadily, from 394 non-taxpayers making over $100,000 in 1970 to 276 in 1971," the senator is quoted as saying. The number reportedly has increased to 402 in 1972.

The jump from 276 in 1971 to 402 in 1972 is considered significant. The difference is 126 people. But the previous year the drop from 394 to 276 (118 people) is considered to be a steady decline. There seems to be some legitimate question of interpretation here, if not an attempt to deceive.

We don't believe any reputable statistician would take one year's figures and on that basis determine that "up until last year, the number....had been declining steadily...." It would seem necessary to use a much longer period of time to establish any trend of significant nature or to project any future situation.

Perhaps other statistics not explained or used support Sen. Mondale's contentions, but we think those that he chose are quite flimsy.

Tax avoidance to the degree he noted is certainly, as he says, an injustice of our present tax system. Some loopholes should probably be plugged. The reasoning is possibly right but the supporting evidence is pitifully weak.

Talk About Fringes!

In a magnanimous display of personal self-sacrifice, members of Congress recently decided not to accept the built-in pay raise which they had voted for themselves two years ago. Many of them will still insist that the $42,500 per year is not an excessive base pay for the position. That can be debated.

But, as columnist John Meyer points out in the Detroit Lakes newspaper, "I don't see any of them telling you about the fringe benefits the job of Representative or Senator brings." Here is a partial listing:

Liberal retirement benefits after five years service. They receive $5,312.50 annually for five years service. Top pension: $34,000 a year after 32 years of service.

Rent-free offices: one in Washington and as many as three back home.

Salary allowance for staff, based on number of constituents. Top allowance: $586,160 for senators, $165,168 for house members.

Free mailing privileges on "office business" mail, plus allowances for airmail and special delivery—up to $1,520 a year for senators, $910 for representatives.

More than 300 hours of free long distance calls.

Telegram allowance based on number of constituents—as high as $20,000 a year for senators from largest states.

Stationery allowance of up to $4,250 for house members, up to $5,000 for senators at special cut-rate stores on Capitol Hill.

Free official round trips home—18 a year for house members, a much greater number for senators, based on a complex formula. In addition: travel allowances of 20 cents a mile for getting to and from Washington at the start and finish of session. And: an allowance of $50 a day while on official business overseas.

Up to $3,000 a year tax deduction for living costs in Washington.

Free underground parking on Capitol Hill.

Free emergency medical care from physicians and nurses at Capitol Hill medical center, which contains examination room, laboratory.

Free drugs if prescribed by Capitol physicians.

Medical care in any military hospital at a flat fee of $61 a day regardless of treatment.

Government-subsidized health insurance plan.

A $45,000 life insurance policy at special rates, plus widows benefits equal to one year's salary—$42,500.

Free swimming pools and gyms—one for senators, one for house members.

Free steam rooms, masseurs, physiotherapy.

Free haircuts for senators, $2 for representatives, at special barber shops; beauty shops at reduced rates for female members.

Free flowers for offices, entertaining.

Reduced-rate meals, free of sales tax, at private dining rooms in Capitol.

TV and radio studio service, at discount rates.

Free access to congressional research service for help on speeches, answering constituents' queries.

Borrowed Nonsense

Farm Boss (to tardy employee): "You should have been here at 7:30."

Hired Hand: "Why, what happened?"

Statistics show that if you think you work harder than the average farmer—you're the average farmer.

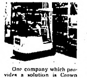
INDUSTRY HAS A NEW POLLUTION SOLUTION

Sometimes it seems as if we have a world of pollution problems. We are constantly hearing about fish kills...oil slicks...factory emissions and big-city smog.

We seldom hear about the factory worker and his polluted environment. But for eight hours a day, he is bombarded by noise and fumes from plant equipment and machinery. What is industry doing about the man's pollution problems?



One company which provides a solution is Crown Controls Corporation. It manufactures electric fork-lift trucks for use in factories and warehouses. These trucks have no exhaust fumes, and are virtually noiseless.

Productivity goes up when levels go down—which is why many factories are switching to the new electric lift trucks. Other anti-pollution devices are also being tried...as industry attempts to provide its workers with a more congenial atmosphere.

notes from the governor

The energy crisis may not have ended the American love affair with the automobile, but it has altered that relationship in certain basic respects.

We are buying smaller, more economical cars. We are thinking less about long-distance driving vacations and more about vacations closer to home. We are becoming less insistent on driving the family car to and from work, and more receptive to riding in car pools. And we are accelerating efforts to develop alternatives to the private passenger car as our basic mode of transportation.

One such effort is currently under consideration by the Minnesota Legislature. The bill, part of my 1974 legislative program, provides for a $6 million appropriation from the state's General Fund for two principal purposes: first, to help subsidize community transit systems where they presently exist, and second, to help finance demonstration transportation projects in areas where they do not.

The allocation formula calls for $4.5 million to be spent in the Twin Cities area, where the great bulk of the transit ridership and equipment in Minnesota is concentrated, and $1.5 million to be spent in outstate areas.

The guidelines for expenditure of the appropriation are quite flexible. Twelve cities outside the metropolitan area now have bus systems, many of which are in a weak financial condition. These would be eligible for a portion of the $1 million reserved for subsidy purposes. Intercity transportation projects such as the bus route currently being considered between Hutchinson and the Twin Cities could be funded. Morris, which has no bus system but which helps subsidize a local taxi service, could receive funds.

In addition, a range of demonstration projects could be funded from the $500,000 set aside for this purpose.

The City Council of Austin, for example, is considering the development of an entirely new transit system. One mode under discussion is a "dial-a-ride" system utilizing telephone-equipped buses.

There are approximately 7,000 school buses in the state, half of which are publicly owned. A demonstration project designed to more fully utilize school buses could be funded.

I believe the bill would benefit the entire state. I hope to be able to sign it into law very soon.

HIGHLANDING.

Albert McCullough and Jake were Friday dinner and lunch guests at the Florence Hamm home.

Mr. and Mrs. Orlin Hanson and Dean visited Sunday afternoon at the Harold Haugen home. They also brought birthday greetings and birthday cake for Mrs. Haugen on her birthday. Others bringing birthday greetings were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Iverson.

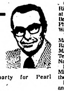
Senate Report

— by —

Senator Richard Fitzsimons
Minnesota District One



The Senate and House are making a determined effort this week to adjourn on March 25.

Among the bills receiving favorable consideration in the Senate was a bill allowing cars from out of state the use of studded tires while traveling in Minnesota. I was a co-author of this bill.

The Senate debated a bill calling for a $200 million bond issue for highway and mass-transit construction for several hours on Wednesday of last week. The bill was defeated after this long debate. I opposed the bill at this time because it gave no promise for Northwest Minnesota in meeting our highway needs.

The portion of the bill dealing with bonds for outstate highway construction faces a court test as to its constitutionality which will mean a long delay even if they were declared constitutional. I much prefer an increase in the gasoline tax to provide the badly needed funds on a pay-as-you-go basis immediately to get at solving our highway needs in Northwest Minnesota. Several other highway funding proposals will be debated in the coming week and I hope something will come out of this session.

One of the major bills remaining in conference committee is the campaign reform bill. Some of the things this bill presumes to do leave a lot to be desired.

I dislike the one dollar checkoff that must be designated for one of the political parties or the general campaign fund. I would much prefer that all of it go into the general campaign funds, as does the federal checkoff.

A provision allowing unions to contribute dues to political campaigns without members permission is a great shortcoming in the bill.

Another problem with the bill is that it fails to limit or to define adequately the number of groups or associatons which can contribute to a political campaign.

The law now says committees can contribute up to 10 per cent of a candidate's limit; but because it does not restrict the number of committees, in effect, there is no limit.

This bill does contain many excellent features and is a step in the right direction. I would hope some of these undesirable features would be removed in conference committee, but I am not optimistic about that happening.

HIGHLANDING.

Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Percy Halverson were visitors at the Ernest Heden home.

Mrs. Danny Johnson and April were Monday morning coffee guests with Ellen Horachek.

Thursday Alvin Hyland and Bobby Halverson were dinner guests at the Clifford Vad home.

Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Hank Hermanson, Dianne, Denise, and Barb were supper guests at the Rodney Hoffman home later they all attended the birthday party for Pearl Kolestrand.

BOTH DART 6 AND V8
BEAT NOVA 6
IN USAC MILEAGE TEST.

That's what happened in the "Miles-Per-Gallon Showdown" conducted and certified by the United States Auto Club in January, 1974.

A six-cylinder Dart Sport beat a six-cylinder Nova by 8.1 miles per gallon. Even a Dart Sport V8 got 2.9 more miles per gallon than the six-cylinder Nova. Now, that's economy!

Check it out at the Dodge Boys'. All three cars were 1974 models with manual transmissions. The Dart Sport Six also had the new standard 2.76 rear axle. The results were obtained by nonprofessional drivers in light city traffic conditions (a 108-mile distance averaging 25 mph).

Thought For The Day

A brilliant professor at the University of California after hearing a man who was enthusiastic about his religion, said. "I'd like to get the feel of a faith like that." So many people feel that way. Why does fiath escape them? Hans Denk wrote this prayer:

"O my God, how does it happen in this poor old world that Thou art so great and yet nobody finds Thee, that Thou callest so loudly and nobody hears Thee, that Thou art so near and nobody feels Thee, that Thou givest Thyself to everybody and nobody knows Thy Name? Men flee from Thee and say they cannot find Thee; they turn their backs and say they cannot see Thee; they stop their ears and say they cannot hear Thee."

Before You Call . . .

Today's issue of the Times contains a special State Tournament Section designed to offer congratulations to the Thief River Falls Prowler basketball team on winning the Region 8 tournament championship and best wishes for the state tournament which begins on Thursday.

We thought you might like to know a little bit about what goes into the making of such a special section. Before you call to ask why we did or didn't do something, read the following:

First, the Prowlers had to win the tournament. We thought they could, believed they should, prayed they would. That turned out good. But we had to take a few calculated gambles and exert quite a bit of extra effort to produce that special section.

In our opinion, a process color photograph was one of the keys to an attractive section. We do not have equipment to make color separation negatives which are required for process color printing, nor do we develop color film in our own darkroom. This meant dealing with at least two specialized out-of-town companies.

Mike Lundgren, our sports editor, took the color photo as soon as the Prowlers won the District 31 title. We sent the film to a Minneapolis company and also called them by phone to request special handling and quick service. They were to develop the film negatives, make conversions to 4x5 transparencies (slides) and ship them to a Fargo, N. D., company.

We called the Fargo firm to tell them what we needed and to also request special and speedy handling in making the separations and getting them to us. The procedure which would normally take three weeks was thus accomplished in six days, thanks to understanding people and excellent cooperation.

With some $100 or more already invested in film, processing, separations and telephone calls, we had to wait to contact advertisers until the Prowlers won the Region 8 title Saturday night. Heartened by the Prowler win over Mahnomen in the first round Friday, we made some contacts on an "if" basis Saturday. Nearly all of the contacts were otherwise made on Monday—after the win—and the ads were drawn up that afternoon—after our regular Monday paper was published.

Because use of four color process restricts the number of pages we can run on our press to four regular newspaper pages or an eight-page tabloid (which we selected), the special section with color photo required an extra press run and offered a limited amount of space.

Display ads with photos of Prowler players and Coach Lee Swanson proved so popular that most advertisers were not given an opportunity to purchase one. We began our contacts from both ends of the alphabet with Mike Lundgren and Dennis Johnson doing the calling. They soon filled the space available for display advertising, and that meant no more could be offered.

Because of the limited amount of space and time, many advertisers who would have liked larger ads were compelled to participate in the listing in the center of the section. We are sorry there was no alternative known to us to do things more equitably or differently within the afore-mentioned confines of time and space.

Special effort to get the section ready and printed Tuesday was also given by our computer typesetting operator Mike Johnson, compositors Leif Erickson and Jim Rude, offset cameraman Bill Mehrkens and pressman Harry Tollefson.

There may have been ways we could have done things better or different, but we feel we conveyed the support of the local community to the Prowlers as they enter state tournament competition against Waseca.

Go, Blue....show'em that Prowler Power!

Confusing Statistics

"Figures don't lie, but liars figure." That bit of colloquial expressionism holds a great deal of truth as well as common sense. Many times we are overly impressed with statistics tossed at us by people who want to "prove" a point or fortify an opinion.

Quite often, we feel, the person using the statistics just doesn't take the time to think them through but accepts them at face value and uses them as a basis for argument. That's probably what happened to Sen. Walter Mondale or whoever writes his column in a recent offering.

"Up until last year, the number of wealthy tax avoiders had been declining steadily, from 394 non-taxpayers making over $100,000 in 1970 to 276 in 1971," the senator is quoted as saying. The number reportedly has increased to 402 in 1972.

The jump from 276 in 1971 to 402 in 1972 is considered significant. The difference is 126 people. But the previous year the drop from 394 to 276 (118 people) is considered to be a steady decline. There seems to be some legitimate question of interpretation here, if not an attempt to deceive.

We don't believe any reputable statistician would take one year's figures and on that basis determine that "up until last year, the number....had been declining steadily...." It would seem necessary to use a much longer period of time to establish any trend of significant nature or to project any future situation.

Perhaps other statistics not explained or used support Sen. Mondale's contentions, but we think those that he chose are quite flimsy.

Tax avoidance to the degree he noted is certainly, as he says, an injustice of our present tax system. Some loopholes should probably be plugged. The reasoning is possibly right but the supporting evidence is pitifully weak.

Talk About Fringes!

In a magnanimous display of personal self-sacrifice, members of Congress recently decided not to accept the built-in pay raise which they had voted for themselves two years ago. Many of them will still insist that the $42,500 per year is not an excessive base pay for the position. That can be debated.

But, as columnist John Meyer points out in the Detroit Lakes newspaper, "I don't see any of them telling you about the fringe benefits the job of Representative or Senator brings." Here is a partial listing:

Liberal retirement benefits after five years service. They receive $5,312.50 annually for five years service. Top pension: $34,000 a year after 32 years of service.

Rent-free offices: one in Washington and as many as three back home.

Salary allowance for staff, based on number of constituents. Top allowance: $586,160 for senators, $165,168 for house members.

Free mailing privileges on "office business" mail, plus allowances for airmail and special delivery—up to $1,520 a year for senators, $910 for representatives.

More than 300 hours of free long distance calls.

Telegram allowance based on number of constituents—as high as $20,000 a year for senators from largest states.

Stationery allowance of up to $4,250 for house members, up to $5,000 for senators at special cut-rate stores on Capitol Hill.

Free official round trips home—18 a year for house members, a much greater number for senators, based on a complex formula. In addition: travel allowances of 20 cents a mile for getting to and from Washington at the start and finish of session. And: an allowance of $50 a day while on official business overseas.

Up to $3,000 a year tax deduction for living costs in Washington.

Free underground parking on Capitol Hill.

Free emergency medical care from physicians and nurses at Capitol Hill medical center, which contains examination room, laboratory.

Free drugs if prescribed by Capitol physicians.

Medical care in any military hospital at a flat fee of $61 a day regardless of treatment.

Government-subsidized health insurance plan.

A $45,000 life insurance policy at special rates, plus widows benefits equal to one year's salary—$42,500.

Free swimming pools and gyms—one for senators, one for house members.

Free steam rooms, masseurs, physiotherapy.

Free haircuts for senators, $2 for representatives, at special barber shops; beauty shops at reduced rates for female members.

Free flowers for offices, entertaining.

Reduced-rate meals, free of sales tax, at private dining rooms in Capitol.

TV and radio studio service, at discount rates.

Free access to congressional research service for help on speeches, answering constituents' queries.

Borrowed Nonsense

Farm Boss (to tardy employee): "You should have been here at 7:30."
Hired Hand: "Why, what happened?"

Statistics show that if you think you work harder than the average farmer—you're the average farmer.

notes from the governor

The energy crisis may not have ended the American love affair with the automobile, but it has altered that relationship in certain basic respects.

We are buying smaller, more economical cars. We are thinking less about long-distance driving vacations and more about vacations closer to home. We are becoming less insistent on driving the family car to and from work, and more receptive to riding in car pools. And we are accelerating efforts to develop alternatives to the private passenger car as our basic mode of transportation.

One such effort is currently under consideration by the Minnesota Legislature. The bill, part of my 1974 legislative program, provides for a $6 million appropriation from the state's General Fund for two principal purposes: first, to help subsidize community transit systems where they presently exist, and second, to help finance demonstration transportation projects in areas where they do not.

The allocation formula calls for $4.5 million to be spent in the Twin Cities area, where the great bulk of the transit ridership and equipment in Minnesota is concentrated, and $1.5 million to be spent in outstate areas.

The guidelines for expenditure of the appropriation are quite flexible. Twelve cities outside the metropolitan area now have bus systems, many of which are in a weak financial condition. These would be eligible for a portion of the $1 million reserved for subsidy purposes. Intercity transportation projects such as the bus route currently being considered between Hutchinson and the Twin Cities could be funded. Morris, which has no bus system but which helps subsidize a local taxi service, could receive funds.

In addition, a range of demonstration projects could be funded from the $500,000 set aside for this purpose.

The City Council of Austin, for example, is considering the development of an entirely new transit system. One mode under discussion is a "dial-a-ride" system utilizing telephone-equipped buses.

There are approximately 7,000 school buses in the state, half of which are publicly owned. A demonstration project designed to more fully utilize school buses could be funded.

I believe the bill would benefit the entire state. I hope to be able to sign it into law very soon.

INDUSTRY HAS A NEW POLLUTION SOLUTION

Sometimes it seems as if we have a world of pollution problems. We are constantly hearing about fish kills...oil slicks...factory emissions and big-city smog.

We seldom hear about the factory worker and his polluted environment. But for eight hours a day, he is bombarded by noise and fumes from plant equipment and machinery. What is industry doing about the man's pollution problems?

One company which provides a solution is Crown Controls Corporation. It manufactures electric fork-lift trucks for use in factories and warehouses. These trucks have no exhaust fumes, and are virtually noiseless.

Productivity goes up when levels go down—which is why many factories are switching to the new electric lift trucks. Other anti-pollution devices are also being tried...as industry attempts to provide its workers with a more congenial atmosphere.

HIGHLANDING.

Senate Report

— by —

Senator Richard Fitzsimons
Minnesota District One

The Senate and House are making a determined effort this week to adjourn on March 25.

Among the bills receiving favorable consideration in the Senate was a bill allowing cars from out of state the use of studded tires while traveling in Minnesota. I was a co-author of this bill.

The Senate debated a bill calling for a $200 million bond issue for highway and mass-transit construction for several hours on Wednesday of last week. The bill was defeated after this long debate. I opposed the bill at this time because it gave no promise for Northwest Minnesota in meeting our highway needs.

The portion of the bill dealing with bonds for outstate highway construction faces a court test as to its constitutionality which will mean a long delay even if they were declared constitutional. I much prefer an increase in the gasoline tax to provide the badly needed funds on a pay-as-you-go basis immediately to get at solving our highway needs in Northwest Minnesota. Several other highway funding proposals will be debated in the coming week and I hope something will come out of this session.

One of the major bills remaining in conference committee is the campaign reform bill. Some of the things this bill presumes to do leave a lot to be desired.

I dislike the one dollar checkoff that must be designated for one of the political parties or the general campaign fund. I would much prefer that all of it go into the general campaign funds, as does the federal checkoff.

A provision allowing unions to contribute dues to political campaigns without members permission is a great shortcoming in the bill.

Another problem with the bill is that it fails to limit or to define adequately the number of groups or associatons which can contribute to a political campaign.

The law now says committees can contribute up to 10 per cent of a candidate's limit; but because it does not restrict the number of committees, in effect; there is no limit.

This bill does contain many excellent features and is a step in the right direction. I would hope some of these undesirable features would be removed in conference committee, but I am not optimistic about that happening.

HIGHLANDING.

Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Percy Halverson were visitors at the Ernest Heden home.

Mrs. Danny Johnson and April were Monday morning coffee guests with Ellen Horachek.

Thursday Alvin Hyland and Bobby Halverson were dinner guests at the Clifford Vad home.

Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Hank Hermanson, Dianne, Denise, and Barb were supper guests at the Rodney Hoffman home later they all attended the birthday party for Pearl Kolestrand.

Archaeological Survey In Road Areas Reduced

Deferment of federal-aid highway improvements, occasioned by lengthy environmental protection procedures, cut the budget of the trunk highway archeological reconnaissance survey from $69,000 in 1972 to only $25,000 in 1973. Federal aid accounts for some 70 per cent of the cost of the program. Geared to federal-aid highway financing, the archeological survey suffered a commensurate setback.

Despite the shortage of funds, this joint effort of the state highway department, Minnesota historical society, and U. S. department of transporation carried out field surveys on 20 sites last year, consolidated and evaluated a large volume of 1972 data on the Red Wing area, continued a revision of an "Atlas of Minnesota Archeological and Historical Sites" and met with engineering personnel of all nine outlying highway district offices.

With regard to project delays which have depleted operating funds for the survey, deputy highway commissioner and chief engineer W. S. Ekern stated that while it took three to four years to bring a highway project to the contract letting stage a few years ago, new environmental reporting requirements have now extended preliminary work to about eight years.

The task of the archeological survey is limited to the discovery, preliminary evaluation and preservation of sites warranting further professional investigation by scientists and scholars of scientific, and historical institutions.

Field surveys were carried out on 20 sites last year. Limited exploratory excavations were made on 14 of them. Three sites appeared to be directly endangered by proposed improvements, while five of them lying outside construction limits would be periled if highway alignment were changed.

Testing revealed that work could proceed without detriment to science or history, however. Generally, a find must contribute something new to the understanding and appraisal of our society or the culture of our forebears to quality for further investigation. A discovery of bison bones, for example, would not be a find of significance.

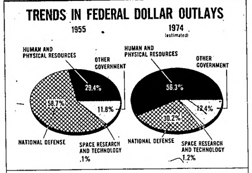
Considerable effort was made in 1973 to consolidate and evaluate the large volume of archeological data unearthed in exploring possible corridors for TH 61 near Red Wing. The data will soon be incorporated into a topographical map encompassing the Red Wing-Lake City region as an aid in plotting possible highway corridors in that archeologically rich area. Red Wing, Hastings, Shakopee and Granite Falls are areas of utmost importance that will require further surveys and considerable testing, according to highway archeologist Leslie Peterson.

While surveys in connection with possible routes for Interstate 94 in Washington county have not been completed as yet, Peterson said there are 31 sites recognized as potentially important there. The Grout house in Lakeland and the county courthouse in Stillwater are on the National Register of Historic Places, and four others in the St. Croix valley are on the state inventory of historic sites.

Residents of the St. Croix valley may be surprised to learn that the huge, loaf-shaped Bissell mounds northwest of Afton are not man-made, but natural formations left by a glacier.

In 1973 work continued on re-evaluating site information and updating the "Atlas of Minnesota Archeological and Historical Sites," compiled for use of Highway Department planning personnel and surveying crews in 1972. The revised version is expected to be ready in the near future.

In addition, meetings were held with engineering personnel in all nine outlying highway district offices last year to familiarize them with the program and establish mutually beneficial working relationships, Peterson said.



In less than two decades the proportion of federal outlays for National Defense and Human and Physical Resources has been reversed. Outlays for National Defense, as a percentage of the federal budget, have been cut in half. During the same period, the percentage of outlays for Human and Physical Resources have nearly doubled. These outlays cover education and manpower, health, income security, veterans benefits and services, agriculture and rural development, natural resources and environment, commerce and transportation, community development and housing.

The slight gain in space research and technology is due to the fact that the space program was just getting underway in 1955. This program peaked in 1966, and has been declining since that time.

Thief River Falls will be making its seventh appearance in the Minnesota state high school basketball tournament this week, but for the first time in history the Prowlers will be competing in the state class A portion of the event.

1974 will mark the fourth successive year that the Minnesota state high school league (MSHSL) has conducted a two class 16 team state tournament. Prior to 1971 the state classic was a single class eight team event.

Arguments have been offered both for and against the eight and 16 team tournaments. Ralph Anderson of the Becker County Record in Detroit Lakes offered his opinion about the class system in this recent article:

"A decade or so ago, there was tremendous pressure placed on the Minnesota state high school league about the conduct of its high school basketball championship.

Proponents of a class system insisted that Minnesota basketball ans were being deprived, that they weren't seeing the "cream of the crop" once the state tournament started. Most of these people, located in the Twin Cities metropolitan area, said that year after year many "super" teams—particularly in the Lake Conference—were losing out in the early stages of competition and that these teams certainly deserved spots in the state tournament.

Well, the Minnesota state high school league abided by the wishes of those seeking a class system and Minnesota has had class A and class AA basketball tournaments since 1971.

What's happened to the tournament situation in the state since that time is pathetic. The interest in the state tournament has been spread so far apart that the average basketball fan would have a hard time recalling which schools won the class A and class AA championships last March.

No longer will there be such stories as the Lynd farm boys who practiced basketball in the hay lofts and went to the state finals where they captured the imagination of the entire state.

No longer will there be the tale of little Edgerton, which took all the marbles in 1960 with conquests of giants Richfield in the semifinals and Austin in the finals.

At one time the Minnesota state high school basketball tournament was considered one of the greatest in the country because it was a single class, eight school affair that attracted the interest of every basketball fan in the state.

Until that type of tournament is resumed—and, unfortunately, that seems doubtful for many years—Minnesota must live with a watered-down version of a state high school cage tourney."

On the local scene the switch to the two class system has accomplished exactly what the MSHSL had in mind—offer more of the smaller schools an opportunity to compete in a state tournament.

There was only one change in the structure of region eight in the two class idea, but that single change was a big move with perennial region eight champion Bemidji being shuffled off to the Duluth and Iron Range area to compete in the large class AA region B.

Before Bemidji's reassignment to AA competition the Lumberjacks enjoyed a stranglehold on the district 29 championship and a near sure region eight crown year in and year out. In a span between 1933 and 1969 Bemidji won the district 29 tournament every year but four while picking up 24 region eight titles.

Since Bemidji's switch, four different teams have enjoyed the pleasure of winning a region eight championship, including East Grand Forks in 1971, Littlefork-Big Falls in 1972, Mahnomen in 1973 and Thief River Falls in 1974. In that respect the MSHSL two class idea has worked.

Congratulations

1974 Title Is First TRF Region Crown Since 1960

Thief River Falls' 1974 region eight championshp marked the first region crown won by a Prowler quint since the 1959-60 season.

Coached by Hartley Story, Thief River Falls finished the 1959-60 regular season schedule with a 12-6 record. The Prowlers snared the 1960 district 31 tournament crown by beating Goodridge 60-47, Red Lake Fals 69-47 and Crookston 47-38 in the title game. In the 1960 region eight tournament Thief River Falls defeated Argyle 62-53 and Bemidji 60-53 in the championship game.

Thief River Falls' 1960 state tournament results included only a pair of losses, however, as the Prowlers dropped a first round 55-41 decision to Austin and a 48-38 consolation round verdict to Melrose.

Civic Center Hosts 1974 State Meet

Minnesota state high school league basketball tournament, annually one of Minnesota's largest sport attractions, will be conducted in the new St. Paul Civic Center in downtown St. Paul for the first time this year. The tournament started today (Wednesday) and will continue through Saturday, with the playoff game between the A and AA champions scheduled for Monday.

The Civic Center is the sixth site for the high school tournament. It was initially held at Carleton college in Northfield from 1913 to 1922. From 1923 to 1927 it moved to the Kenwood armory in Minneapolis and then to the University of Minnesota fieldhouse from 1928 to 1932. The Minneapolis municipal auditorium housed the tournament from 1933 to 1938 and again in 1941. The St. Paul auditorium was the locale in 1939, 1940 and 1944. The tournament moved into Williams arena at the University of Minnesota in 1942 to 1943 and from 1945 to 1973.

The new Civic Center, billed as the "Showplace of the Northwest", is just one year old. Basketball fans will enjoy the comfort of the 16,000 upholstered, theatre-type seats. A fully automated eight-level parking ramp for over 1,600 vehicles and its connecting pedestrian walkway is only a few feet from the Civic Center. There is surface parking surrounding the Civic Center for 5,000 cars. New freeway systems provide easy access to the Civic Center from all areas of the state.

6 Persons Involved In Losing 'Streaks'

Five incidents of "streaking"—a current fad of making a rapid public appearance in the nude—have occurred in Thief River Falls during the past several weeks and will result in county court appearances (fully clothed) for those apprehended by the local police department. Those who participate in the incidents are being charged with indecent exposure.

Four of the five incidents—which have involved five males and one female—have taken place at the Kat Haus, a newly-opened business which serves 3.2 beer and lunches and is located at the corner of Third street and Knight avenue. The other happened at the Country Kitchen restaurant on highway 59 south and was one of the first two streaking attempts locally.

Most recent escapade involved two males who raced in the raw in the front door and out the back door of the Kat Haus shortly after 1 a.m. Friday. Manager Collin Jensen and employees gave chase, noted the license number and the description of the car into which the duo disappeared and notified the local police department which made the apprehension.

Charged with indecent exposure and jailed over night as a result were James Hofius, 21, and Arnie Kiefenheim, 22, both of Red Lake Falls. They were released Friday afternoon on bond of $200 each, with bond amount set by Judge J.A. Harren. There will be no county court session this week, and the cases are set for trial next Tuesday, April 2.

At least one other charge of indecent exposure as a result of a streaking episode at the Kat Haus will also be brought at that court session. That charge results from apprehension of a young man on March 18 who ran through the business unclothed and was pursued on foot for several blocks before taking refuge in a house. Police have requested that the name be withheld from publication pending serving of proper papers.

Police are also considering charges involving a man who reportedly removed his clothing in a restroom at the Kat Haus and strolled back into the business area; a young woman who opened her coat in the same business pace to reveal that she was unclothed; and a man who appeared in the nude at the Country Kitchen restaurant.

"We fully intend to prosecute every person involved in similar incidents," stated Kenneth Froschheiser, acting chief of police for Thief River Falls. "What may seem to some as simply a prank is a violation of the statutes and will be treated as a misdemeanor. Our department would appreciate being notified of any streaking incidents so that the appropriate action can be taken."

Collin Jensen, operator of the Kat Haus, takes a dim view of having the new business used as a focal point for the streaking activity. "We are trying to establish ourselves as a clean business place," Jensen said, "and we believe our actions in the first few incidents indicate that we intend to prosecute anyone who creates such a disturbance. We certainly aren't looking for this type of publicity or reputation."

Bob Bergland To Seek Third Term As Congressman

At a press conference recently, Minnesota's 7th district Congressman Bob Bergland officially announced he is seeking re-election to a third term in the U.S. House of Representatives. Bergland said he would "actively seek" DFL endorsement at the party's district convention scheduled for April 27-28 in Fergus Falls and "if nominated, conduct a vigorous campaign for victory" in the November general election.

In a prepared statement, Bergland acknowledged that "the image of all elected officials has been greatly diminished over the past two years and that the next Congress must face massive problems with our resources spread thin. Nonetheless, "I welcome the challenges and am confident that the voters of the 7th District can judge my performance as an individual and not in the popular but negative generalities of the times."

Bergland was first elected, after an unsuccessful bid two years earlier, in 1970 when he defeated 12-year incumbent Odin Langen of Kennedy by 12,000 votes. He was reelected in 1970 with nearly 60 per cent of the vote.

BPW Club Will Sponsor Drive For Local Blood Bank

At the dinner-meeting of the Thief River Falls Business and Professional Women's club held Tuesday at the Aurelia Room, donations were made, by-laws were revised and members voted to again sponsor the annual membership drive for the local Blood Bank.

Donations were for $25 each to the Equal Rights Amendment Ratification fund and to District I for sponsoring a candidate for the young career woman contest. Due to the late arrival of material announcing the contest, the local club decided not to sponsor a candidate.

Ruth Wilson, chairman of the By-laws committee, presented that revised laws which had been approved by the state. Under the revision, the election of officers will be held at the April Meeting instead of in May. Appointed to serve on the nominating committee were Annette Bergen, chairman, Ruth Wilson and JoAnn Wedul.

Following a request from the local Blood Bank, the club voted to again sponsor the annual membership drive for the association. Selected as co-chairmen of the drive were Ruth Wilson and Clarice Collins.

It was also decided that the annual scholarships would not be presented until May. Inga Shetler, finance chairman, reported that a rummage sale has been scheduled at the Eagles club for the last part of April. She asked all members to assist in the project.

Announcement was also given of the District I meeting to be held at Park Rapids. Lovanell Kraemer, Ruth Wilson, Connie Ferber and Ardith Johnson announced that they planned to attend.

The meeting began with a musical program presented by a group of girls from the Oak Ridge church: Rhonda Bach, Robin Bach, Diane Bach, Celeste Woswick, Deanne Woswick, Jodi Vatsaas and Julie Votsaas. Serving on the program committee were Annette Bergen, chairman, Ruth Wison and Beverly Hamre. Lovanell Kraemer led the collect and President Ardith Johnson presided at the meeting.

Preventing Crime Stressed By Law Officials And NRT

Methods of helping decrease crime in our city were stressed at a meeting Wednesday at the Public Library sponsored by the Northland Retired Teachers. Ways in which people can help prevent crimes or assist in capturing the criminals were also given.

The meeting was highlighted by a panel discussion on Community and Police Relations. Serving on the panel were Acting Chief of Police Kenneth Froschheiser, County Sheriff Charles Richards, president of Northland Retired Teachers Myrtle Myrin, and program chairman, Mrs. Millard Peterson. Also present at the meeting and speaking briefly to the group was Mayor Robert Carlson.

Sheriff Richards explained a marking system and displayed an electric engraving tool, used in marking articles with a serial number or a personal identification number. After the articles have been marked, a sticker would be placed in a window or on the door and would act as a deterrent to prospective burglars. A check list of articles should be made and if the articles are stolen and recovered, identification could be readily made. Richards stated that this system has not as yet been put into operation in this city.

Froschheiser urged public cooperation with law enforcement departments. Especially stressed was reporting suspicious character lurking in the neighborhood. He stated that since witnesses play such a vital part in making an arrest, he asked that people should try to remember at least two identifying features of a person or vehicle. In identifying a person, he suggested making an arrest, he asked that people should try to remember at least two identifying features of a person or vehicle. In identifying a person, he suggested height comparison to your own; special peculiarities, such as one arm, a limp, or scar; clothes worn, if they were neat or dirty, or an outstanding feature, such as white socks, or back pocket torn off; and peculiar speech, such distinctive expressions or use of nicknames. In identifying a vehicle, color, make, dents, and broken windows are helpful, but of greatest importance is the license number. If it isn't possible to write down the numbers, keep repeating the last numbers until memorized. He stated that the identity of witnesses is held in strict confidence.

A question and answer period followed the panel presentation. Several brochures and phamplets were also distributed. Included were "30 ways you can prevent crime," "Minnesota Crime Watch," "1973 Legislative objectives and state guidelines," and "Your Retirement anti-crime guide". Also distributed wre sheets listing property together with serial numbers of the articles and other identifications, and a vacation check list reminding owners of precautions to make before leaving on a vacation, such as making arrangements to have someone care for the lawn, papers and mail.

At the business session held prior to the public meeting, Mrs. Edna Casey of Red Lake Falls reported on the Executive and legislative meeting held in January at the Curtis hotel in Minneapolis. She stated that a bill is now being considered that would direct all retiring teachers into the formula plan, while those already retired on another plan, half of their pensions would be put into the formula plan. Mrs. Casey urged tht everyone write their congressmen asking them to support this bill.

She stated that Senator John C. Chenoweth, vice president of the Senate pension committee, had spoken to the group, giving the information that the 25 per cent increase given this year to the retired teachers came from assets accumulated for many years. She concluded by stating that at present there are almost 2,000 state members of the Retired Teachers association and of those 664 are life members.

Lunch was served following the meeting by president Myrtle Myrin.

Tuberculin Test Program Shows Good Results

Tuberculin testing program was just completed in the first grade in St. Hilaire, and in grades one, seven and 12 in Thief River Falls schools.

A total of 693 students was tested, with the discovery of one new reactor. The follow-up chest X-ray showed no evidence of disease. "We now have a total of six positive reactors among the entire student body of District 564, stated Mrs. Margaret Race, school nurse.

"It is interesting to note that in 1952 the active tuberculosis rate in Minnesota per 100,000 was 27.1. In 1972 the rate per 100,000 was down to 5.2," she added.

Gas Supply Gets Worse In State During Week

Gasoline supplies took a dramatic downward turn this past week, according to the Minnesota state automobile association and its affiliated clubs, with 32 per cent of the stations contacted reporting deteriorating supply conditions.

Compared with last week's survey of 86 service stations around the state, gasoline supplies have declined by about 12 per cent.

The survey found the average price paid for a gallon of regular gasoline was 51.1 cents, about the same as the previous week. The average price of premium this past week was 55.7 cents, also essentially unchanged from the week before.

Station hours seem to be remaining stable with still more than 60 per cent of the stations surveyed staying open past 7 p.m. on weekdays and Saturdays. Only 17 per cent of the stations reported they were open on Sundays. This is down from 21 per cent last week.

Limiting of sales to customers has almost disappeared in Minnesota, according to the survey, with only five per cent maintaining either a dollar or gallon limit on sales. However, if the supply continues to worsen, there may be a resurgence of limiting at the pumps, operators say.

A majority of the stations contacted reported their allocation of gasoline has been cut for March. But the worsening in the supply did not seem to be isolated to any one geographic area of the state. Many station operators said they expected state gasoline supplies to be very tight toward the end of the month.

Swanson, pictured at left, thanked his players, coaching staff and fans for a successful season and expressed appreciation for the crowd that turned out to welcome the team home from the state tournament. A number of cars met the Prowler bus south of the city at the Galaxie Twin theatre and formed a caravan to accompany the players to the Lincoln gymnasium. Donald L. Olson served as master of ceremonies for the program with comments given by Mayor Bob Carlson and Frank Womack, president of the local backcourt club. Team captains Kent Christensen and Duane Dicken were also interviewed.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

by Ellen M. Spray

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

Mrs. Erling Dahlen of Star township

Occasionally something happens that makes me see red; something so insignificant that it seems silly to waste time on it when there are so many major problems confronting the nation. According to a news report Wednesday evening, there is a group charging a newspaper in this state for discriminating against women because the newspaper prefers using Mrs. John (Mary) Doe instead of Mary Doe.

When women began the fight for Equal Rights, I supported their views in the getting equal pay for equal work. Regardless of sex or race, equal pay for equal work is a right that was long over-due. But this last action to strip me of my title, is absolutely ridiculous.

In my lifetime, I have had or been known by several titles. When I was born, I was given the name "Elin" and it is with fondness that I remember my father playing the guitar and singing in Swedish after we had gone to bed. My favorite song was "My little Elin, my daughter kind," (direct translation). Before I began school, my name was changed to Ellen, the American spelling, but throughout my lifetime I've been baby sister to four sisters and two brothers.

During high school days, I was known as "our school girl," indicating that I lived with the family in town doing the ironing, washing dishes, scrubbing floors, polishing furniture and baby sitting in exchange for my room and board. After high school, I attended a one-year course to become a rural teacher. There we were instructed that under no circumstances were we to allow our pupils to call us by our first name. It seemed odd at first to have "Miss" take the place of my first name, but the change was not offensive. Then I was married and changed my names completely and in place of a teacher, I became a wife, bride, daughter-in-law and sister-in-law. Then I became a mother or "Mom" and as the girls entered school, I was identified as their mother. Then came the distinquished title, "Grandma" and now for almost 10 years, I've been identified as "Ellen, at the Times." Through it all, I've had an identity. There have been times since marriage that I've had to sign my name according to law, but through it all, I've maintained my status as a married woman, the wife of the man I married. I have borne that title with pride. Now some group expects me to shed that title for the title of Ms meaning unknown female status.

My MRS. has in no way hindered me from being a Sunday school teacher, president of the Ladies Aid, Girl Scout leader, or from ringing door bells for Polio drives, heart fund, Cancer drive, Community Chest or United Fund. Nor did it interfere with obtaining a job when that became necessary. I am still a woman, a wife, a mother, grandmother and an employee. In my home, I'm the queen of my castle, my husband is the king, and together we share the throne. I am not ashamed of my status. I am not a Ms, nor a Madam X. I am a MRS.

Thanks Mrs. Dahlen for sharing your family's favorite casserole recipe with the readers of Kitchen Karnival.

Wild Rice Casserole

1 to 1½ cups wild rice, cooked until fluffy, changing water once
1 or 2 lbs. browned hamburger, or cooked ham, chicken or turkey
1 pkg. dry onion soup mix
1 or 2 cups diced celery, fried until clear in ½ cup butter
1 small can mushrooms
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 or 2 cups chicken or beef broth or water

Method: After rice is fluffy, drain and add the other ingredients. Bake in a 325 degree oven for one hour. Makes a three-quart casserole. Note. No salt is added as the soup mix and the canned soups provide that requirement.

Mrs. Dahlen stated that dinner rolls and a salad completes the meal. The Erling Dahlens live on a farm in Star township, near Goodridge. They are engaged in diversified farming, which includes raising beef cattle. Mrs. Dahlen stated that with gardening and taking care of the flowers, cooking and baking for the family, she has very little time for hobbies.

They have ten children. Two are married. David and his wife live in this city, and Elaine and her husband Ken Forbragd, recently returned to California where Ken was stationed with the Navy. They will make their home in Minneapolis; At home are Joel, who is in carpentry at AVTI; Jeff, who is in construction in this city; Carolyn, a junior at Goodridge high school, the twins: Kelly and Kevin, who are freshmen; Donna, a seventh grader; Leah, a third grader; and Steven, a first grader.

The family attends services at the Ekelund Lutheran church where Dahlen is a member of the church council and Mrs. Dahlen teaches Sunday school.

Only Half Of Taxpayers Have Filed Returns

With 701,118 federal income tax returns filed as of March 9 by Minnesota taxpayers, a little less than half of the total 1.5 million returns expected this year have been completed.

These were filed over a period of time exceeding two months. "With less than one month to go before the April 15 deadline, a lot of Minnesota taxpayers are going to have questions about federal income taxes," said F.S. Miceli, acting district director.

Internal Revenue service has a toll free number you can all from anywhere in the state, Miceli continued. You can get the answers to your tax questions early.

Miceli explained that on March 18, 2,930 calls were received. "We expect on April 14 to receive more calls than we did during our January peak which was approximately 7,500 calls in one day," said Miceli.

Now is the time to call the IRS at 800-652-9062 to get a prompt answer.

Spannaus Says Petroleum Field Not Competitive

Attorney General Warren Spannaus today released an interim report on the results of an investigation conducted by his office over the last several months into the nature and extent of competition in the petroleum industry.

Among the major conclusions stated in the Spannaus report is that there is a lack of healthy competition in the petroleum industry. The top eight companies control more than half of all crude oil production, and, perhaps more importantly, more than six per cent of all proven crude oil reserves. Accordingly, Spannaus announced his office has made tentative arrangements with the federal trade commission for members of his staff to work with the FTC in the prosecution of the FTC litigation that is already under way against the eight largest major oil companies.

Among other conclusions reached by Spannaus were the following:

Both state and federal legislation requiring reporting of meaningful data by petroleum industry members should be passed.

State legislation clarifying the attorney general's power to require information from persons suspected of violating state antitrust laws should be passed. In this regard, Spannaus said, he already has proposed legislation, which has passed the Minnesota House and has been approved by committee in the Senate.

Existing federal laws bearing on petroleum policies—the prorationing laws, import quotas, foreign tax credits and the depletion allowance—should be reexamined in view of their adverse effects on industry development and competition.

Spannaus said that in the course of his investigation members of his staff have collected documents from the federal government and Minnesota state government, have reviewed data submitted by the petroleum industry and have collected further information from a questionnaire mailed out to more than 1,000 Minnesota petroleum jobbers.

The interim report focuses on the national petroleum industry. Spannaus said he is examining the structure and practices of the industry in Minnesota, and will report his conclusions later.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q.—What is this "tele-care" I hear about at Veterans Administration hospitals?

A.—Specially-trained volunteers keep in contact by telephone with old or disabled veterans living alone at home. The calls provide companionship and check on whether the veteran has fallen and hurt himself, or whether his condition has worsened.

Q.—I hear the Veterans Administration medics are getting ready to "grow new arms and legs on amputees and regenerate hearts of people who have had heart attacks." Does this bring regeneration of the spinal cord any closer for paralyzed veterans?

1974 Traffic Deaths Decrease From Last Year

During the first 10 weeks of 1974, Minnesota traffic deaths were under the same period in 1973 by 40 lives, according to the Minnesota department of public safety. The first 10 weeks of 1973 saw a traffic toll of 132. The first 10 weeks of 1974, 92.

These figures include unofficial as well as official fatality reports. While late reports and delayed deaths may increase the 1974 figure somewhat, the increase is not expected to amount to more than three or four fatalities.

The most substantial improvement occurred in January, with 37 fatalities compared with 66 in January, 1973. February this year was a little worse than February of 1973, 41 compared with 38 a year ago. But February last year was one of the lowest in 10 years.

The toll during the first 10 days of March was exactly half of the toll in the same period of 1973, 14 compared with 28. This comparison is tentative, because some fatalities may yet be reported.

Since last March, with a toll of 74 for the full month, was unusually severe, this year's improvement may be expected to continue throughout the month. April of last year was also unusually severe.

Department of public safety observers theorize that this year's improvement is the product of a combination of factors such as reduced driving, and lower speeds, as well as continued educational and enforcement efforts.

LIEUTENANT Elizabeth Watson, Austin, is sworn in as the first woman officer in the Minnesota army national guard by Brigadier General William Cheeseman, deputy adjutant general for Minnesota. The swearing-in ceremony was conducted Saturday, March 9, at national guard headquarters at the veterans service building, St. Paul.—Minnesota National Guard Photo.

Minnesota Guard Receives First Woman Officer

First woman officer in the 116-year history of the Minnesota army national guard, Lieutenant Elizabeth Watson, reported for her first duty last week, assigned as a press officer with the 125th public information detachment at the adjutant general's office in the Capitol complex in St. Paul.

Women have been eligible to become members of the Minnesota army national guard since May 1, 1973, but Lieutenant Watson, Austin, is the first officer among more than 50 women currently serving in the state.

"All of us carry a special responsibility, being 'the first' women in the guard", she said. "But at the same time, being 'the first', gives us a feeling of being something special, and I think that's probably given extra excitement to guard membership for the young women who have joined".

The lieutenant will be doing work in her part-time guard job much like her full-time job as a news reporter for KAUS TV-radio in Austin. She will report on guard activities and community service in the 90 units around the state, and she also will assist civilian reporters and photographers doing stories about the Minnesota national guard.

Lieutenant Watson received her rank by direct commission, on the basis of her special qualifications and experience in a particular field. She has more than 11 years full-time experience as a reporter-editor, and she was graduated from the University of Oklahoma in journalism, with minors in history and government, the second-ranking woman in her class.

She has been a reporter and editor for The Miami (Fla.) Herald, The Tallahassee (Fla.) Democrat, The Washington Post, The Norman (Okla.) Transcript and United Press International. In 1968, shortly after the Tet offensive, she was in Vietnam and Southeast Asia as a freelance reporter.

Number of women in the Minnesota national guard, both enlisted and officer, is expected to increase rapidly in the next few months. Women may qualify as officers either by virtue of prior service as an officer, by selection for officer candidate school or by direct commission.

Female enlisted and officer guard members are authorized for almost every type of guard assignment except those considered combat roles, and the special schools available during a woman's active duty training period range from the more traditional clerk-typist training to the fields of electronics and transportation.

Information on guard membership—for either men or women—is available at the 90 national guard units in Minneosta, the hometown centers of guard activity, or through the adjutant general's office in the veterans service building, St. Paul.

Unemployment In State Rises During February

Minnesota's unemployment rate increased for the third consecutive month in February to reach a seasonally adjusted rate of 5.3 per cent, commissioner Emmet J. Cushing of the Minnesota department of employment services said recently.

The February rate was up 0.2 per cent from January and 0.3 from February a year ago, he said. It also was 0.1 per cent above the national rate for February which remained at 5.2 per cent, unchanged from January.

The number of jobless in the state increased to 100,800—up 7.6 per cent from January and 13.1 per cent over February, 1973. The January to February increase was about twice the normal seasonal increase, Cushing said.

Shortages of energy and materials contributed to the increase in unemployment Cushing said, but the precise impact cannot be determined.

Nonagricultural wage and salary employment increased 800 from January to February to reach 1,440,000, Cushing said. Manufacturing gained 200 jobs; Nonmanufacturing employment increased by 600.

Compared to February a year ago, nonagricultural wage and salary employment was up 69,300 or 5.1 per cent and employment in Manufacturing was up 14,700 or 6.2 per cent, Cushing said. Nonmanufacturing employment advanced 50,000 or 4.7 per cent from a year earlier with much of the gain in retail trade which added 19,800 workers, a gain of 8 per cent.

The only downturn in the trade category came in automotive employment which includes auto dealers and gas service stations, Cushing said. This industry, which has averaged increases of about 400 workers annually for the past five years, lost 300 since last February.

Cushing said if fuel shortages continue into spring and summer, there may be spillover employment problems in recreational industries and other businesses dependent upon a good supply of petroleum products.

The average wage of production workers in manufacturing declined 95 cents from January to $176.86 per week for working 40.6 hours at $4.43 an hour, Cushing said. Compared with February a year ago, weekly earnings were $12.19 higher, mainly attributable to a 29 cent rise in hourly pay.

However, Cushing noted, the actual buying power of the factory worker declined $3.35 from last year because of price increases in consumer items.

On March 26, 1958, the Explorer III, the third U. S. satellite to go into orbit, was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Region 9 Legion Speech Contest In Minneapolis

North high school, Minneapolis, is the site of the 37th annual region national high school oratorical contest sponsored by the American Legion and scheduled to start at 9 a.m. Monday, April 15, matching the champions of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota to declare the regional champion, according to James F. Walker, Robbinsdale, department commander of the Minnesota American Legion.

Edward Cohn, Virginia, member of the national Americanism commission of the American Legion, will handle the contest as national representative, while Edward M. Thielen, Minneapolis, state oratorical chairman, is in charge of local arrangments for the contest.

"Each of the four state champions will receive an additional $500 in scholarship funds from the American Legon insurance trust when they finish their competition in the regional contest. These funds are in addition to other scholarships the champions may have earned in previous contests qualifying for this contest," Cohn remarked.

Region 9 champion will advance to the national sectional contest against the champions of regions 7 and 8 to be held at Bismarck junior college, Bismarck, N.D. on Monday, April 22, at 10 a.m.

The four sectional champions will advance to the national finals at Lincoln senior high school, Sioux Falls, S.D. on Thursday, April 25, at 9 a.m. They will be competing for scholarships of $2,000 to $8,000 and the 1974 national oratorical championship.

Owners Of 1971, 1973 Chev., GMC Trucks Warned

Owners of 1971 and 1973 Chevrolet and GMC pickup trucks are being warned by the national highway traffic safety administration of the possibility of tie-rod failure, with resultant loss of steering. The agency is calling on owners for reports of their experiences with failure in order to collect more information.

The agency explained in a consumer protection bulletin that the tie-rod controls steering through ball and socket connections with the front wheels. Loss of control is caused by separation of these connections.

Owners are warned to be alert to any developing looseness of the connections and are advised to have regular periodic inspections. The agency reported that technical bulletins issued by General Motors in 1972 advise dealers and service people that newly designed parts are now available and give instructions concerning their installation.

Cargill Pays Bonus To Grower Of Sunflowers

A bonus averaging about $500 per grower has been paid to sunflower producers in North and South Dakota and Minnesota who produced sunflowers under contract to Cargill, Inc., in 1973, it was announced here by Kenneth Johnson, Cargill sunflower project manager.

Johnson said each of nearly 900 growers was paid a 50 cent bonus for ever 100 pounds of oil-type sunflower seed delivered. A second bonus, equal to the first, will be paid to growers who expand their 1974 sunflower acreage, according to Johnson. He said that if a grower under contract to Cargill last year contracts with the company this year and agrees to plant at least 10 per cent more acres to sunflowers than he did in 1973, he will be eligible for another bonus equal to the first one.

Johnson said Cargill has paid bonuses to its contract sunflower growers each of the last four years.

The company is offering a 1974 contract featuring "flexible pricing," which Cargill offered for the first time last year to give growers the opportunity to take advantage of market movement in pricing their crop.

Reber To Seek Congress Seat For 7th District

Daniel Reber, Breckenridge, recently announced his intention to seek endorsement as the Republican candidate for Congress from Minnesota's seventh district.

In his statement, Reber said, "I believe it is essential that we restore the public's confidence in our federal government. For far too long the Washington politicians have had the idea that bigger is better, that massive give away programs are the answer to all our problems, and that local units of government cannot meet the needs of the people.

"If we are to restore the citizens' faith in government we must look to new faces free from the cynicisms of professional politics. I offer the voters of this district integrity, honesty, my youthful energy and an open mind. If nominated, I pledge all of my energies and abilities in the campaign that lies ahead. If elected, I would strive to diligently be a servant of all the people."

Reber is a Breckenridge native, graduating from Breckenridge high school in 1967. He has a BS degree in elementary education and history and is presently teaching fifth grade at Coon Rapids. Reber, unmarried, has retained his legal residence with his mother, Mrs. Lonie Reber of Breckenridge.

To qualify for the dean's list, students must carry 12 or more credits and earn a grade point average of 3.5 to 3.999. Those named from this area include; Steven Berry and Jan Oen, Thief River Falls; Harold Mickelson and Michael Hanlon, Goodridge.

HECC Approves Bemidji AVTI Business Course

A new program in practical business management for Bemidji area vocational-technical institute has been favorably reviewed by the Minnesota higher education coordinating commission.

The program is designed for students wishing to gain business management and supervisorial skills at the pre-management job entry level. A person completing the program would also be employable as an administrative and management trainee.

The program is planned as an extension of Bemidji AVTI's present nine-month accounting program. Considering the availability of an A.S. degree in business administration technology at Bemidji state college, discussion of possible coordination between Bemidji AVTI and Bemidji state should not be closed, the commission evaluation says.

The higher education coordinating commission has been charged by the legislature with responsibility for reviewing plans, proposals and priorities for new and existing education programs. Each institution must consider statewide needs and similar programs by other institutions during the review process.

Prior to review by HECC, the proposals are scrutinized by representatives of all systems of post-secondary education through a curriculum advisory committee. An independent staff evaluaton is also made.

Directing the ensemble is Philip Welter of the CSB music department.

Ending Embargo Spurs Optimism For Gas Supply

Minnesota state automobile association has expressed optimism that the lifting of the Arab oil embargo will end fears of rationing and breathe new life into the auto-oriented recreation business.

Arthur C. Tomlinson, executive vice president of the motoring organization said: "Minnesota motorists can probably look forward to an easing to the current tight gasoline supply. And many families will no doubt begin planning summer vacations—hopefully in Minnesota.

"However, Minnesota AAA encourages all motorists to continue to conserve gasoline by keeping their cars in tune and by obeying the new 55 mph limit. The embargo has been lifted but the shortage is not over."

The 400,000-member organization recommends a 25 per cent cut in driving as way of saving money and getting through the shortage without hardship. Tomlinson also urged a lifting of the ban on Sunday sales of gasoline to help the recreation industry in Minnesota.

A free brochure is being offered by the motoring club called "25 Ways To Conserve Gasoline." The brochure is a handy reference for learning how to cut down on your driving without hardship. Copies can be obtained by writing Gas Conservation, Minnesota State Automobile Association, 7 Travelers Trail, Burnsville, MN 55337. Or copies are available at any AAA office.

Alcohol Involved In Most Deaths On Motorcycles

Alcohol was definitely a factor in nearly half of the 63 motorcycle deaths last year on Minnesota highways, a department of public safety study of the crash reports reveals. Records show that 31 driver victims had been drinking. Of these, 22 were intoxicated.

Of the 29 driver victims who were under the age of 21, seven had been drinking. The positive blood alcohol tests of drivers of all ages had an average reading of .15 per cent.

The reports revealed no time pattern for the alcohol-related crashes. Many of them occurred in the afternoon and early evening.

Next to alcohol, inexperience appeared to be an important crash factor. One driver was seven years old, one 11, two 13, and four were aged 16. At least 12 of the drivers were either unlicensed or had no motorcycle endorsement.

Speed was cited in 20 crashes, including three chases by traffic officers. Circumstances in 16 crashes indicated that the low visibility of the motorcycle is an important factor. Nine crashes occurred when the other vehicle made a left or U turn into the path of the motorcycle. There were seven intersection crashes in which the motorcycle had the right of way.

IRS Offers Some Suggestions On Prepaid Returns

R.C. Voskuil, district director of internal revenue for Minnesota, has offered some suggestions to taxpayers who pay someone to prepare their returns. The suggestions are based mostly on discussions and meetings with professional return preparers and practitioners.

Voskuil urged that the taxpayer read through the instructions before going to a preparer in order to insure that he has all necessary records and that he is aware of any special or unusual rules that might apply to his situation. It is also very important to take along copies of federal and state income tax returns for the prior year.

In many cases, the current year return cannot be completed until the preparer has taken certain information from the prior year's return. Furthermore, the prior returns help the preparer to analyze the factors that will provide the lowest tax liability for the client.

Voskuil urges taxpayers to use the peel-off label which came with their tax package when sending in their return. A tax return with the peel-off label, showing the taxpayer's name, address and Social Security number, can be processed faster.

"Even more important," says Voskuil," the use of the peel-off label eliminates the chances of errors in identifying tax returns."

He urges taxpayers to take their forms package with them when going to a tax preparer. This helps both the taxpayer and the preparer in making sure all necessary forms are available.

"Finally," he added, "you should carefully review the return after it has been prepared because you and you alone are responsible for the contents and fully liable for the tax, and any penalties or interest."

Thought For The Day

Some people excuse themselves from realizing or even attempting to realize more of their potential by claiming they have so few or even no talents or abilities. They may even try to make comparisons by saying that if they had the talents that some other people have they would surely use them. What these people seem to overlook is the importance of utilizing even the one talent they do have but are not at present using.

The Scriptures indicate that the amount or type of talent we possess is not the important thing. But it is important how we use whatever talents we do possess. Much talent is wasted or is not used at all. How are we to use these gifts? First, we should realize they are God given. Therefore they should be used to God's glory. Then they should be used to help our fellowmen everywhere.

State Tournament

And so another high school basketball season comes to an end. . . .a season which provided for the Lincoln high school Prowlers and their fans more success and advancement than had ever been expected when the season opened.

It is true the Prowlers lost both games in the state tournament in St. Paul. And it would not be a discredit to them to maintain that they ran into two better basketball teams in Waseca and Simley. Rather it is to their credit that they refused to roll over and play dead for their opponents.

In the opening game they carried the play to the talented Waseca club, valiantly rallying several times when it appeared Waseca momentum would—in the vernacular of the game—blow them off the court. Except for some costly turnovers which thwarted key scoring opportunities, the Region 8 champions could well have advanced to the semifinals. They played aggressive but disciplined basketball, which is to say they played their own game.

In the second game they fell victim to a Simley team which apparently had shaken the first game tightness went to the basket with authority early in the game. Our boys couldn't find the hole in the hoop until the contest was well out of reach and the Simley reserves had taken over for the regulars.

No, the Prowlers didn't win at the state tournament, but they joined the elite which qualified to compete there and they gained the experience which only such competition can provide. Who knows, they could be back again next year.

Back To Horse Power?

With American farmers asked to plant an additional 10 million acres of crops while cutting back in fuel consumption, suggestion has been made that farmers could leave their petroleum-using tractors in the shed and take horses into the field instead. Farmers will scoff at the suggestion, and rightly so.

Impracticality of the suggestion is pointed out in a news release from the Sperry New Holland farm equipment company.

A major problem would arise in finding a stray herd of 27 million work horses and mules which would be needed to replace gasoline power on our nation's farms, the company points out.

Furthermore, if enough horses could be rounded up, they would require 81 million acres of cropland just to be fed and the number of farm laborers would have to more than triple to perform the hand labor machines now do. Figures mentioned above were compiled by the economic research service of the U.S. department of agriculture.

Farming in the U.S today consumes only about three per cent of the total energy used in the country—the same proportion of the nation's energy supply which farming used in 1939.

Agriculture can not turn the clock back to 1939 when it consumed 1.6 billion gallons of petroleum fuel, compared to 6.5 billion gallons used by farmers in 1972. This country no longer has the land, manpower or horses to provide sufficient food in 1939 technology.

Researchers at Sperry New Holland report that in 1973 it required 22 gallons of petroleum fuel per acre to produce crops on a total of 331 million acres of cropland. With an additional 10 million acres going into crops in 1974, farmers will need 220 million more gallons of fuel this year than last.

Farmers can be expected to save as much fuel as possible this year by paying closer attention to engine turning, engine speeds, minimum tillage planting and switching to diesel powered machines which accomplish more work on less fuel.

However, the margin of adjustment farmers have in fuel economy is narrow and in a year of increased agricultural production, energy savings in this area may be almost unnoticeable.

At any rate, horsepower for agriculture can be much more efficiently produced through tractors than teams of horses. We don't think consumers would like to face the shortages and prices which would be necessary if the nation reverted to horse-drawn agriculture in a computer age of technology.

Have You Been Buzzed?

Following editorial is from the Paynesville Press and was written by Daniel Peterson:

If you happen to be the owner of a recent-vintage automobile, chances are you have been buzzed for forgetting—or refusing—to fasten your seat belt.

Interlock systems in brand-new cars also prevent motorists from starting their cars until belts are locked in place—unless the owner has found a sneaky way of disconnecting the system. A bill has been introduced in the Minnesota Legislature to require the use of seat belts, a bill that has stirred controversy and raised objections ranging from invasion of privacy to the honest fear that more serious things can happen to a driver who is fastened in place.

There are, of course, thousands of drivers who have accepted seat belts as an important safety feature and who automatically fasten them. They see no reason for the uproar and marvel at people who spurn something designed to protect them from serious injury.

Proponents of the legislation are able to cite impressive figures about the numbers of lives saved in Austrailia when the country went to compulsory belt fastening. Research conducted by Cornell University indicates failure to use seat belts increases the chance for injury in a crash by 40 per cent, the chance for a more than trivial injury by 70 per cent and the chance of serious or fatal injury by 100 per cent.

Impressive statistics. But americans do not appreciate being told what they must and must not do, even when it is clearly for their own good. Seat belts are indeed the single most effective way to protect the occupant of a vehicle in a crash and it just plain makes good sense to wear them.

But a law which would make it compulsory to wear them is another matter. Some things simply cannot be legislated. As one commentator put it, if we pass a law requiring the use of seat belts, what's to stop the legislature from passing a law to prevent an overweight person from taking that extra helping of mashed potatoes and gravy or that piece of pie ala-mode? Or what's to stop them from removing eggs from the market because they contain cholesterol, that fatty substance which has been proven to be harmful to the health?

Another law does not appear to be the answer to the "to fasten or not to fasten" question. It is difficult enough now to do anything without fearing we are breaking some obscure rule or regulation. Efforts to show the advisability of fastening seat belts should continue, but compulsory fastening seems a bit much. Personally, I'd rather battle with a buzzer than drive with the thought that had I not fastened my seat belt I would have broken yet another law. But, at the rate legislatures are passing them, I suspect it won't be long before we will have become a nation of laws—not of people.

Don't Blame The Children . . .

We have used this poem by an unknown author in our editorial columns before, but find it constantly appropriate enough to be used again for those who may have missed it:

We read in the paper and hear on the air
Of killing and stealing and crime everywhere.
We sigh and say as we notice the trend,
"This young generation, where will it all end?"
But can we be sure that it's their fault alone,
That maybe a part of it isn't our own?
Are we less guilty who place in the way
Too many things that may lead them astray?
Too much money to spend,
Too much idle time;
Too many movies of passion and crime;
Too many books not fit to be read;
Too much of evil is what they hear said;
Too many children encouraged to roam
By too many parents who won't stay at home.

Kids don't make the movies, they don't write the books
That paint vibrant pictures of gangsters and crooks.
They don't make the liquor, they don't run the bars,
They don't make the laws and they don't buy the cars.
They don't peddle drugs that addle the brain;
That's all done by older folks greedy for gain.
Delinquent teenagers! Oh how we condemn
The sins of the nation and blame it on them.
By the laws of the blameless the Savior made known,
Who is among us to cast the first stone?
For in so many cases, it's sad but its true,
The title "delinquent" fits older folks, too...

The time to break the wild oat
is before it breaks ground!

Use Far-Go® herbicide for early control of wild oats.

Before your wheat or barley comes up, wild oats start to steal moisture and nutrients that should go to your crop.

That can mean less yield (and profit) at harvest.

This spring use Far-Go® herbicide by Monsanto for early control of wild oats. Far-Go is absorbed by wild oat shoots and usually results in control before emerging through the soil surface.

And when used as recommended, Far-Go gives effective wild oat control without crop injury. Remember how bad wild oats were last year be ready this year.

Apply Far-Go this spring to help get a better yield of barley, spring wheat or Durum wheat at harvest.

Wild oats:
if you can't sell 'em,
why grow em?

IN CASE OF BAD WEATHER SALE WILL BE HELD IN HEATED QUONSET

Mike Lundgren

Although Thief River Falls returned home from the 1974 Minnesota state high school basketball tournament without a victory in two starts, the Prowlers proved, I think, that they belonged in this year's state classic with their strong showing, particularly in Thursday's opening round game against Waseca.

Unless you were among the handfull of Thief River Falls fans attending the Thief River Falls-Waseca game, you just can't realize how close the Prowlers came to beating the strong region one champion Bluejays before losing 60-53.

With just a break or two the underdog Prowlers could have very easily been playing in Friday night's exciting semifinal session instead of playing in Friday's unemotional 8:30 a.m. consolation game.

The Thief River Falls 70-55 consolation game setback at the hands of a strong Simley team can be compared to all other consolation contests in which there was never a close game. The early morning consolation results found the more talented teams easily beating the underdogs who relied on as much emotion as talent in any previous success. The emotion was used up in first round losses and the stronger teams used their superior talent to post easy wins as evidenced in Simley's 70-55 win over Thief River Falls, St. James' 76-53 win over Marshall, Anoka's 65-48 win over Alexander Ramsey and Hopkins Lindberg's 79-52 win over Willmer. Thief River Falls, Marshall, Alexander Ramsey and Willmar all boasted strong region champion squads, yet all four returned home wthout a win in the strong state tournament field.

"I'm really proud of the kids," said an obviously disappointed Prowler coach Lee Swanson after the Prowlers were ousted from the tournament by Simley. "It's been a fantastic experience just being here. That's the terrific part—just being a part of it, a part of the best high school basketball tournament in the nation. The kids will learn so much more than they ever have by just watching all these great players and teams down here. It's been a long season, but we're one of only 16 team out of the entire state playing in this tournament, and we're really proud of that fact."

Swanson agrees with the majority of state basketball fans that the St. Paul Civic Center proved its worth and should be allowed to keep the state basketball tournament instead of returning the event to Williams Arena on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

"The' Civic Center is terrific, this is the place to have it," said Swanson. "I don't know how they'll ever take the tournament away from here now."

A classy place with all of the ultra-modern conveniences, the Civic Center has everything Williams Arena doesn't have except tradition, and that should come with time. The Cvic Center has to rank as one of the nation's finest area's as far as spectator and player comfort is concerned.

Without regard to the two class A and AA labels, an unofficial all-tournament team from the state meet would probably include Mark Olberding of Melrose at center, Randy Williams of Minneapolis Washburn and Jerry Gibbs of Mound at forwards and Gene Glynn of Waseca and Mark Brandenburg of Rochester Mayo at guards.

The front line trio of Olberding, Williams and Gibbs wouldn't be questioned, we would think, although the backcourt combination of Glynn and Brandenburg could be shuffled with a number of other top tournament guards.

Olberding is fantastic, believe anything and everything you read about him. Without doubt, he has to rank as one of the finest high school basketball players in the nation. The 6-7½ Melrose center is so good he completely shadows everyone else on the court with him as he scores, blocks shots and rebounds with amazing authority.

Our guess tonight—we'll pick Bemidji by 49-46, although Oldberding will probably score 30 points himself.

Waseca Trims Prowlers 60-53 In State Basketball Tournament's First Round

Thief River Falls' first state basketball tournament venture since 1960 ended in disappointing frustration Thursday as the Prowlers dropped a 60-53 first round decision to favored Waseca before 14,304 fans in the classy St. Paul Civic Center.

Coach Lee Swanson's Lincoln high school quint didn't bow out of championship session contention without a fight though, as the scrappy Prowlers fought back from a 13 point third quarter deficit to close within easy striking range several times in the late stages of the afternoon contest.

"It's tough to lose," understated an obviously disappointed Swanson immediately after the game. "The kids played hard. A lot of people thought we'd get blown right off the floor by them, but I thought we held up our end for region eight and Thief River Falls. I'm proud of them.

Waseca, 21-2 entering the game, pieced together a series of big plays in the final minutes of the third quarter to double a 36-30 edge into a seemingly insurmountable 13 point 45-32 bulge at the final quarter stop. Gene Glynn, a diminutive 5-8, sharpshooting guard who poured in a game high 21 points for the Bluejays, hit one of this long bombs to ignite the late quarter Waseca scoring spurt. Kirk Keane then completed a key three point play and rugged Bob Pazera banged a rebound shot back in to suddenly push the region one champs in front 43-30 with 41 seconds remaining.

Prowler guard Duane Dicken momentarily interrupted the Waseca surge with a pair of free throws, but Pazera, who scored 18 points before fouling out midway through the fourth quarter, accepted a lob pass under the bucket from Glynn and banked in a backward lay-up to complete the eye catching play with four seconds left, giving Waseca a 45-32 cushion entering the final quarter.

Thief River Falls didn't wilt under the bright Civic Center lights, however, as the Prowlers slowly chipped away at the Waseca lead during the fourth quarter.

A driving lay-up by center Wayne Peterson, the leading Prowler scorer in the game with 18 points, made it 55-47 with 3:09 remaining, forcing the Bluejays to protect their disappearing lead with a definite game ending stall.

Randy Dallmann calmly sank both shots in an important bonus free throw situation with 1:32 left to slice Waseca's once safe lead to only 55-49. Thief River Falls tried to put a full court press into use, but the little used Prowler tactic failed to disrupt the quick passing Waseca stall, forcing Thief River Falls into a must foul situation that enabled the Bluejays to score their final five points from the free throw line.

Glynn made both ends of a one and one free throw opportunity with 45 seconds left to lift Waseca's lead back to 57-49, but Peterson, whose strong performance continued his season long improved play, slipped inside for a lay-up with 34 seconds remaining to keep the fading Prowler hopes flickering.

Waseca's Art Hoehm iced the game for the Bluejays by scoring his only point of the afternoon from the free throw line, with 25 seconds left to give the winners an uncatchable 58-51 lead. Dallas Kemmer scored from close range to pull the Prowlers within five, 58-53, but with only 14 seconds to play. Two free throws by Glynn with two seconds left accounted for the 60-53 final.

Although the third quarter 13 point lead was Waseca's largest point spread, a shakey first half actually did the Prowlers in.

Glynn snapped a two minute scoreless spell at the beginning of the slow starting game and Waseca was never headed, leading the entire ball game after Glynn's driving lay-up broke a 2-2 tie obtained by Kemmer's short jumper.

Thief River Falls trailed only 8-7 with 3:48 remaining before Waseca scored the final six points of the first quarter to lead 14-7 at the quarter break. Keane, 6-6 center Steve Cunningham and Pazera—the entire Waseca front line—all scored to put the Bluejays in front 14-7.

The Prowlers were finally able to lift an invisible lid off their basket in the second quarter when shots began to fall in, instead of out, and Thief River Falls outscored Waseca 8-2 in the first two minutes to pull back within 16-15.

Thief River Falls still only trailed 18-17 when the bottom seemed to fall out, enabling Waseca to run up an 11-2 edge in the final three minutes of the half to lead 29-19. Pazera contributed six points to the half-ending Waseca scoring spurt and Glynn added four.

After forsaking a successful season long practice of feeding the ball into the 6-8 Peterson in the first half, Thief River Falls finally got the ball inside to the junior pivotman after intermission the strategy nearly led the Prowlers to an upset win.

A free throw by Kemmer and a rebound shot by Dicken made it 30-30 with three minutes left in the third quarter. Thief River Falls was presented with three good shots near the basket in its effort to slice the difference to only four points, but the Prowlers turned the ball over and the Bluejays ran off their third quarter offensive outburst.

"I thought the turning point of the ball game was when it was 18-17," commented Swanson. "If we could of gotten a couple of breaks and gone into the locker room with a lead at halftime I think we could have had them."

Thief River Falls shot 44 per cent from the field for the game, hitting 20 of 45 shots. Waseca hit 47 per cent on 25 of 53 tries. Thief River Falls sank 13 of 16 free throw attempts while Waseca made 10 of 16 gift tosses. Thief River Falls, outrebounded 21-14 in the first half playing a man to man defense, switched to a second half zone and ended the game with a 32-30 edge on the boards with Peterson pulling down eight caroms. Pazera starred with 11 rebounds added to his 18 points. Thief River Falls committed 15 turnovers, but Waseca turned the ball over 14 times themselves.

Simley Stops TRF 70-55 In State Consolation Round

A strong Simley team, upset 65-49 by surprising Mound in Thursday's first round, ousted Thief River Falls from the 1974 Minnesota class A state basketball tournament early Friday morning with a one-sided 70-55 consolation round decision in the near-deserted St. Paul Civic Center.

Simley, from Inver Grove Heights, jumped out to a 6-0 lead and the Spartans were never seriously threatened by the struggling Prowlers who were defeated by Waseca 60-53 in Wednesday's first round.

The ever increasing Simley lead mounted to 17-6 at the first quarter stop despite ragged play by both teams. The Spartans, 21-2, entering the tournament, enjoyed their biggest lead of the lead half with 2:27 remaining when a pair of free throws by Rich Zellmer put Simley up by 21 points, 36-15.

Thief River Falls produced a mini-rally to close the first half, however, when the slow moving Prowler offense scored six straight points to cut the difference to 36-21 at halftime. Wayne Peterson scored twice from close range and Dallas Kemmer added a fast break lay-up in the half-ending Prowler spurt.

Coach Lee Swanson's Lincoln high school quint was enable to stay with the rugged Spartans in the second half as Simley utilized a whopping 53-31 rebound edge to match their biggest 21 point spread on a couple of occasions, including a 54-33 cushion at the third quarter stop.

Reserve Doug Anderson's free throw with 4:45 remaining gave Simley its largest lead of the game, a disheartening 25 point 62-37 Prowler deficit, before Thief River Falls manufactured a face-saving late game rally.

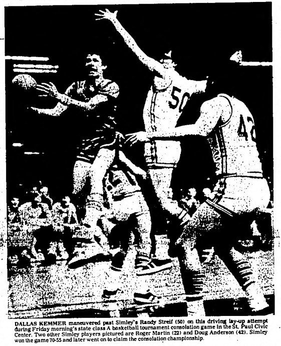
The Prowlers outscored a bevy of Simley reserves 14-1 during 1:28 span to pull within 65-55 with 1:21 remaining. Kemmer sparked the Prowler rally by scoring eight points while Peterson contributed six. Thief River Falls was presented with an opportunity to pull within eight points and nearly in disbelieving catchable range of the Spartans, but a costly turnover enabled Simley to piece together five game ending points for a comfortable 15 point win.

"The boards killed us," commented hearbroken Swanson who had really hoped for a Prowler state tournament victory. "You just can't win without rebounds."

The 8:30 a.m. start took its toll on the game's play with sub-par basketball being played by both teams. "The kids just weren't ready to play," said Swanson. "They put everything they had into the first game and just kind of lost their zip. You just can't win playing catch-up basketball like we were forced to do."

Thief River Falls shot only 33 per cent from the field for the game, making 17 of 52 shots. Simley hit 25 of 26 tries for 45 per cent. Thief River Falls made 21 of 28 free throws, but most of their misses were costly off-target shots early in the game. Simley was 20 of 31 from the charity stripe. Simley also led in the turnover department 25-17.

Kemmer finally found his shooting eye in the second half of the Simley game after suffering through one and one-half frustrating off-target games to finish with a game high 25 points. Peterson added 14 and Duane Dicken scored 10. Simley's talented two-some of Kurt Jonker and Pat Kavanagh scored 14 and 12 points respectively for Simley.



DALLAS KEMMER maneuvered past Simley's Randy Streif (50) on this driving lay-up attempt during Friday morning's state class A basketball tournament consolation game in the St. Paul Civic Center. Two other Simley players pictured are Roger Martin (22) and Doug Anderson (42). Simley won the game 70-55 and later went on to claim the consolation championship.

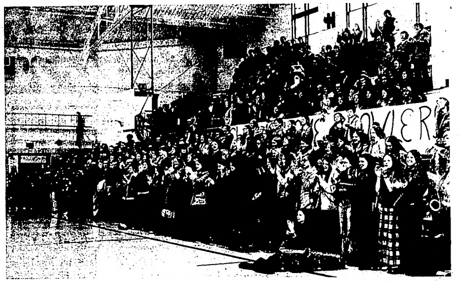
THIEF RIVER FALLS forward Dallas Kemmer sailed past three Simley players for a lay-up in Friday morning's state class A basketball tournament consolation game in the St. Paul Civic Center. Simley defenders caught flat-footed on the play included Jim Beedle (24), Scott Quittem (44) and Rich Zellmer (14). Simley won the game 70-55 enroute to the consolation championship.



ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD greeted the Lincoln high school Prowler basketball team upon its return from the Minnesota state high school tournament on Sunday afternoon. Fans gathered at the Lincoln gymnasium to cheer the Region 8 champion Prowlers and express their appreciation for a successful season. The high school band and cheerleaders participated in the program and Coach Lee Swanson commented on the team and the tournament.

WASECA REBOUNDERS Steve Cunningham (52) who is 6-6 and Gene Glynn (20) who stands only 5-7 appear to be nearly the same size on this play as the two Bluejays combine to block 6-8 Prowler center Wayne Peterson from the basket in Thursday's opening game of the 1974 state class A basketball tournament in the St. Paul Civic Center. Waseca held off the Prowlers for a 60-53 win.

Trackmen Open 1974 Season

Missing the team's top two performers, coach Marv Walter's Lincoln high school track squad opened its 1974 indoor season schedule on an unsuccessful note Saturday in the power-laden Shanley Invitational meet in the North Dakota State University fieldhouse.

Favored Sioux Falls Lincoln easily claimed the meet's team title with 53 points, followed by Moorhead with 32 and Crookston with 21½.

Thief River Falls was one of five teams that failed to score a point in the all-day meet that featured state champions from Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota.

The Prowler failure to score can be attributed to absence of two top performers, however, with senior weightman Tony Dorn and junior hurdler Jerry Sandahl both missing the meet. Both Prowler track standouts were in the Twin Cities during the weekend. Sandahl was a member of the Thief River Falls state tournament basketball team while Dorn was attending the annual WCCO all-state awards dinner for both football and hockey.

The youthful Thief River Falls thinclads will regroup and try for a better showing Wed., April 10, when the Prowlers compete in the Dragon indoor meet at Moorhead State College.

Public Notices

Card of Thanks

Words cannot express the gratitude in the hearts of myself and my family for the help we received from all our friends and neighbors, during our recent experience. There are too many to list, but I want to thank Dr. Scheuneman and Dr. Berg and all the staff at Northwestern Hospital, especially, for exceptional care and concern given to my wife and our new born daughter.

Special help was given by the Fire Department responding to the call and containing the fire. Dr. Scheuneman, Dr. Culmer and all the nurses here and at Deaconess Hospital in Grand Forks for special care given my wife. Father Patnode for his calls and prayers and concern. I hesitate to list all the groups, organizations, and individuals that helped for fear of missing someone. Vye and John Wettestead, Bill Peltier, Les Sabo, Prestibaks, Martin Wedul, Orville Hanson, Oden Peterson, Archie Anderson and Kermit Finstad, Jo and Bert Vigen, Iris and Art Dicken, my fellow schoolboard members, Dr. Corliss and the entire faculty of District 564. The members of the Methodist Church, the Seventh Day Adventist Church, the Helping Hand Club, and so many others that helped. I just don't want anyone to feel offended if I don't name everyone.

Our old dog won't understand but she is something special at our home for waking us up.

God Bless all of you!

Maynard Wedul and Family

Public Notices

Card of Thanks

Words cannot express the gratitude in the hearts of myself and my family for the help we received from all our friends and neighbors, during our recent experience. There are too many to list, but I want to thank Dr. Scheuneman and Dr. Berg and all the staff at Northwestern Hospital, especially, for exceptional care and concern given to my wife and our new born daughter.

Special help was given by the Fire Department responding to the call and containing the fire. Dr. Scheuneman, Dr. Culmer and all the nurses here and at Deaconess Hospital in Grand Forks for special care given my wife. Father Patnode for his calls and prayers and concern. I hesitate to list all the groups, organizations, and individuals that helped for fear of missing someone. Vye and John Wettestead, Bill Peltier, Les Sabo, Prestibaks, Martin Wedul, Orville Hanson, Oden Peterson, Archie Anderson and Kermit Finstad, Jo and Bert Vigen, Iris and Art Dicken, my fellow schoolboard members, Dr. Corliss and the entire faculty of District 564. The members of the Methodist Church, the Seventh Day Adventist Church, the Helping Hand Club, and so many others that helped. I just don't want anyone to feel offended if I don't name everyone.

Our old dog won't understand but she is something special at our home for waking us up.

God Bless all of you!

Maynard Wedul and Family 1t24c

Community Need To Determine Value Of Higher Education

Changing enrollment patterns necessitate consideration of possible consolidation or merger of institutions of post-secondary education in Minnesota, but policies should not be influenced solely by enrollment criteria, according to a preliminary report by the higher education coordinating commission staff.

Projections show that the pool of high school graduates will decline by 1980 in every region of the state except the Twin Cities area, and this will have a depressing effect on institutional enrollments in post-secondary education, according to the report which was sent to members of the senate education committee and house higher education committee recently.

"But this in itself is insufficient to base conclusions or policy recommendations in regard to the desirability of merger or consolidation because it reflects only one aspect of the post-secondary educational enterprise," the report says.

Concerned with the changing enrollment patterns, commission members last fall instructed the staff to re-examine its guidelines on access to post-secondary education in order to establish new priorities for the establishment or possible merging of institutions. The report reviews previous recommendations on providing access, examines recent enrollment trends and projections and discusses factors related to consolidating or merging institutions.

Although it is true the number and type of students can have some effect on the costs of operating institutions, institutions provide programs to educate students and they provide services to help the community, the report says.

"Thus, when one evaluates the effectiveness of these institutions, the evaluation should not be based primarily on the number of students that are enrolled," the report says. "Rather, what is more relevant is the types of programs that are being offered, the cost of providing the programs and the extent to which the programs offered by the institutions are meeting the needs of the community and the surrounding area.

"It is conceivable that the cost of operating one institution with small enrollment is considerably more expensive than operating another institution with larger enrollment. But such information is not useful, however, unless we know the programs that are being offered at both institutions.

"Even then, should it be found that the programs are the same and the costs are dissimilar with lower costs at the larger institution, the services provided to the community in the form of trained manpower and continuing education and community service activities for business and industry in the surrounding area might be such that the benefits derived would outweigh the increased costs of maintaining the programs offered in the smaller institution."

Moreover, the report notes, state policies in regard to regional economic development and population dispersal may warrant operating high cost programs in order to encourage a more desirable distribution of population in the state.

"Although not enough is known about the effects of post-secondary attendance or migration patterns, it might be hypothesized that the area in which a person settles is highly influenced by the location of the post-secondary education experience," the report says.

"Should this be accurate, overall state policy considerations could justify the expenditure of resources to maintain relatively higher cost programs with smaller enrollments in order to stabilize or reverse migration patterns to metropolitan areas."

Nevertheless, the projected decline in the pool of high school graduates points to the need for policy research to develop alternative for dealing with the problems, the report says.

Included in the research should be an assessment of the factors related to the effects on institutions that declining enrollment might produce.

"Equally relevant is the need for a study of alterntive mechanisms for dealing with declining enrollments," the report says.

Although one possibility is to merge or consolidate institutions, other policy alterntives exist. For example:

Limit enrollment in some institutions in order to encourage enrollment in other institutions in the state that are identified as areas for geographic regional development.

Identify areas of regional specialization and through this mechanism redefine the missions of selected institutions and provide programs that would both attract students to them and more adequately serve the regional needs.

Some of the questions that require further research can be addressed by ongoing and developing activities of the commission such as program review, budget review and enrollment projections and simulations, according to the report.

"As these are developed and implemented and as data become available from these processes, the desirability and necessity for the establishment or merging of institutions will become more clear," the report concludes.

FIRE DESTROYED a building at the Roy Shetler farm yesterday (Sunday) morning resulting in an undetermined amount of damage. The fire is believed to have originated from a wood-burning heating stove.

Expects Inflation Will Continue Next Five Years

U.S. economy will experience its share of growing pains over the next five years as the energy situation results in a probable lower growth rate and higher rate of inflation than anticipated prior to the Mideast crisis.

Dr. Charles Moeller Jr., senior vice-president and economist of a major life insurance company, in a recent report on the economic outlook, 1974-1978, projects that an annual inflation rate averaging around five per cent over the five-year span will accompany real economic growth averaging less than four per cent a year.

However, Dr. Moeller points out, basic expansionary forces in the economy—including increases in population and families, high levels of income, backlogs of investment needs and development of new products—remain favorable. The latter may prove particularly important as technological innovation is relied upon to overcome energy shortages and maintain a rising standard of living.

Consumer Spending

Personal income, says the report, is expected to achieve annual growth of 8½ per cent through 1978, a rate identical to that for the past five years. Although this will raise total personal income to $1,550 billion in five years and enable the consumer to maintain a high level of purchasing power, consumer spending will not be a major growth stimulus.

Energy problems and material shortages, along with some weakness in housing markets during the initial part of the five-year period, will make consumer durables the slowest growing area of spending. Expenditures for services are expected to enjoy the highest growth rate among consumer spending categories and, by the end of the five-year period, will exceed one-half trillion dollars.

This projected figure reflects such factors as the increasing affluence of Americans, our increased leisure time, higher educational attainment and higher proportions of working wives. The latter, says the report, may exceed 45 per cent by 1978.

Disposable income is likely to rise at a somewhat slower pace than personal income as taxes take a larger share of income. The saving rate, measured as a per cent of disposable income, will average approximately 6½ per cent over the next five years.

Population and Family Income

The U.S. population is expected to reach nearly 220 million people by 1978, an increase of 19 million from 10 years earlier.

By 1978, more families will move into higher income brackets. The number of families of two or more persons is expected to increase to over 60 million, and an estimated 55 per cent of these families will be earning incomes of more than $15,000 in current dollars. Although this represents an additional 15 million families, the increase is cut back to five million family units when measured in terms of real income—that is, after allowing for inflation. In constant 1973 dollars, too, approximately two million more families will have incomes over $25,000, says the report.

Labor Market Outlook

While higher unemployment rates are expected this year—in the area of six per cent during some months—the outlook for 1975-78 anticipates jobless rates settling back, generally, into the neighborhood of five per cent. Professional and technical jobs are likely to experience the fastest growth, even with the slowed demand for teachers. Clerical workers will remain the largest occupational group, and will chalk up growth rates second only to professionals.

Private Investment Trends

Gross private domestic investment over the five-year period—including residential construction, plant and equipment spending and change in business inventories—is expected to expand substantially faster than the overall economy, growing at a compound annual rate of more than 10 per cent. Corporations are expected to resort to relatively large volumes of external financing to help build new facilities and buy needed equipment.

These financing needs, coupled with a slightly lower personal saving rate and little moderation in inflationary pressures, will keep long-term interest rates high and capital markets relatively tight, the report points out.

Housing demand will remain strong for all types of residences, and soaring operating and maintenance expenses, among other factors, may give an edge to apartment construction. During the next five years, private housing starts are expected to average over two million units annually, up slightly from the average volume of the past five years.

Government Sector

Government purchases of goods and services may increase to 23 per cent of the nation's output, equalling the post-World War II peak reached in 1968. The big change in the next five years as compared to the preceding five will be an increase in federal spending for national defense of almost $30 billion.

Inflation, point out the economists, is of course an important cause of rising federal expenditures. And they note that federal aid to state and local governments finances 24 per cent of state and local purchases.

Outlook for Inflation

High inflation rate of six per cent experienced in 1973 and the still higher rates anticipated for 1974 probably will not persist throughout the five-year period but, the economist says, inflation will continue as a national and international problem.

"Wage-price controls," says Dr. Moeller, "will have to be terminated and the hidden inflation suppressed by them will have to be absorbed by the economy if even more serious economic distortions than have already appeared are to be avoided."

International Economy

Recent oil developments, particularly the latest round of price increases, have drastically altered the international economic outlook.

Although, in the current atmosphere, little optimism prevails for real progress in international monetary and trade negotiations, basic reforms are still appropriate, particularly the need for flexibility in the monetary system.

Dr. Moeller warns that the shortage of energy is only one facet of a growing scarcity of resources. In addition to the need to import about one-third of U.S. petroleum requirements, it has been estimated that this country is almost totally dependent on foreign supplies for a considerable number of non-energy mineral commodities necessary for modern industry.

To minimize future dependence in these areas, intense exploration for undiscovered or untapped mineral and fuel deposits, the development of new technologies and research leading to substitute or replacement products are necessary. The removal of price controls, emphasizes the report, would help considerably, especially those that reduce incentive to discover and develop additional resources, or that cause distortions in their allocations.

Tax Booklet For Senior Citizens Now Available

Government Printing office has published a new checklist to help senior citizens take advantage of all legal tax deductions available to them, it was announced this week by U.S. representative Bob Bergland.

Bergland estimated that nearly half of all elderly taxpayers are overpaying their taxes because "needlessly-complex regulations and forms make it difficult to determine legal deductions." The booklet, according to Bergland, is designed to clarify tax laws covering legitimate deductions, credits and exemptions "which can save precious dollars."

The publication, entitled "Protecting Older Americans Against Overpayment of Income Taxes," can be obtained by sending 35 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please include the stock number (5270-02228) with your order. A limited number of the booklets are also available from Congressman Bergland.

East Marshall Reacts To County Building Proposal

Eastern Marshall county reaction to a proposal by the Marshall county board of commissioners to locate a new law enforcement center and court facilities in Warren will be organized Thursday evening. A meeting of interested persons has been called for 8 p.m. in the Newfolden community hall.

"We think the citizens of the county should have an opportunity to vote on where the building should be located," stated Lowell Lindemoen in a telephone conversation with the Times Tuesday. "Many people in eastern Marshall county think that county facilities should be more centrally located and that a mistake made many years ago when the courthouse was built in Warren should not be repeated."

Lindemoen was one of several eastern Marshall county citizens appearing at a meeting of the county board in Warren last week. Others were Robert Fincher and Lavern Knutson of Viking and Harry Engen of Holt. Others would have attended, Lindemoen said, except for stormy weather that day.

Percy Stokke, mayor of Newfolden, has called the Thursday evening meeting in hopes that sufficient support can be generated to cause a county referendum to be held on location of the center. Proponents of the more central location maintain that the proposed building is a method of starting a new county courthouse without consent of the people of the county.

At the Thursday evening meeting, Lindemoen will report on his group's appearance at the county board meeting. The proposal will be reviewed and discussed.

"All we want is an opportunity to vote on location," Lindemoen told the Times. "If the majority of people in the county want the building located in Warren as the board proposes, we will abide by that decision. But we think it would be repeating a mistake made before and we object to not being given an opportunity for a referendum."

Charles Cheney, Marshall county auditor, told the Times Tuesday that the building proposed has been designed by E.A. Jyring of Architectural Resources, Inc., of Hibbing. It would be a two-story structure, 70x90 feet in size, and built at a cost of approximately $730,000 (architect's estimate) if built at one time. If the first story would be built in one project and the second story added later, the projected cost is about $800,000.

First floor of the building would be a law enforcement center including facilities to house 14 prisoners. It would have law enforcement offices, kitchen, garage, cells and related facilities.

Second floor of the building would include district courtrooms, offices for the district judge and clerk of district court, office for the county court judge, jury room, two rooms for counsel, law library and vault.

Marshall county commissioners approved the preliminary plans presented by Jryring at the March 22 special meeting by unanimous vote. Cheney said, and ordered preparation of final plans and specifications. The board would not make its final decision on construction, he said, until bids could be called for and received for consideration.

Welfare Board Establishes Work Relief Program

Pennington county welfare board established a work relief program at its regular monthly meeting according to Gary Erickson, director of the Pennington county social services center.

The 1973 state legislature passed a law requiring counties to have such a program as part of the general assistance law, Erickson said. General assistance is the welfare program under which non-disabled persons—who find themselves with no alternatives to meeting their living costs—receive help. Persons who receive general assistance will be required to work off the financial help obtained under the new work relief program.

Work situations and supervision agreements are being established with governmental units in Pennington county, where the recipient will work for a number of hours equal to the $1.60 per hour minimum wage, or the going wage for that particular job; until the number of dollars of assistance granted has been repaid.

For example: If a person received a $40 general assistance grant, he or she could be required to work 20 hours for the city of Thief River Falls if the normal rate of pay was $2 per hour.

Other factors of eligibility for general assistance include a limitation of $50 in cash retained by the applicant, a real estate equity limit of $75, and the recipient may not own an automobile with a market value greater than $1,500. The other three welfare programs—AFDC, food stamps, and medical assistance—are not included under the work relief requirement.

WINTHROP PAROO receives assurance from Prof. Harold Hill that his new band uniform will have a stripe up the side of the leg in this scene from the Lincoln high school musical "The Music Man". Harold Hill is played by Greg Sorenson and Winthrop by Robyn Blankenfeld.

LHS Musical Will Open At School Auditorium Friday

From the whimsical warning of "Trouble" to the brassy blast of "Seventy-Six Trombones", the sound of music from "The Music Man" will fill the Lincoln high school auditorium in Thief River Falls Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Curtain time each evening is 7:30 p.m. David Morken, vocal music instructor at the school, will direct the annual high school musical.

Greg Sorenson, a veteran performer in Lincoln musical productions, is cast in the title role of Professor Harold Hill, "The Music Man". His leading lady is Karen Lindquist, also a senior, who portrays Marian (the Librarian) Paroo.

Others in the cast include Pam Lane as Mrs. Paroo; Robyn Blankenfeld, Winthrop Paroo; Larry Lindquist, Mayor Shinn; Roxi Adamson, Eulalie Shinn; Kathy Wald, Zaneeta Shinn; Greg Gilbert, Tommy Djilos; Rod Sletten, Olin Britt; and Kjell Melvie, Oliver Hix;

Also Jon Foster, Ewart Dunlop; Phil Swenson, Jacey Squires; Kathi Swanson, Maud Dunlop; Chris Broeker, Ethel Toffelmeiher; Bernadette Froehle, Alma Hix; Renee Bedard, Mrs. Squires; Delano Bue, Marcellus; Hal Kelley, Charlie Cowell; Gary Heaton, constable; Barb Laidley, Amaryllis; Cindy Hess, Gracie Shinn; and David Onken, Ryan Harger, Bryan Noreen, Scott Tranby, Craig Strong, Cindy Mortrud, Lynn Sauer, Lenette LaValley, Patti Blackstead and Kim Koropatnicki, River City kids.

Set at River City, Ia., in 1912, the musical portrays the actions of Prof. Harold Hill who goes from town to town, selling expensive band instruments and promising to organize and instruct a town band. He stays long enough to deliver the instruments and collect the money, then leaves without providing the town with a band.

The production begins with salesmen on a train talking angrily about Hill, whose swindles have caused townspeople in small communities to regard all salesmen with suspicion. Hill, a passenger, gets off at the next stop—River City—and is surprised to meet an old friend and one time assistant, Marcellus Washburn. Marcellus later warns him that Marian Paroo is the only person in town capable of exposing him as a fraud.

At a Fourth of July celebration, Hill points out the dangers of a new pool table in Mayor Shinn's billiard parlor and offers to organize a band to help the young folks avoid temptation and stay out of trouble. The community is caught up with the idea, to the extent that Marian's mother even orders a cornet for her son Winthrop, who is ashamed of his lisp and rarely ever talks.

Hill's attempts to disarm Marian blossom into a romance which is not without its stormy areas. The Music Man's ability to turn the suspicions of the townspeople away from himself add to the humor of the situation, including sale of an instrument to the mayor for his son. . . although the mayor has no son. . . and convincing a group of local officials that they have great singing voices.

A traveling salesman tells the townspeople about the fraud Hrold Hill and he is brought by the constable before the people at the town sociable. Although he knows nothing about music, he directs the band to the delight of the River City residents.

Some of the musical numbers to be presented include "Rock Island", "Iowa Stubborn", "Trouble", "Goodnight, My Someone", "Seventy-Six Trombones", "Pick A Little", "Marian the Librarian", "My White Knight", "Wells Fargo Wagon", "Lida Rose", "Gary,

Goodridge Girls Survive Ordeal

Forced to flee their burning car when a fire started in the upholstery, two rural Goodridge girls are hospitalized with severely frostbitten feet at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls. They trudged nearly two miles without shoes in early morning darkness Sunday with the temperature hanging below minus 20 degrees.

Cindy Eidelbes, 20, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Eidelbes, and Frances Kotrba, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Kotrba, both said they panicked when the fire started in their stalled car and termed the shoeless walk to the Elmer Johnson home in Goodridge as "frightening".

The girls had gone to a Saturday night dance in Goodridge and after the dance had driven around for an hour or so in Cindy's car—a 1965 model which was destroyed by the afore-mentioned fire. They decided to take a shortcut home but their car became stuck on the little-used road approximately two miles northwest of Goodridge.

According to Cindy, the car then stalled out and they couldn't get it started. Unable to use the car heater, they started an emergency heater carried in the

More Liquor Outlets In TRF Opposed By WCTU

Liquor bill in the Minnesota State Legislature that would affect Thief River Falls was discussed at the meeting of the Alice Mae Stuart-Thief River Falls Women's Christian Temperance Union held recently at the United Metodist church.

The bill, if passed would make it possible for cities the size of Thief River Falls to have more liquor outlets.

Upon request, Mayor Robert Carlson attended the meeting and explained that the bill, if passed will give the City Council the authority to decide if more liquor outlets will be allowed. There will be no referendum, permitting the public the right to vote on the matter. Mayor Carlson stated that if the bill is pased, it is not mandatory to establish more liquor outlets.

Members of the Union went on record opposing more outlets in this city. They also urged everyone to write to Representative Andrew Skaar and Senator Richard Fitzimons, addressed to the State Capitol, asking them to vote against the bill permitting liquor dispensers in hotels and motels.

Members were also reminded by Mrs. Earle Ripley of the article in the March Union Signal, asking for letters urging Brown of California, (Ways and Means committee Washington, D.C.) concerning the Bill HR11106, stating that the advertising of alcoholic beverages is not a deductible expense. The request is to bring it out of committee.

Mrs. Agnes Longren read a letter from missionary Agnes Hill White of Baltimore, Md., expressing appreciation for the tote bags provided by the WCTU. She stated that the bags were used by her parishoners for carrying Bibles and personal articles, such as combs, tooth brushes, pencils and tablets.

Youth week, set for April 21-27 was discussed and it was decided to contact churches and schools, asking for the number of Youth bulletins needed.

An invitation was also received from the Retired Teachers, inviting the group to attend the community relations meeting, based on self protection.

The meeting began with the singing of several hymns. The devotions was given by Mrs. Earle Ripley, using the theme, "The Joy of Witnessing," based on Isaiah 41:10. She stated that God's promise to help is the only blanket coverage needed to face today's problems. She concluded by saying that "We are not asked to tell others what they should do, but we are to live a life that is a witness to our Lord, making Christianity attractive." She also read Gal. 6:1-10, giving the duties of the Christians.

Lunch was served during the social hour with Mrs. Ripley as hostess.

Minn. Trading Involves Many Manufacturers

More than 700 Minnesota manufacturers are now involved in international trade, according to an export survey recently published by the department of economic development (DED).

The study, providing one of the first comprehensive analyses on Minnesota's involvement in international trade, indicates that the major Minnesota manufactured export products include computers and electronic equipment, transportation and handling equipment, processed food, medical instruments, scientific testing and measuring equipment and industrial controls.

The Minnesota export survey is based on a 58 per cent response to a questionnaire mailed to 5,100 Minnesota manufacturers. Of the respondents, 713 firms are currently exporting an an additional 234 are interested in establishing foreign markets.

A common misunderstanding about exporting is that international trade is confined to large corporations. However, survey figures confirmed that 33 per cent of all Minnesota exporters employ less than 30 persons and 59 per cent employ less than 100 persons.

Export sales figures support the fact that small companies can successfully export. One-fourth of the firms responding to the survey listed annual export sales of less than $10,000 and nearly half had export sales of less than $30,000.

However, only ten per cent of the companies had export sales of more than $1 million. Sales figures for the entire group of exporters ranged from $200.00 to $50 million.

Minnesota products are being sold in more than 130 countries—virtually every nation in the world. The leading export markets for Minnesota products were reported as Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia, Japan, Mexico and West Germany, followed by France, Italy, the Netherlands, Sweden and Venezuela.

Marketing in these countries is achieved by five basic means: direct sales, sales representative, subsidiary, licensee and joint venture. Direct sales between Minnesota firms and foreign consumers is used predominately in Canadian markets. In all other countries, marketing through a sales representative is most common.

Foreign subsidiaries and licensees are also used but joint ventures between Minnesota and foreign companies are particularly important with Japanese companies.

Information about the survey has been summarized and published as the Minnesota Export Survey Summary. The summary is available from the World Trade Desk, Department of Economic Development, P.O. Box WT1, 480 Cedar St., St. Paul, Mn. 55101, (612)296-5012.

Two Goodridge Girls Survive Ordeal In Cold

car—a wax candle affair in a foil tray—and took of their shoes to massage their cold feet. For a time, the heater seemed to work reasonably well, the girls said.

But when the wax melted down, the tray tipped, the hot wax spilled out and the fire started. The girls panicked and jumped out of the car without their shoes and were then unable to go back into the car after them. Although they were within half a mile of a farm, there was no yard light there and the lights from Goodridge were what caught their eye. They started out in the bone-chilling cold.

Cindy admits that she wanted to quit and give up along the way but that Frances kept urging her on. "I pulled her and told her we could make it...that we had to make it," Frances told the Times from her hospital bed. "There was quite a bit of snow and it was dark. We thought about the possibility that we might not make it. It was pretty frightening."

The girls went to the Elmer Johnson residence because Cindy had gone there a number of times previously with a friend. The Johnsons called the hospital and Cindy's parents and prepared to take the girls to the hospital. By the time they were ready to leave, Cindy's parents arrived and rode along to Thief River Falls. Frances' parents could not be reached immediately due to telephone service being out of order.

A doctor attending one of the girls said that it is too early to tell how extensive the frostbite is at this time.

Cindy has been living at home with her parents and Frances is a junior at Goodridge high school.

If the Shoe Fits...

How can I tell when my children's shoes are out grown?

Most mothers whose children's shoes prove to be a size or 1½ sizes shorter than their measurement tell the shoeman that they felt the toe and there seemed to be room. There are many reasons why this manner of testing is not reliable. The child may have been sitting down; the shoes may be too narrow to allow his toe to get down into the front, etc.

Consider this: the great toe of most babies when they are fitted for their first pair of shoes is about 1½ inch in length. When they reach adult life those great toes will be only 2 to 3 inches long. The major growth is behind the toes. We think of the toes growing into the fronts of shoes but actually they are pushed there by the growth of the mass of the foot.

We should not allow that pressure to crowd the soft bones of young feet against the ends of shoes, sox or sleeper feet. In fact almost all of the common foot defects can be avoided if the great toe is allowed to remain straight.

The only reliable way to check the fit of shoes is to remeasure the feet, being careful to be guided by the length of the longer foot.

Pennington NFO Hears Action Of National Board

Pennington county NFO officials have been informed that the national NFO board of directors has voted to call on President Nixon to either resign immediately because of irresponsible statements concerning farmers or for Congress to set aside all routine business and proceed immediately with impeachment proceedings.

The board of directors statement said, "The people of this nation have lost faith in the leadership of President Nixon. This loss of confidence in his leadership, coupled with a false statement that farmers have never had it so good, shakes the confidence of farmers at a time when they are making their plans for food production. This type of irresponsible leadership, if continued, will threaten the food supply for the people of this nation.

"Cattle feeders are taking the biggest loss in cattle feeding history and are not putting replacement cattle in the feedlots that would assure an adequate supply of beef in the months ahead. Hog producers who produce the pork for this nation are suffering big financial losses. Grain prices have been dropping.

"This all comes about when farmers are paying at least twice as much for the fuel that is required to produce food and two to three times as much for fertilizer which increases yields," the national board reported.

"The statement made by the President that the farmers never had it so good further divides the country and pits the consumers and farmers against each other. This is uncalled for. It's irreponsible and only further deteriorates the President's ability to lead the nation and to meet the problems that the nation faces.

"The NFO will urge all farmers to immediately write, send telegrams or telephone calls to their Congressmen and Senators to make the impeachment proceedings the most important job at hand for the Congress.

"This nation can not meet its domestic problems or keep its international stature from decaying unless the President of the United States is able to give full time to his leadership responsibilities. The decision must be made immediately by the President to resign or the Congress must clear the deck for the impeachment proceedings."

The national board's statement will be presented at the monthly county meeting on April 11 at Northland community college.

66 Arch Masons From Canada In Visitation Here

Sixty-six Royal Arch Masons and 15 of their wives from Winnipeg and surrounding area dropped below the border Saturday for a visitation to Northern Chapter No. 82, Royal Arch Masons of Thief River Falls.

Principal purpose of their visit was to confer the Mark Master degree (Canadian style) on 11 of their own candidates and six candidates from Thief River Falls.

Following the completion of the Mark Master degree, North Chapter 82 of Thief River Falls put on the Past Master degree for their six candidates plus 60 candidates from Canada. This is believed to be the largest class of candidates that has ever been instructed in this degree in Minnesota. Although the Canadian work does not include the Past Master degree, canadians are eligible to receive it when the opportunity arises. A special membership card was issued to each of them.

Attending this gala affair were two officers from the Grand chapter of Minnesota and one from the Grand chapter of Manitoba. Most Excellent Companion Don Purrington, Grand High Priest of the Grand chapter of Minnesota, came from Faribault. Also attending was Gary Johnson, Humboldt, who is Most Excellent Royal Arch Captain. Representing the Grand chapter of Manitoba was John S. Lewis, one of their top officers.

A banquet was held at the Elks club following degree work at the Masonic temple. Robert J. Helland, 7076 N. Horace, is High Priest of Northern chapter 82 and Ernest Swanson, Goodridge, is secretary.

Sen. Humphrey To Be Honored By DFL Party

Senator Hubert Humphrey will be honored for his twenty-five years of national service by the Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor party at their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, scheduled for Friday, April 5.

Thousands of DFL'ers are expected to take part in this tribute to the Minnesota Senator's work on behalf of his party, state and nation. Humphrey has been credited with being the founder, architect and developer of the DFL party's organization and programs.

Both the theme of the Jefferson-Jackson day dinner, "A Tribute to Senator Humphrey" and its purpose, "to honor Humphrey for his years of service", promises to make this dinner a highlight of the year for Minnesota DFL'ers, according to party chairman, Hank Fischer.

Humphrey was first elected to the United States Senate in 1948 and was sworn into office in 1949. Previous to his election to the Senate, he served as Mayor of Minneapolis. After 16 years in the Senate, he was elected Vice President in 1964. In 1968, the Democratic party nominated him as Presidential candidate and he lost the election. The man from Waverly was returned to the Senate in 1970.

This year, Humphrey will receive the labor movement's highest honor, the Murray-Green award, for his long-time record as a leader of liberal forces in America.

Humphrey also has been a leader in reforming the national Democratic party. As chairman of the party's commission on Vice Presidential selection, he issued a report calling for changes in the nomination process, which has been adopted by the Democratic national committee.

Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner will be held at the St. Paul civic center. A reception will begin at 5 p.m. and the dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Ticket information may be obtained by contacting the State DFL Office, 730 E. 38th St., Minneapolis, Minnesota 55407. Tickets are $50 per person. The names of all contributors to the dinner will be disclosed in keeping with the party's policy of full disclosure of its sources of funds.

Interest Rate On CCC Loans Is Raised By USDA

U. S. department of agriculture (USDA) has announced an increase in the interest rate on commodity loans to grain producers effective with 1974 crop year loans.

The increase from 5.5 to 7.25 per cent per annum, computed on a daily basis, will more nearly reflect the borrowing cost of money to the commodity credit corporation (CCC). In manking the announcement the department said that every six months the CCC will review interest charges for the CCC loan program with the goal of keeping the rate of interest charged to producers in line with CCC borrowing costs from the U. S. Treasury.

Also announced recently was an increase in warehouse and farm storage loan service fee to reflect additional costs in processing commodity loans on grains and similarly handled commodities. Warehouse storage loan service fee for grains are increased from $4 to $6 per loan plus $1 for each additional warehouse receipt over one.

Service fees on farm stored loans for grain are increased from $8 to $10 per loan plus $1 for each additional bin over one. These increases will also be effective with 1974 crop year loans.

Commodity loan operations have been carried out by CCC since 1933. During the past fiscal year (1972-73) a total of 1,811,687 loans were made to producers, individually and through producer cooperatives, for a total value of $1,423,614,136.

Council Accepts $843,400 Grants For Development

Grants totaling $843,400 were accepted by the Thief River Falls city council last night (Tuesday) to remodel the city's water treatment plant, install a sludge removal system and extend sewer and water mains to a 40 acre tract of land west of the Arctic complex for use as a future industrial park. The city will be required to provide $445,000 as its share of the project.

May 28 was set as the date for municipal elections to fill the vacancies created by the deaths of Councilmen William Froiland and Art Rambeck. The action was made possible by the adoption of enabling legislation recently passed by the state legislature.

A suggestion for painting this city's new water tower was presented by students of Peter Tri's fifth grade class at Northrop elementary school. They recommended that the tower should be painted, blue with "smile faces" overlooking the major approaches to Thief River Falls. No action was taken pending receipt of information concerning the cost of the proposal.

Representatives of Silverton township were present to request that their township be included in the rural fire association for fire protection. This was approved, on recommendation by Fire Chief Duane Noel and the rural fire association. The agreement would become effective upon receipt of the new rural fire truck which has been ordered.

April 22 was set as the date for a hearing on the 1974 improvement project.

Registrars To Begin Processing Boat Licenses

Deputy registrars in Minnesota have now been authorized to process renewals of boat licesnses in addition to handling applicatons for new licenses, the department of natural resources announced.

DNR license officials said, however, that if there is any change to be made in the license (such as a change in address of the owner) the renewal application will have to be made directly to the department's license center at 625 north Robert street, St Paul; telephone, 612-296-2316

Transfers of boat ownership must also be handled directly through the license center

Registrars processing applications for new licenses or renewals will provide the boat owner with a permit to operate his boat for 30 days while the application is being processed by the department's license center

Pennington Co. ACS Holds Meet At NW Hospital

Pennington county unit of the American cancer society met March 18 for its quarterly business meeting in the chapel of Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls, with president Raymond Ptacek giving a report on the activities of the various committees. Future plans for the group were also discussed.

Dave Gems, area cancer society representative from Detroit Lakes also addressed the unit. Following the meeting the board members toured Northwestern hospital.

Health Facility Information Now Ready For Public

State health commissioner Dr. Warren Lawson said recently that any member of the public who wants information on a specific hospital, nursing home, or boarding care home can visit or write the Minnesota department of health for a copy of the latest correction order sent to the facility.

This will show any deficiencies revealed during periodic survyes a health facilities by the department for licensing, Dr. Lawson said. Information disclosed will be non-confidential in nature. No reports can be given by telephone.

Things checked during a survey include matters like physical plant and general fire safety, administration, policies and procedures, nursing care plans, staffing patterns, dietary services, clinical records, medication and pharmaceutical handling procedures, physician services, general sanitation. (Any information relating to fire deficiencies identified by the state fire marshal are disclosable only by the department of public safety.)

Dr. Lawson stressed that the public should use discretion in evaluating correction orders since it is not always possible for every health care facility to be without some area where improvements are needed. There may be temporary problems with getting needed personnel or with deterioration of physical structure. So long as steps are being taken to correct shortcomings, the identification of problem areas sould not necessarily lead to the judgment that the facility is not ble to provide an acceptable level of health care.

There is also a system for disclosure of information developed under the federal certification program for providers of health services in the "Medicare" and "Medicaid" programs. Interested persons should check with their local social security office.

Townships' Role In Planning Is Discussed Friday

Township officers from Pennington county met Friday in Thief River Falls to discuss township participation in land use planning and zoning. Dr. Robert Snyder, land use economist from the University of Minnesota, addressed the group.

According to Snyder, the basic function of land use planning and zoning is to ensure that private land use does not have harmful side effects. He also explained that zoning by district can provide flexibility meeting the needs of citizens of the county.

Township officials expressed a concern that an acceptable land use plan should provide for "common sense" in administration.

The Pennington county commissioners is considering a planning process involving input from the township level. Opportunity for review and revision by local citizens and township officers will be provided before the board acts to adopt county zoning or a land use plan.

Minn. Turkey Farmers Double '72 Gross Income

Although Minnesota turkey growers received record gross income for record 1973 turkey production, net profits have been severely cut by soaring production costs, agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald reported recently.

Accoring to the state-federal crop and livestock reporting service, gross 1973 income of Minnesota turkey farmers was $158,736,000, or more than double gross income they received for 1972 production.

Contributing to the gross income record were a 10 per cent increase in production and an increase of 20 cents per pound over the average 1972 marketing price.

Minnesota's turkey production last year is estimated at 387,162,000 pounds, again the highest of all states. That was an increase of 38.5 million pounds compared to 1972 output, and the 1973 total represented nearly 16 per cent of national turkey production.

Commissioner Wefald said the 1973 average price of 41 cents per pound that Minnesota turkey growers received fell short of the record 48.5 cents averaged in 1948—25 years before.

"Production costs, meanwhile, are the highest on record, nearly doubling in just the past year. Costs right now are averaging 32 to 33 cents per pound, or the same range that turkey farmers are receiving for turkeys on the current market. Roy Munson of the Minnesota Turkey Growers advises that some growers are actually experiencing losses in the current cost-price squeeze," he said.

Commissioner Wefald said that the state's economy as a whole is the prime beneficiary of the turkey industry's record gross income, because the bulk of that $158,736,000 was spent by farmers for feed, fuel, poults, interest and loans, and other supplies and services essential to continued production.

"Minnesota and national turkey growers actually had a beneficial cost-price ratio for only three months last year, September through November, as price controls had prevented recovery of skyrocketing feed costs until late August. Production and selling prices peaked in November, and have dropped sharply since," commissioner Wefald said.

Ideas for Environmentalists

The following is taken from the "Environment Midwest", it's one of the most interesting and timely publications dealing directly with our urgent conservation needs and programs:

1. When you buy a new car find one that gets over 20 miles to the gallon.

2. Find out to what extent environmental studies have been incorporated into your local grade school and high school curriculum. If the teachers need help they can write to the "Open Lands Project, 53 West Jackson," and ask for "Environmental Education and Your School Site." Cost is $3.00.

3. Organize a court-watchers program to oversee how local judges are handling air pollution cases.

4. Find out what environmental legislation is pending before the congress or legislature and write them with your views.

5. Write a letter to the editor supporting clean air.

6. If you've got a serious environmental problem that needs immediate government attention call EPA in Chicago, collect, at 312-353-5800.

7. Make some acquaintances. Find out what other groups are involved in your area in environmental cleanup.

8. Visit one of EPA's field offices. They're located in this area in Minneapolis and Duluth.

9. Organize a smoke-watchers school to train citizens to become legally certified smoke-renders.

10. Plan to attend the upcoming hearings your state pollution agency will hold on its plans for next year

11. Get a group of people together and visit a local industry to see what they are doing about cleanup.

12. Tell a friend about this newsletter.

13. Buy an inexpensive noise meter and use it to check on noise in your neighborhood, by your work or near a street or construction site. Report your findings to your city and ask them to look into an ordinance.

14. Take a reporter out to lunch and fill him in on local pressing environmental problems.

15. If you live in a rural or semi-rural area get a scout troop or other groups involved in a survey of open dumps in your county. Map out locations and report them to your state pollution control agency.

16. If you live in the inner-city, make a survey of abandoned homes and cars in a square mile section. Report your findings to local officials and the press.

17. While you're jogging this spring, keep your eyes open for emerging environmental problems in your neighborhood. It'll take your mind off the strain.

18. Get a list of environmental films and set up a film series at the local library or school.

19. Take an adult education course on environmental problems. A course on "Keeping Your Car in Tune" would apply here also

20. Do some fund raising for your environmental group. A bake sale or dance might be just the thing. You might even contact a big entertainer in town.

21. If somebody is doing a good job of pollution cleanup, give him some positive reinforcement by writing a letter praising him to his boss.

22. Ask a radio or TV broadcaster for time to present a show on what your group is involved in.

23. Organize an auto tuneup program at a local shopping center to check cars.

24. Subscribe to information services from an environmental clearing house.

25. Look into a program to collect abandoned cars. Write Keep America Beautiful for details.

26. Find out what state laws are on strip mining and reclamation. There's going to be new emphasis on getting coal because of the energy crisis.

27. Read an anti-environment book to understand the other point of view.

28. If you've got some money to spare send some to an environmental group. If you're an engineer, scientist, doctor or lawyer and are looking for some more rewarding activity, volunteer to help a citizen group fight an environmental issue.

29. If you're in a union, attend a meeting of the local and find out what's being done about occupational health and safety.

30. Form a carpool and plot your environmental activities together on the way to work.

31. Find somebody who has dropped out of environmental activism and get them involved again.

32. Be proud of whatever you've accomplished—whether it be a little or a lot.

Upper Michigan Gets Minnesota Wolf Transplant

A pack of radio-tagged eastern timber wolves from Minnesota has a new home in Upper Michigan, according to officials of the biology department of Northern Michigan university and the U.S. fish and wildlife service. In news conferences held simultaneously in Marquette, Mich. and the Twin Cities, the university and service announced that two male and two female wolves had been flown from northern Minnesota and released in northern Michigan in the world's first experimental wolf transplant project.

The Michigan transplant project has had widespread support. It is funded by Northern Michigan university, the National Audubon society, and the Huron Mountain wildlife foundation. Both the Michigan and the Minnesota departments of natural resources have approved the project and cooperated with it.

The eastern timber wolf is on the secretary of the interior's list of endangered species. Although Minnesota has a supply of 500 to 1,000, Michigan has perhaps a half dozen in the Upper Peninsula. They are legally protected in Michigan but do not seem to be breeding.

The wolves were live-trapped from late December through January by Robert Himes of Ray, near International Falls, and held in a pen. "Although we cannot be certain they are all from the same pack, I caught them all in the same general area; and they got along well together in the pen," said Himes. "In fact, a young male and an old female even mated."

On March 5, Dr. David Mech, division of endangered wildlife research, U.S. Fish and Wildlife service, directed the anesthetizing and radio-tagging operation near International Falls. Dr. Mech was assisted by Jeff Renneberg of the same division, by graduate student Fred Harrington, and by Himes.

"We are all well practiced at this job," said Mech, "but it took us close to six hours to do the entire processing. Everything went well; it was just that we had to weigh and measure each wolf, ear-tage them (with a Michigan tag in one ear and a Minnesota tag in the other), blood sample them, attach the radio collars, innoculate them, and all the while keep them at least lightly drugged." This required continued observation and handling, as well as muzzling.

The four wolves are now probably the healthiest in the nation. They were vaccinated against rabies, distemper, leptospirosis and hepatitis. Penecillin was given as a precaution against infection; and just to make up for any disruption in their way of life caused by trapping holding and handling, they were dosed with enough vitamins to hold them for several weeks. Consultant for this aspect of the project was Dr. U.S. Seal of the Veterans administration hospital in the Twin Cities.

About 3 p.m. on March 5, the wolves were transported to the International Falls airport and placed aboard a Pipe Aztec aircraft. Mech accompanied the wolves in the back and kept close watch on their condition. Two hours and 300 miles later, the plane touched down at the Marquette airport.

The wolves were met by Dr. William Robinson and his graduate student Tom Weise of Northern Michigan university. The biologists immediately transferred the wolves and Mech into a small van and headed for the Huron Mountain area, some 40 miles northwest of Marquette. "We've been planning for this day for three years," Robinson said. (He and Weise will radio-track the wolves from an airplane and keep close watch on their movements for the next year.)

The wolves, still groggy, were released into a large pen in the Huron Mountain area, where road-killed deer had been placed for them. There they were held for a week and observed closely. "They came out of the anesthesia well and ate heartily," Tom Weise explained. "We are pleased with their condition."

On March 12, at dusk, the door to the pen was opened. "It was beautiful," exclaimed Robinson. "The leader wolf came out first and just trotted off into the woods. Within 15 minutes all of them were out of the pen. Soon four radio signals were coming from the west."

Robinson and Weise have kept track of the wolves daily ever since. "They seem to be getting along well," said Robinson, "and have settled into the area, at least temporarily. We aren't making any predictions about where they'll go eventually, however. This is an experiment to find out what they will do. If they remain in the area, fine. If they head back to Minnesota, we will follow them. At leaet we will know what happens to them. The radios should last six months to a year or more."

Perhaps stimulated by the new pack—including hopefully a pregnant female—the wolf will once again become a viable resident of Upper Michigan.

Forest Decline Is Reported By Minnesota DNR

Department of naural resources reported this week that about five per cent of the state's forest land area has been lost to other uses during the past 10 years.

Farming, land development, roads and restrictions on logging in recreation areas have contributied to the reduction in forest land base resulting in a reduction of the volume of timber which is ecommended to be utilized annually for good forest managment.

The findings of a study released by the Minnesota forest resource task force indicates a decline in the volume of wood that should be harvested from 3,514,000 cords annually to 2,769,000 cords.

The volume estimates are based on survey data obtained in 1962 applied to present commercial forest land ownership.

Insects and tree disease have also reduced both the available volume of timber and the growth rate of certain species, the report says.

Council Accepts $843,400 Grants For Development

Grants totaling $843,400 were accepted by the Thief River Falls city council last night (Tuesday) to remodel the city's water treatment plant, install a sludge removal system and extend sewer and water mains to a 40 acre tract of land west of the Arctic complex for use as a future industrial park. The city will be required to provide $445,000 as its share of the project.

May 28 was set as the date for municipal elections to fill the vacancies created by the deaths of Councilmen William Froiland and Art Rambeck. The action was made possible by the adoption of enabling legislation recently passed by the state legislature.

A suggestion for painting this city's new water tower was presented by students of Peter Tri's fifth grade class at Northrop elementary school. They recommended that the tower should be painted blue with "smile faces" overlooking the major approaches to Thief River Falls. No action was taken pending receipt of information concerning the cost of the proposal.

Representatives of Silverton township were present to request that their township be included in the rural fire association for fire protection. This was approved, on recommendation by Fire Chief Duane Noel and the rural fire association. The agreement would become effective upon receipt of the new rural fire truck which has been ordered.

April 22 was set as the date for a hearing on the 1974 improvement project.

Registrars To Begin Processing Boat Licenses

Deputy registrars in Minnesota have now been authorized to process renewals of boat licesnses in addition to handling applicatons for new licenses, the department of natural resources announced.

DNR license officials said, however, that if there is any change to be made in the license (such as a change in address of the owner) the renewal application will have to be made directly to the department's license center at 625 north Robert street, St. Paul; telephone, 612-296-2316.

Transfers of boat ownership must also be handled directly through the license center.

Registrars processing applications for new licenses or renewals will provide the boat owner with a permit to operate his boat for 30 days while the appliction is being processed by the department's license center.

Pennington Co. ACS Holds Meet At NW Hospital

Pennington county unit of the American cancer society met March 18 for its quarterly business meeting in the chapel of Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls, with president Raymond Ptacek giving a report on the activities of the various committees. Future plans for the group were also discussed.

Dave Gems, area cancer society representative from Detroit Lakes also addressed the unit. Following the meeting the board members toured Northwestern hospital.

Health Facility Information Now Ready For Public

State health commissioner Dr. Warren Lawson said recently that any member of the public who wants information on a specific hospital, nursing home, or boarding care home can visit or write the Minnesota department of health for a copy of the latest correction order sent to the facility.

This will show any deficiencies revealed during periodic survyes a health facilities by the department for licensing, Dr. Lawson said. Information disclosed will be non-confidential in nature. No reports can be given by telephone.

Things checked during a survey include matters like physical plant and general fire safety, administration, policies and procedures, nursing care plans, staffing patterns, dietary services, clinical records, medication and pharmaceutical handling procedures, physician services, general sanitation. (Any information relating to fire deficiencies identified by the state fire marshal are disclosable only by the department of public safety.)

Dr. Lawson stressed that the public should use discretion in evaluating correction orders since it is not always possible for every health care facility to be without some area where improvements are needed. There may be temporary problems with getting needed personnel or with deterioration of physical structure. So long as steps are being taken to correct shortcomings, the identification of problem areas sould not necessarily lead to the judgment that the facility is not ble to provide an acceptable level of health care.

There is also a system for disclosure of information developed under the federal certification program for providers of health services in the "Medicare" and "Medicaid" programs. Interested persons should check with their local social security office.

Townships' Role In Planning Is Discussed Friday

Township officers from Pennington county met Friday in Thief River Falls to discuss township participation in land use planning and zoning. Dr. Robert Snyder, land use economist from the University of Minnesota, addressed the group.

According to Snyder, the basic function of land use planning and zoning is to ensure that private land use does not have harmful side effects. He also explained that zoning by district can provide flexibility meeting the needs of citizens of the county.

Township officials expressed a concern that an acceptable land use plan should provide for "common sense" in administration.

The Pennington county commissioners is considering a planning process involving input from the township level. Opportunity for review and revision by local citizens and township officers will be provided before the board acts to adopt county zoning or a land use plan.

Minn. Turkey Farmers Double '72 Gross Income

Although Minnesota turkey growers received record gross income for record 1973 turkey production, net profits have been severely cut by soaring production costs, agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald reported recently.

Accoring to the state-federal crop and livestock reporting service, gross 1973 income of Minnesota turkey farmers was $158,736,000, or more than double gross income they received for 1972 production.

Contributing to the gross income record were a 10 per cent increase in production and an increase of 20 cents per pound over the average 1972 marketing price.

Minnesota's turkey production last year is estimated at 387,162,000 pounds, again the highest of all states. That was an increase of 38.5 million pounds compared to 1972 output, and the 1973 total represented nearly 16 per cent of national turkey production.

Commissioner Wefald said the 1973 average price of 41 cents per pound that Minnesota turkey growers received fell short of the record 48.5 cents averaged in 1948—25 years before.

"Production costs, meanwhile, are the highest on record, nearly doubling in just the past year. Costs right now are averaging 32 to 33 cents per pound, or the same range that turkey farmers are receiving for turkeys on the current market. Roy Munson of the Minnesota Turkey Growers advises that some growers are actually experiencing losses in the current cost-price squeeze," he said.

Commissioner Wefald said that the state's economy as a whole is the prime beneficiary of the turkey industry's record gross income, because the bulk of that $158,736,000 was spent by farmers for feed, fuel, poults, interest and loans, and other supplies and services essential to continued production.

"Minnesota and national turkey growers actually had a beneficial cost-price ratio for only three months last year, September through November, as price controls had prevented recovery of skyrocketing feed costs until late August. Production and selling prices peaked in November, and have dropped sharply since," commissioner Wefald said.

Ideas for Environmentalists

The following is taken from the "Environment Midwest", it's one of the most interesting and timely publications dealing directly with our urgent conservation needs and programs:

1. When you buy a new car, find one that gets over 20 miles to the gallon.

2. Find out to what extent environmental studies have been incorporated into your local grade school and high school curriculum. If the teachers need help they can write to the "Open Lands Project, 53 West Jackson," and ask for "Environmental Education and Your School Site." Cost is $3.00.

3. Organize a court-watchers program to oversee how local judges are handling air pollution cases.

4. Find out what environmental legislation is pending before the congress or legislature and write them with your views.

5. Write a letter to the editor supporting clean air.

6. If you've got a serious environmental problem that needs immediate government attention call EPA in Chicago, collect, at 312-353-5800.

7. Make some acquaintances. Find out what other groups are involved in your area in environmental cleanup.

8. Visit one of EPA's field offices. They're located in this area in Minneapolis and Duluth.

9. Organize a smoke-watchers school to train citizens to become legally certified smoke-readers.

10. Plan to attend the upcoming hearings your state pollution agency will hold on its plans for next year.

11. Get a group of people together and visit a local industry to see what they are doing about cleanup.

12. Tell a friend about this newsletter.

13. Buy an inexpensive noise meter and use it to check on noise in your neighborhood, by your work or near a street or construction site. Report your findings to your city and ask them to look into an ordinance.

14. Take a reporter out to lunch and fill him in on local pressing environmental problems.

15. If you live in a rural or semi-rural area get a scout troop or other groups involved in a survey of open dumps in your county. Map out locations and report them to your state pollution control agency.

16. If you live in the inner-city, make a survey of abandoned homes and cars in a square mile section. Report your findings to local officials and the press.

17. While you're jogging this spring, keep your eyes open for emerging environmental problems in your neighborhood. It'll take your mind off the strain.

18. Get a list of environmental films and set up a film series at the local library or school.

19. Take an adult education course on environmental problems. A course on "Keeping Your Car in Tune" would apply here also.

20. Do some fund raising for your environmental group. A bake sale or dance might be just the thing. You might even contact a big entertainer in town.

21. If somebody is doing a good job of pollution cleanup, give him some positive reinforcement by writing a letter praising him to his boss.

22. Ask a radio or TV broadcaster for time to present a show on what your group is involved in.

23. Organize an auto tuneup program at a local shopping center to check cars.

24. Subscribe to information services from an environmental clearing house.

25. Look into a program to collect abandoned cars. Write Keep America Beautiful for details.

26. Find out what state laws are on strip mining and reclamation. There's going to be new emphasis on getting coal because of the energy crisis.

27. Read an anti-environment book to understand the other point of view.

28. If you've got some money to spare send some to an environmental group. If you're an engineer, scientist, doctor or lawyer and are looking for some more rewarding activity, volunteer to help a citizen group fight an environmental issue.

29. If you're in a union, attend a meeting of the local and find out what's being done about occupational health and safety.

30. Form a carpool and plot your environmental activities together on the way to work.

31. Find somebody who has dropped out of environmental activism and get them involved again.

32. Be proud of whatever you've accomplished—whether it be a little or a lot.

Upper Michigan Gets Minnesota Wolf Transplant

A pack of radio-tagged eastern timber wolves from Minnesota has a new home in Upper Michigan, according to officials of the biology department of Northern Michigan university and the U.S. fish and wildlife service. In news conferences held simultaneously in Marquette, Mich. and the Twin Cities, the university and service announced that two male and two female wolves had been flown from northern Minnesota and released in northern Michigan in the world's first experimental wolf transplant project.

The Michigan transplant project has had widespread support. It is funded by Northern Michigan university, the National Audubon society, and the Huron Mountain wildlife foundation. Both the Michigan and the Minnesota departments of natural resources have approved the project and cooperated with it.

The eastern timber wolf is on the secretary of the interior's list of endangered species. Although Minnesota has a supply of 500 to 1,000, Michigan has perhaps a half dozen in the Upper Peninsula. They are legally protected in Michigan but do not seem to be breeding.

The wolves were live-trapped from late December through January by Robert Himes of Ray, near International Falls, and held in a pen. "Although we cannot be certain they are all from the same pack, I caught them all in the same general area; and they got along well together in the pen," said Himes. "In fact, a young male and an old female even mated."

On March 5, Dr. David Mech, division of endangered wildlife research, U.S. Fish and Wildlife service, directed the anesthetizing and radio-tagging operation near International Falls. Dr. Mech was assisted by Jeff Renneberg of the same division, by graduate student Fred Harrington, and by Himes.

"We are all well practiced at this job," said Mech, "but it took us close to six hours to do the entire processing. Everything went well; it was just that we had to weigh and measure each wolf, ear-tage them (with a Michigan tag in one ear and a Minnesota tag in the other), blood sample them, attach the radio collars, innoculate them, and all the while keep them at least lightly drugged." This required continued observation and handling, as well as muzzling.

The four wolves are now probably the healthiest in the nation. They were vaccinated against rabies, distemper, leptospirosis and hepatitis. Penecillin was given as a precaution against infection; and just to make up for any disruption in their way of life caused by trapping holding and handling, they were dosed with enough vitamins to hold them for several weeks. Consultant for this aspect of the project was Dr. U.S. Seal of the Veterans administration hospital in the Twin Cities.

About 3 p.m. on March 5, the wolves were transported to the International Falls airport and placed aboard a Pipe Aztec aircraft. Mech accompanied the wolves in the back and kept close watch on their condition. Two hours and 300 miles later, the plane touched down at the Marquette airport.

The wolves were met by Dr. William Robinson and his graduate student Tom Weise of Northern Michigan university. The biologists immediately transferred the wolves and Mech into a small van and headed for the Huron Mountain area, some 40 miles northwest of Marquette. "We've been planning for this day for three years," Robinson said. (He and Weise will radio-track the wolves from an airplane and keep close watch on their movements for the next year.)

The wolves, still groggy, were released into a large pen in the Huron Mountain area, where road-killed deer had been placed for them. There they were held for a week and observed closely. "They came out of the anesthesia well and ate heartily," Tom Weise explained. "We are pleased with their condition."

On March 12, at dusk, the door to the pen was opened. "It was beautiful," exclaimed Robinson. "The leader wolf came out first and just trotted off into the woods. Within 15 minutes all of them were out of the pen. Soon four radio signals were coming from the west."

Robinson and Weise have kept track of the wolves daily ever since. "They seem to be getting along well," said Robinson, "and have settled into the area, at least temporarily. We aren't making any predictions about where they'll go eventually, however. This is an experiment to find out what they will do. If they remain in the area, fine. If they head back to Minnesota, we will follow them. At least we will know what happens to them. The radios should last six months to a year or more."

Perhaps stimulated by the new pack—including hopefully a pregnant female—the wolf will once again become a viable resident of Upper Michigan.

UMC Will Host Athletic Injury Seminar April 6

A medical and dental clinic on training and athletic injuries will be held on Sat., April 6, for coaches in the northwestern Minnesota area at the University of Minnesota technical college, Crookston (UMC).

The program begins at 9 a.m. It is endorsed and sponsored by the Crookston medical and dental staff, by UMC, the Crookston public schools, the Crookston Cathedral school system, the Crookston Jaycees, and the Lake of the Woods chapter of the academy of family physicians.

Purpose of the program is to help meet the problems associated with athletic programs and the participation of the young athlete. It is an attempt to bring coaches and the medical and dental communities together for their mutual benefit.

Dr. Edward Henderson, professor of orthopedics at the Mayo medical school and chairman of the state medical association committee on medical aspects in sports, will speak during the afternoon session. His topics will be athletic injuries to the lower extremities and to the upper extremities and neck. Dr. Hederson is a recognized national authority on orthopedics and has published numerous scientific articles. He is in demand as a speaker throughout the United States and Canada.

Gordon Graham, presently head athletic trainer at Mankato State College and assistant professor in the physical education department, will present three different morning programs. Graham is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, with a degree in physiotherapy. He has served in both the hospital rehabilitation programs and as athletic trainer for Moorhead State College, the University of North Dakota, and the Canadian team in the recent Pan Am games in Winnipeg. He is presently chairman of the injuries and research committee and a member of the committee on safeguard in sports in the medical aspects of the national college athletic association. Graham has the reputation of being one of the best trainers throughout the North central states.

Program members from the local area include Herschel Lysaker, UMC athletic director; Dr. Robert Schnabel, pediatrician at Northwestern clinic, Crookston; Dr. John Jensen, Crookston clinic; Dr. Pedro Ortegon, orthopedic surgeon; and Tedd Ostrem, D.D.S. with the Red River Valley dental building, Crookston.

Prior registration for all doctors, coaches and trainers will be welcomed so that better preparation can be made for the seminar. A $5 registration fee is required, which includes the cost of the noon meal and coffee breaks. Brochures with registration forms have been sent to the athletic directors in area schools of Northwestern Minnesota and Northeastern North Dakota. Brochures are also being sent to all medical doctors in the area who will receive seven prescribed credits towards their yearly accreditation requirement for members of the academy of family practice.

Forest Decline Is Reported By Minnesota DNR

Department of naural resources reported this week that about five per cent of the state's forest land area has been lost to other uses during the past 10 years.

Farming, land development, roads and restrictions on logging in recreation areas have contributed to the reduction in forest land base resulting in a reduction of the volume of timber which is ecommended to be utilized annually for good forest managment.

The findings of a study released by the Minnesota forest resource task force indicates a decline in the volume of wood that should be harvested from 3,514,000 cords annually to 2,769,000 cords.

The volume estimates are based on survey data obtained in 1962 applied to present commercial forest land ownership.

Insects and tree disease have also reduced both the available volume of timber and the growth rate of certain species, the report says.

Reflecting on his team's outstanding 1973-74 season, Lincoln high school basketball coach Lee Swanson called the recently completed campaign his most enjoyable year in his 14 years of coaching.

Thief River Falls finished the regular season with a 12-6 record and posted wins over Oslo 65-44, Fisher 53-51 and Goodridge 58-50 to claim its first district 31 tournament title since 1969. The Prowlers then beat Mahnomen 62-52 and Blackduck 60-54 to win the region eight championship and earn a coveted state tournament berth for the first time since 1960. State tournament losses to Waseca 60-53 and Simley 70-55 last week can not tarnish a memorable Prowler season.

"It was really a great year," commented Swanson who completed his third year at the Prowler helm. "It was by far my most enjoyable year in basketball. The players were a great bunch of guys, the administration was certainly helpful and athletic director Russ Smith was a great help."

"I personally want to thank the whole community, the school faculty and the entire student body for their basketball support during the year," stressed Swanson who is already looking forward to a possible repeat state tournament appearance next year.

Thief River Falls could rank among the region's top team next winter with the Prowlers returning three full time starters off this year's championship squad. Returning to the Prowler line-up next season will be 6-8 center Wayne Peterson, 6-1 forward Dallas Kemmer and 5-9 guard Jerry Sandahl, a talented trio that will give Swanson a solid nucleus to build another title contender around.

"We could be in a position to repeat our title next year, but it'll take a lot of hard work this summer and throughout next season," explained the Prowler coach. "People will try extra hard to beat us next year because we went to state, but I feel the guys will accept the challenge and will try to do it again rather than be satisfied with having done it once already. We'll have the potential to be as good as we want to be. It'll all depend upon how much we'll want to work for it. We won't be able to rest on our laurels."

Coach Chet Engelman's Northland community college basketball team selected its annual all-opponent team earlier this week while also naming their three toughest teams they faced during their successful 20-5 season.

Northland's all-opponent team, named in order of the number of votes received, included 6-4 forward Andrew Kelson, Crookston; 6-4 forward Ellis Funchess, Lake Region; 5-11 guard Tim Getten, Normandale; 6-6 center Dave Krebs, Mesabi;, and 6-3 forward Mike Kochevar, Vermilion.

Surprisingly, the Northman players rated two teams ahead of Normandale, the Bloomington school that ousted Northland from the state tournament 83-79 and went out to win the state title for the second straight year, in their listing of toughest opponents. The players ranked Lake Region, twice a winner by three points over the Northmen, as their toughest opponent; followed by Northwest Division rival Crookston, a team that split its' two game regular season series against the Northmen; and Normandale.

Prowler Hockey Statistics Posted

Although the season ended nearly a month ago, the Lincoln high school hockey team will put the finishing touches to its 1973-74 campaign Mon., April 8, when the squad will be feted at its annual post season team banquet in the basement of St. Bernard's church.

Final season ending statistics were announced this week by Prowler head coach Bill McGann who closed out his second year at the Thief River Falls helm with a 13-9 over-all season record.

Thief River Falls finished the regular season with an 11-7 mark and advanced to the championship game of the region eight tournament with wins over Moorhead 10-2 and Warroad 4-3 before falling to Bemidji 2-0. A second Prowler try at an elusive state tournament berth was stopped by Hibbing 7-2 in the region three title game.

The Prowler regular season began with four straight wins as Thief River Falls beat East Grand Forks 13-7, Bemidji 6-3, Crookston 2-1 and Moorhead 14-2 before losing to Superior, Wisconsin 5-3. Thief River Falls slipped to a 7-6 mark after the mandatory two week Minnesota state high school league ordered Christmas break. Prowler post-Christmas wins were recorded over Warroad 11-3, Hallock 6-3, Grand Forks Red River 7-2, Fargo South 10-0, East Grand Forks 10-6, Grand Forks Central 5-4 in overtime and Detroit Lakes 6-3. Thief River Falls after-Christmas losses were suffered at the hands of Roseau 7-6 and 5-4 in overtime both times, Grand Rapids 3-0, Bemidji 4-2, Warroad 5-1 and Virginia 5-4.

"I think over-all we did, in a way, surpass our pre-season expectations," said McGann who nearly copied his first year record of 14-8. "We did better than a lot of people thought we would by getting a lot of mileage out of a lot of average hockey players. We felt we had the makings of a good hockey team, but we just didn't know how far we would be able to go."

Offense was the team's strong point this winter, but at the same time it also presented the team with its biggest problem, pointed out McGann. "At the beginning we wondered about our offensive punch, but it came along and really surprised us. Our biggest problem concerned the offense, too, though. We couldn't seem to maintain a consistant offense. It was either feast or famine—score a lot of goals or none at all."

Thief River Falls out-scored 22 opponents 127-83 this winter, averaging 5.3 goals per game, compared to only 3.3 for the opposition. The Prowlers out shot their foes 625-486.

Leading the potent Thief River Falls offense during the year was center Scott Reed, an easy-going senior who scored 17 goals and picked up 35 assists for 52 points. Jeff Tunberg, a junior wing, scored a team high 22 goals and added eight assists to rank second in the individual scoring parade with 30 points.

Team captain Tony Dorn, a senior defenseman, was the team's third leading scorer with 13 goals and 13 assists for 26 points. Brothers Scott and Tim Engelstad, a pair of senior wings, ranked right behind Dorn with 25 points apiece. Scott scored four goals and totaled 21 assists while Tim scored 14 goals and collected 11 assists.

Thief River Falls clicked for 21 power play goals in 84 power play opportunities this winter while giving up 16 goals in 83 short-handed situations. Thief River Falls scored three times while killing penalties, but also gave up three goals while enjoying a man advantage.

Thief River Falls defensive efforts also received recognition from McGann. "All of our defensemen played strong, steady hockey all year—like we expected they would since that was our most experienced area at the start of the year."

Goalie Joel Folger, a senior, played in all 22 Prowler games during the year and turned in a stand-out effort in his first year of extensive varsity action. "Folger was a pleasant surprise for us," noted McGann. "Joel came along and played steady in goal for us all year." Folger recorded a strong 3.4 goals against average during the season, facing 546 opponent's shots, making 468 saves and giving up 78 goals. Junior Murray Melander and sophomore Terry Sullivan saw brief playing time in goal with Melander making 15 saves and giving up five goals in four games while Sullivan recorded one save without being scored upon in his one varsity appearance.

"I've enjoyed my two years here and I'd certainly like to stay," commented McGann who added, "I want to accomplish more here. The Thief River Falls program is capable of winning a region title somewhere along the line and I want to be part of it. That's a personal goal—to win a region eight title for Thief River Falls. It's something everyone shoots for all along the hockey program."

McGann also singled out the 11 seniors on the Prowler roster for special recognition. "The seniors did a real fine job for us this year. They set a good example for the underclassmen and gave them something to shoot for and try to surpass what they accomplished this year." Other seniors on the Prowler roster included defensemen Greg Sorenson, Mike LaSalle and Mike Onkka, along with forwards Mike Froehle, Max Thrall and Pete Hess.

John Schmitz served as McGann's varsity assistant coach this winter with Dale Wennberg directing the Thief River Falls junior varsity squad to a successful 17-1-1 record.

Northmen Set 39 Records During 20-5 1973-74 Basketball Season

Northland community college's finest basketball season in the nine year history of the sport at the Thief River Falls school found no less than 39 team and individual records fall during the Northman eye-catching 20-5 1973-74 season.

A banner recruiting year for fourth year Northland head coach Chet Engelman landed a bevy of talented freshmen for the Northland basketball program this season resulting in the school's best ever campaign.

Northland raced through the regular season schedule with an 18-4 record, winning the school's first Northwest Division pennant in the process with a 9-2 conference mark and qualifying for an MJCAA state tournament berth for the first time. The Northmen ripped Vermilion 84-61 semifinal decision to eventual champion Normandale. Northland bounced back to beat Mesabi 97-82 in the state consolation game.

Despite the season's unmatched success, Engelman was still disappointed at the year's end results. "We were a little disappointed at the end, although we were much better than we expected to be at the beginning of the year," said Engelman. "We could of just as easily beaten Normandale with a few breaks. We'll set our sights to go all the way to the national tournament in Kansas next year," commented Engelman who expects his entire freshman class to return next season, hopefully buoyed by new incoming freshmen.

Northland's 18-4 regular season found the high scoring Northmen reaching the 100 point plateau ten times, including a school record high 124-119 triumph over Hibbing. Other 100 point Northland wins were posted over the alumni 103-81, Trinity College 104-90 and 117-93, Mayville junior varsity 103-79, Inver Hills 100-84, Waseca 108-83, Rainy River 101-87, Mesabi 115-86 and Itasca 111-69.

Other Northland regular season wins were gained by beating Crookston Tech 83-72, Rainy River 90-82, Brainerd 78-70 and 93-69, Fergus Falls 98-95 and 90-77, Itasca 89-82 and Hibbing 85-74.

The four Northland regular season losses were by a total of only nine points as the Northmen lost to Lake Region 73-70 and 80-77, Vermilion 70-68 in overtime and Crookston Tech 74-73.

Northland averaged a school record 93.6 points per game while holding opponents to a record low average of 80.5 points per contest, resulting in a record differential average of 13.5 points per game.

Although blessed with an abundance of individual talent, Engelman pointed to teamwork as the Northland success factor. "Teamwork was our key to success this year," explained Engelman who posted records of 3-19, 13-12 and 7-15 in his three previous years at Northland. "We had good people and they worked hard together. They all played pretty unselfishly. Everybody fit into their own things that led to a total team effort."

Northland's teamwork was reflected in the record setting department where 27 of the 39 records set by this year's squad were team marks while 12 were individual standards.

Among the single season team records set this winter were the most field goals 1,036; best field goal percentage 46.9; most rebounds 1,516; best rebound average 60.6; most assists 575; best assist average 23.0; most loose ball recoveries 614; and best recovery average 24.6.

Rounding out the team records established this season included single game marks for most rebounds 96, most assists 33; most recoveries 40; and most blocked shots 20.

Freshman guard David Dickey was the most prominent of a host of talented individual Northland performers during the 1973-74 season with the 6-0 ball handling wizard dazzling the large Nor*thland crowds with his uncanny* basketball ability. "David was fantastic, no doubt about it," said Engelman. "He did an excellent job for us. I think he showed a lot of people what can be done with a basketball. I think he illustrated that you don't have to score to be a good basketball player."

Dickey did wind up as the leading Northland scorer for the year with an 18.5 average, but it was the Ohio native's assists that caught most everyone's attention. Dickey singlehandedly broke the old Northland team season assist mark of 318 by handing out an unbelievable 319 assists that also established a new Northland career assist mark. Dickey also set a new individual single season record of 132 loose ball recoveries while naturally setting new single game assist and recovery marks of 20 and 13 respectively.

Burnie Stephens, a 6-4 freshman center, ranked among the state's best MJCAA pivotmen, excelling on defense for the Northmen although he also boasted a 15.2 scoring average. Stephens set four Northland individual records during the year. He blocked a record 61 shots in 25 games and set a new single game mark with eight blocked shots and a new conference game record of six blocks. Stephens also pulled down a single game record 17 offensive rebounds.

Three other Northland individual records were ex*tablished during the 1973-74* season as 6-2 freshman forward Ralph Fitts set rebound records with 21 defensive caroms and 30 total rebounds in Northland's state tournament win over Vermilion while 6-2 forward Tom Kays, one of only two sophomores on the Northland roster, set a new single game free throw record with a perfect seven for seven performance against Fergus Falls.

NCC Competes In JC Volleyball Division Meet

Northland community college men's intramural volleyball champions recently participated in an extramural volleyball tournament for northern division colleges of the Minnesota junior college athletic association at Itasca community college in Grand Rapids March 20.

Teams representing colleges from Hibbing, Mesabi, Itasca, Crookston Tech and Northland competed in a round robin tournament with each team playing each other and the match determined by winning two out of three games. The tournament championship was awarded on the basis of which college won the most match scores.

Final standing after completion of the round robin tourney found Hibbing and Mesabi tied for the championship with 3-1 records. Northland and UMTC tied for second place and Itasca finished third.

Students representing Northland in the tournament were Steve Taflin, Clearbrook; Roger Golby, Karlstad; Neal Bernman, Clearbrook; Ken Lindblom, Goodridge; Tim Tuseth, Beltrami; and Pete Sullivan, Thief River Falls.

Northland athletic director, Al Adams accompanied the team to Grand Rapids.

In Memorium
In rememberance of my dear husband, Mike Antonoff who passed away two sad years ago, March 26, 1972.
Sadly missed by his wife, Esther, Mrs. Mike Antonoff.

I am home in Heaven, dear ones;
Oh so happy and so bright
There is perfect joy and beauty
In this everlasting life.
All the pain and grief is over,
Every restless tossing passed;
I am now at peace forever
Safely home in Heaven at last.
Did you wonder, I so calmly
Trod the valley of the shade?
Oh! But Jesus love illumined
Every dark and fearful glade.
And He came Himself to meet me,
In that way so hard to tread
And with Jesus arm to lean on
Could I have one doubt or dread?
Then you must not grieve so sorely,
For I love you dearly still;
Try to look beyond earth's shadows
Pray to trust our Father's will.
There is work still waiting for you,
So you must not idly stand;
Do it now, while life remaineth—
You shall rest in Jesus land,
When that work is all completed
He will gently call you Home.
Oh! the rapture of that meeting
Oh! the joy to see you come.

A FRIENDLY CITY deserves a smiling emblem, according to members of Peter Tri's fifth grade class at Northrop elementary school. Twenty-eight of the students attended the regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council Tuesday evening to suggest that the city paint a smiling face on its new water tower. Mark Isaacson acted as spokesman for the class and posters were displayed in the council chambers. Council members appeared receptive to the idea and the city engineer is now checking into possible costs. With the poster above are Karla Houston, Paula Lindbloom, Karen Aas, Colette Anderson and Shelly Sabo.

5th Graders Ask Smiling Face For New Water Tower

Twenty-eight youngsters from Peter Tri's fifth grade class at Northrop elementary school visited the Thief River Falls city council Tuesday evening to present their idea for painting of the new water tower on the west side of the city. Mark Isaacson served as spokesman for the group which placed a number of hand-made posters in the council room.

Inspired by a picture which appeared in a news publication that the class uses in school, class members are urging that a smiling face be painted on the tower. Council members received the suggestion favorably Tuesday, thanked the students for their interest and presentation, and will explore the possibility and potential cost of such a project.

Several letters from the students to the mayor and council were made available to the Times. Here are some of the comments:

Randy Pyrtle—"I would like to express my feelings about the new water tower that was just built. It has no mood, no feeling. It doesn't express inspiration to the people who see it. I suggest we paint a big smiling face on the tower. Our town would have something of inspiration that no other town would have. People might even come from other towns to see it."

Roger Quigley—"I am writing because I think it would be a very good idea to paint a smiling face on the new water tower that is out by the arena, because many other people would think of it as a sort of small masterpiece. And when someone goes by it they would say, 'Look at that water tower; isn't it funny looking?' and start laughing."

Edward LaJeunesse—"I am writing because I think you can paint a happy face on the water tower in Thief River Falls. I hope you can do so. When people from another town come they will want to stay."

Lisa Wagner—"We would like to have our water tower painted like a happy face! With Prowler colors. I think it would look nice. It would make people smile and laugh when people drove by. That would be nice."

Kirk Hamre—"I am writing to you because I think I have an idea for the new water tower in Thief River Falls. I think you should paint it yellow with a happy face at the top of the tower."

Randy Brekkestran—"I am writing to you because I think that our new water tower should have a smiling face on it. Because when people from other towns come to ours they will see a smiling water tower and a smiling town. Then the people around the Thief River Falls area would be smiling too."

Karla Houston—"We would appreciate to have a smiling face painted on the new water tower. We got the idea from our Weekly Reader. I think that would make it cute and the people that travel through probably think its a good idea too. I think it should be blue with a gold smiling face because that's the color of our Prowlers. And they are important."

Shelly Sabo—"We have found an excellent picture for our new water tower. It would make our town look much brighter. Also people that are passing by would think it looks nice. Our fifth grade at Northrop school got the idea from a Weekly Reader."

Karen Aas—"Our class gets a weekly magazine. On the back of an issue there was a water tower just like our new one only it had a smile on it and we'd like that done to ours.

Joan Glague—"....Since our water tower is so dull and sad, the Northrop school fifth graders in Mr. Tri's room decided to brighten our town up with a blue and yellow happy face for the Prowlers colors. We are asking to help us get this on our water tower. I really think it would brighten up our town a lot and there are not any other water towers around like it. People from other towns would probably even come here to see it. Please help us to get it."

U of M Changes Its High School Test Program

High school students who plan to enter the University of Minnesota now may choose between two available qualifying tests.

Change in the test requirement applies to students who plan to enter the University as freshmen in the fall of 1975 or after.

A student may now choose to take either the preliminary scholastic aptitude test-national merit scholarship qualifying test (PSAT) or the test from the American college testing program (ACT), formerly the one test required by the university.

The university changed its admissions test policy to reflect changes in the Minnesota statewide testing program, which is offering the PSAT.

According to Leo Abbott, assistant director of admissions and records on the Twin Cities campus, the new testing option is designed to be responsive to individual students' needs.

"There is a growing need for information that can give high school and college counselors assistance in helping students select an appropriate college, a suitable major or program and a realistic career objective," he said.

Abbott said he expects that giving students a choice on which test to take will give them more flexibility in making their plans.

In choosing between the two tests a student may take into account other factors in additon to university admissions requirements, he said. One test may be more appropriate for applying for scholarships (state scholarships are awarded through the PSAT test). The timing of the tests may be a factor (the PSAT is taken in the junior year, the ACT in the senior year), or their use in applying to other schools could determine which test a student takes.

While not all colleges and units at the university require one or the other test for admission, many use the test findings for placement in different sections of freshmen courses and for advising purposes.

Some colleges and campuses of the university use a combination of test score along with high school class rank to make admission decisions.

Any student who has questions about which test would be most appropriate for him, or about university admission requirements, should contact his guidance counselor.

Cancer Program To Be Presented In Penn. County

Cancer of the colon and rectum will be discussed at free programs sponsored by the Pennington county unit of the American cancer society Monday, Tuesday and April 10. Monday's presentation will be at the St. Hilaire school with Tuesday's at Lincoln high school. The program will also be presented at the Goodridge school on April 10. Sessions will begin at 8 p.m. each evening.

According to information distributed by Raymond Ptacek, president of the local unit of the cancer socity, colon and rectal cancer is the most common internal cancer among adults. The American cancer socity estimates that 79,000 Americans will suffer from this form of cancer in 1974. Of that number, 47,000 people will die from the disease. About 90 per cent of the people afflicted with this form of cancer are over age 45 with men and women being equally susceptible.

Using techniques currently available, about 75 per cent of the deaths from this disease could be prevented by early diagnosis and prompt treatment. Proctoscopic examination by a physician is recommended regularly for all persons over 40 to detect precancerous conditions which can be treated effectively.

Information about symptoms and treatment of colon and rectal cancer will be presented at these meetings or by writing to the Pennington county unit of the American cancer society. Its address is Box 184, Thief River Falls, Minn. 56701.

Arbor Day Will Be Observed In U.S. On April 26

Arbor Day will be observed in Minnesota and throughout the United States on April 26, the department of naural resources noted today.

Conservation groups, schools and civic organizations traditionally hold tree planting ceremonies or make other contributions to natural resources in observance of the event.

The purpose of Arbor Day is to focus attention on the vital role that trees play in the environment.

In additon to providing vital wood products, trees put oxygen and water vapor into the air, provide food and cover for wildlife, slow wind and water erosion, and provide essential shade for plants, animals, and man. They also provide scenic beauty so important to our citizens and Minnesota's tourist industry.

This year marks the 98th observance of Arbor Day. Minnesota's first official Arbor Day was celebrated in 1876.

U.S. Recognizes Midwest States As Energy Group

Delegates to the midwest conference on Canadian oil dependency meeting here recently are forming an energy task force which will have full recognition as advisors to the federal energy office and U.S department of state during negotiations with Canada and in efforts to provide alternate sources to replace crude oil export reductions from Canada. U.S. Representative Bob Bergland, chairman of the conference, will be temporary head of the task force.

Explaining the unique problem of the six midwestern states from Montana to Michigan, Bergland said: "The Canadian government is working toward the same self-sufficiency in crude oil production as the United States. They now export, from their western provinces, about the same amount imported into the eastern provinces. Their obvious answer," he continued, "is an east-west pipeline to distribute their own oil to meet their own needs. "That's fine for Canada," Bergland added, "but where does it leave the midwest United States?" According to Bergland, in the states of Montana, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, some 23 refiners depend on Canada for over 50 per cent of their crude supply. In Bergland's home state of Minnesota the problem is even more accute with 85 per cent of its refineries crude oil supply coming from Canada.

Bergland said that the major purpose of the conference was accomplished "by gaining national attention to our special difficulties." Concluding, Bergland said the primary duty of the task force would be "to make sure that alternate sources of crude are provided midwest refiners at the same rate that Canadian supplies are withdrawn."

In addition to the Congressional delegations and energy officials from the six midwestern states, participants in the conference included William Simon, head of the federal energy office: Rufus Smith, assistant secretary of state and Jared Carter, undersecretary of the interior.

Tax Objector Is Arrested For Parole Violation

Jerome Daly, 47, a disbarred attorney from Bloomington, was arrested at 2:30 p.m. March 19 by federal marshals in Pittsburgh, Penn. A warrant was issued for Daly's arrest by federal district judge Edward J. Devitt at 1 p.m. the same day.

Chief U. S. probation officer for the district of Minnesota, D. Kostohryz, said that the warrant was issued because Daly allegedly violated probation. He also said Daly would probably be returned to Minnesota for a hearing.

Daly was found guilty of failure to file federal income tax returns for 1967 and 1968 in federal district court October 12, 1972, after a two-day jury trial. These findings were supported by the 8th circuit court of appeals in St. Louis and the U. S. supreme court refused to hear the case.

Daly filed Forms 1040 that contained only his name, address, occupation, and social security number with the declaration under penalty of perjury clause on the forms blocked out. He claimed it was against his constitutional rights under the 5th amendment to the Constitution to have to complete and file Forms 1040 as required by law.

Judge Devitt said in the trial that the 5th amendment was not a proper legal defense for failure to file an income tax return and furthermore, a 1040 is not a return unless it is completed as required by law. On Jan. 2, 1974, Judge Devitt suspended imposition of sentence and placed Daly on probation for three years. One of the conditions of the probation was that Daly file complete federal income tax returns.

Evidence at the trial showed that Daly was the principal speaker at seminars and that he offered packets for sale for $100 detailing his method of not paying income taxes. It also came out in the trial that Daly's efforts have been nation-wide in scope. He represented a Porth in Kansas City, a Muncaster in Alabama, and others in Las Vegas, Detroit, southern California, Chicago, Spokane and Seattle.

Daly was an unsuccessful candidate for governor of Minnesota in 1966, for 5th district representative in 1968, and justice of supreme court in Minnesota in 1970. In 1972, he was unsuccessful when he tried to get his name on the ballot for justice of the Minnesota supreme court. He has been a long-time opponent of the federal reserve system and the monetary system of the United States.

Crime Rate In Minn. Continued To Rise In 1973

Crimes in Minnesota continued to rise during 1973 at the rate of more than 7,000 a year, topping off a 10-year increase of 79,446, or 136 per cent of the 1963 rate, the Minnesota bureau of criminal apprehension has reported. The Bureau reported a total of 137,713 crimes in 1973 compared with 130,623 in 1972, an increase of 5.4 per cent.

Greatest percentage increases were in larceny under $50 and burglary, 10 and 9.8 per cent respectively. Crimes of violence, including murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery and aggravated assault, numbered 7,009, an increase of 108 over 1972.

Larceny of under $50 led the list of crimes, with 47,002 offenses committed, up from 42,736. Burglaries were second, 39,581, up from 36,063. Larger larcenies were third, 31,024, down from 31,793.

Of the 97 murders reported in 1973 (three more than for 1972) guns figured in 54, including handguns in 30. The victims of 33 gunshot deaths were either relatives or acquaintances of the gun-wielders.

Guns also figured prominently in the aggravated assault cases. About a third of the 2,785 aggravated assaults were committed with guns, and 682 with knives. Another 20 per cent involved other types of weapons and the rest were committed with fists. In addition to the aggravated assaults, there were 8,272 minor assaults reported but not included in the crime figure.

All urban areas experienced a crime increase of 3.8 per cent, while rural crime increased 19.2 per cent. However, urban crime accounted for almost 90 per cent of the total. Minneapolis reported a 4.7 per cent decrease, Duluth a 6.2 per cent decrease, and St. Paul a 3.9 per cent increase.

Few Gas Stations To Be Open In Minn. on Sundays

Despite the lifting of the ban on Sunday sales of gasoline this past week, only 28 per cent of the stations in Minnesota plan to open for business on Sundays.

According to the weekly survey of 86 gasoline stations around the state by the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA) and its affiliated clubs, the majority of stations will remain closed on Sundays due to poor supplies of gasoline.

In addition to poor supplies, some operators report they enjoy the shorter hour and plan to continue them even if the gasoline supply gets better.

The gasoline supply in the state has improved slightly over last week, however, with 73 per cent of the stations contacted reporting adequate to plentiful supplies. However, the remainder report cuts in allocations and generally deteriorating supplies for the coming week.

The average price for regular in Minnesota this past week was 52.2 cents per gallon, up from 51.1 cents the week before. The average price for premium was 56.1 cents, up frm 55.7 cents the week before.

Hours of operation have declined this week with about eight per cent of the stations reporting shorter hours on weekdays and Saturdays. Limiting of sales to a gallon or dollar amount has increased to include about nine per cent of the stations. Most of the limiting is confined to the Twin City area, the survey found.

Several operators said they would be running out of gas before the month was up, and there was general agreement that the short-range outlook for supplies was poor. But many operators said they would open up on Sunday again if gasoline supplies would improve.

Was "Try Again" really the name of the boat? Or did some joker paint those words on the old hull after the wreck? Either way the irony wasn't wasted.

Lots of people used to sail through life confidently and contentedly. Today they aren't so sure they're on the right course.

There are some who think it's only a matter of time before our whole civilization runs aground.

Christianity has often been called "the religion of another chance." Yes, for Christ teaches that we can rise out of our failures through God's forgiveness and power.

Millions today are rediscovering Christian precepts. It is a new generation which will soon be sailing toward a Christian destiny.

Environment Quality Index Shows Slide

Over the past five years, U.S. public interest in the environment has seemed to soar. Catchwords, such as "ecology" and "conservation" took on new meanings and became akin to those other American sacred cows—apple pie and motherhood. During that period, Congress committed far more money than ever before to clean up our air and water, a host of anti-pollution laws were passed, and an entirely new federal agency was even created to deal with them. Communities and cities across the country have also taken steps to deal with their own pollution problems.

In fact, has there rally been an upswing in environmental interest and, if so, what has been its effect? What difference, if any, has it made in the quality of American life? Has "motherhood gone out of the environment" as some authorities have reported?

The fifth environmental quality index thoroughly examines the current status of the American environment in the February-March issue of "National Wildlife" magazine. Published annually since 1969 by the National Wildlife federation, the EQ index statistically and graphically assesses where we have been, what we are doing now and where we are headed in our environmental battle.

In putting our current environmental status into perspective, the index provides a concise analysis of a variety of environmental data from various government sources, including the environmental protection agency. Overall, the picture shown by the index is not bright, with the total U.S. environment standing at 53 on a 100-point scale—one point lower than in 1973.

"In too many large cities the air is still not fit to breathe," states the introduction to the 1974 index, "and in too many parts of the country even the drinking water is contaminated. But perhaps most disconcerting of all, environmentalism itself has become an increasingly beleaguered movement."

As indicative of the total U.S. environment, seven key indicators are featured in the EQ index: Air, water, minerals, wildlife, living space, timber and soil. "All EQ indicators except air, in fact, are down (from previous years)," according to the report. While the EQ measurements are not exact, the index emphasizes, they do represent the best collective judgments of a National Wildlife federation reserach team.

Besides providing empirical documentaion, the EQ index gives case examples of each of the indicators. For instance, in the summary analysis of the status of U.S. wildlife the index reports that, "Each year in the U.S., over one million acres of habitat is either buried under buildings and pavements or drowned by reservoirs. But in addition to robbing wildlife of vital living space, our industrialized society kills outright as well.

For example, more than 150,000 birds die annually in oil field sumps alone. One recent visit to a single oil sump revealed 187 victims—90 songbirds, 87 ducks, one owl, one egret, five geese and three herons. Largely because of habitat loss, the interior department's endangered species list has gone up from 101 to 109 this last year."

A lack of public concern is reportedly not the principal problem. The index quotes the latest annual report of the council on environmental quality (CEQ) as stating, "The nation has voted overwhelmingly for a cleaner environment."

Instead, the principal diagnosis of the problem is a lack of funding. Only about one per cent of the new administration-proposed $304.4 billion budget is designated for environment and natural resource programs. According to the CEQ, a total of $274 billion should be spent within the next decade by industry, citizens and government in order to meet federal pollution abatement standards by 1981. That includes not only air and water clean-up, but solid waste, noise, radiation and land reclamation as well.

While the $274 billion would only represent two and one-half per cent of the nation's gross national product, any lower level of spending, warns the CEQ, will "result in even greater penalties in terms of health, recreation, or aesthetics."

"At the present low level of spending," according to the index, it will be impossible to reach the CEQ goals."

"The fact is," the NWF publication notes "that by cleaning up air and water pollution, in the long run the nation will actually save money." As an example, the index observes that by 1977, almost $2 billion in air pollution damage will be saved if the proper controls are put to use now.

If 1977 seems a long way off, the annual report points out, "Consider the damge air pollution alone is causing right now: $16 billion per year, or about $80 for each American, in terms of damage to vegetation, materials, property, and health."

"In short, the clean-up campaign has moed at little more tan a snail's pace since it began, back in 1955, with passage of the original air pollution control legislation."

The fifth EQ index also documents changes in the degree of pollution from the five major air pollutants and comparative clean-up track records of cities in different regions of the country over the past five years, including an illustration of how the city of Chicago monitors its air and water pollution.

In an index follow-up, the veteran environmental specialist for "Newsweek" magazine, James Bishop, examines the bizarre and baffling "Politics of Pollution." "Despite some significant progress on the clean-up front," Bishop writes, "the nation's political and corporate leaders—though not necessarily the people themselves—are showing signs of pulling back from the root challenge presented five years ago. Altering the nation's values of unlimited economic growth, and acknowledging that the price of America's progress has been prohibitively high."

Even though environmental considerations are now a basic part of government decision-making, Bishop explains, an increasing tendency to cast environmentalists into the scapegoat role shows an "obliviousness to the fact that depletion of natural resources, sloppy mining practices, inefficient distribution,—were some of the triggers of environmental awareness in the first place."

Whether environmentalists survive won't be known until some of the upcoming major battles over our quality of life are fought, according to Bishop. "Each of these contains the seeds of unprecedented ecological havoc if they are carried out under the boom-town ethics and laws of yesteryear."

"But perhaps even more fundamentally, the answer won't be in until much more is known about the American public's commitment to environmental reform—until it is truly tested."

NORMAN D. DESCHENE, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey A. Adjutant General Critical Of N.G. Proposed Level

Major General Chester J. Moeglein, Minnesota's Adjutant General, recently criticized proposals to eliminate units or reduce manning levels of the national guard and reserve as unjustified in view of the steady expansion of Soviet Russian military power.

He said drastic post-Vietnam reductions in the size of the nation's active military forces already have brought United States military power down to borderline levels. Cuts in the guard and reserve would increase the risks to national security to "perilous levels", he said.

The target of his criticism was a recent department of defense order to eliminate 27 army national guard Nike-Hercules missle batteries guarding American population centers and five air national guard jet interceptor squadrons, most of them also responsible for defense against air attack.

It also has become known through news sources that department of defense intends to inactivate at least ten additional Air Guard fighter interceptor squadrons next year which could affect the Air Defense bases at Fargo and Duluth. If this were to happen, it would leave the north central part of the United States completely without interceptor aircraft and totally vulnerable to an enemy manned bomber attack.

General Moeglein termed the cuts "ill-conceived" and "based more heavily on pressures to reduce defense spending than on military considerations".

"This nation's armed forces are smaller today than at any time since the years before the Korean War but no such reductions have been made in the forces of our potential enemies", he pointed out.

He strongly endorsed present efforts aimed at mutually reducing defense spending and military force levels but said negotiations to attain those ends will be futile if we continue to make unilateral reductions.

General Moeglein pointed out that senior Air Force officials formally objected to the reduction in Air Guard forces but were overruled by the Department of Defense. He also cited recent Congressional testimony by General Creighton W. Abrams that combat elements currently proposed for the Active Army, National Guard and Reserve offer only a "marginal chance" of the Army accomplishing national objectives, in case of war on a non-nuclear battlefield.

He also declared that it is a "waste of defense assets" to inactivate these 100 per cent combat ready Air Guard units. Immense sums have been spent on developing this capability and it would be tragic to arbitrarily dissipate such assets. A far more sensible course, he said, would be to convert these units to other essential missions and more modern aircraft.

NEW STORE for the downtown Thief River Falls area is Tradehome Shoes, located on LaBree avenue between J & B Drug store and the Falls theatre. One of a number of stores owned by the St. Paul-based company, the store features shoes for the entire family.

ATTRACTIVE DISPLAYS, carpeting and fluorescent lighting add to the attractiveness of the new Tradehome shoe store in Thief River Falls. Grand opening is being held this week through Saturday with free gifts given with purchases, according to Dan Kruse, manager.

Tradehome Shoe Store To Hold Grand Opening

Tradehome Shoe store is havnng a three-day grand-opening at the new store at 211 North LaBree, Thief River Falls, according to Dan Kruse, manager. During the grand opening, now through Saturday,, gifts will be given to all customers with purchases.

The building has been completely remodeled. The exterior has been high-lighted by a blue and white platic sign and modern display windows. Elm paneling has been used on several interior walls and the sales and display area is well lighted by flurorescent lights. Carpeting and modern displays add to customer convenience.

Tradehome has been serving the midwest area for over 50 years. Kruse was formerly assistant manger of the Grand Forks, N.D., store, a former resident of Thief River Falls, is the manager of the new Thief River Falls store.

Tradehome began operations in 1921 and now has 38 stores operating in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The company headquarters are in St. Paul.

During the opening handbags will be given to women with purchases of shoes at $7.99 or more, shine kits will be given to men and boys with purchases of shoes at $8.99 or more, and toys and souvenirs will be given to children with their purchases. Construction work on the new store has been done by the following local contractors: Ranum Construction, Thief River Glass company, Langlie Lectric, Poppler's Furniture and Carpeting, Mousely Sign company, Brodin Sheet Metal, Inc., and Palmer Forsberg.

Red Cross Symbol Now Prohibited On Ambulances

Symbolic red cross, which has identified ambulances for many years, is now prohibited for use on those vehicles by federal law. It will be replaced by a new "Star of Life" symbol—a blue, six-barred cross on a white background. Super-imposed on the cross is a staff of aesculapius (snake and staff).

No deadline has been set for replacement of the red cross, but medical authorities urge all medical emergency vehicle owners to make the change as soon as possible.

The new symbol also will be used on shoulder patches and other identifying parts of the uniform worn by medical emergency personnel.

Information On Health Facility Now Available

State health commissioner Dr. Warren Lawson said recently that any member of the public who wants information on a specific hospital, nursing home, or boarding care home can visit or write the Minnesota department of health for a copy of the latest correction order sent to the facility.

This will show any deficiencies revealed during periodic surveys of health facilities by the department for licensing. Information disclosed will be non-confidential in cature. No reports can be given by telephone.

Things checked during a survey include matters like physical plant and general fire safety, administration, policies and procedures, nursing care plans, staffing patterns, dietary services, clinical records, medication and pharmaceutical handling procedures, physician services, general sanitation. (Any information relating to fire deficiencies identified by the state fire marshal are disclosable only by the department of public safety.)

Dr. Lawson stressed that the public should use discretion in evaluating correction orders since it is not always possible for every health care facility to be without some area where improvements are needed. There may be temporary problems with getting needed personnel or with deterioration of physical structure. So long as steps are being taken to correct shortcomings, the identification of problem areas should not necessarily lead to the judgment that the facility is not able to provide an acceptable level of health care.

There is also a system for disclosure of information developed under the federal certification program for providers of health services in the "Medicare" and "Medicaid" programs. Interested persons should check with their local social security office.

Rate Lists For Campground And Resort Available

Vacationers may be passing up bargains if they assume that low-priced Minnesota resort accommodations necessarily lack amenities.

A recent report from University of Minnesota agricultural extension service tourists and recreation specialists indicates that "a wide price variation exists for similar accommodations and services in Minnesota. Rate structures often bear little relationship to the quality of product offered. Rather, they have evolved through tradition, through comparison with other resorts in the area, through uncertain knowledge of adequate return on capital and labor."

Dayton M. Larsen, area extension agent, forestry and recreation, Duluth, and Lawrence R. Simonson, extension specialist, tourist services, Crookston, conducted a rate structure study of Minnesota resorts and private campgrounds. Single copies of Special Report 50, "The Minnesota Resort and Campground Rate Structures in 1973," are available from the Bulletin Room, University of Minnesota, St. Paul 55101.

The report lists rates in general for resorts and campgrounds in the state by region (Arrowhead, Heartland, Viking-land and Southern), rather than specific rates for individual campgrounds and resorts throughout the state.

For instance, rates for housekeeping resorts' two-bedroom modern cabins in the Arrowhead region in 1973 ranged from a high of $120 to a low of $50 for small resorts. In large resorts, the high was $135 and the low was $50.

The data for the study was gathered last spring. If the survey had been repeated in December, undoubtedly larger rate increases would have been indicated, Larsen and Simonson say.

There has been little change in the past 15 years in the average number of Minnesota resort units. The researchers found that Minnesota resorts lean strongly toward small enterprises, which are to a great extent family owned and operated. Commendable as it is, it probably must change if Minnesota is to maintain a viable resort industry in the face of increasing waterfront values, burdensome tax and regulatory loads and necessary sophistication in sewage disposal, among other problems, Larsen and Simonson said.

Minn. Driver Educators To Hold Workshop

Minnesota driver educators will take part in a one-day workshop on "Driver Education and Community Involvement" as part of their annual two-day conference of the Minnesota driver and traffic safety education association April 5 and 6 at St. Cloud state college.

Dr. Walter Gray, director of Indiana state university's driver and traffic instructional demonstration center, will set the pattern for the workshops with an opening address. Resource people will be Dr. Gray; Paul Rooney, director of the central Minnesota traffic safety center; Marty Rossini, director of driver education of the Stillwater schools; Dr. Jerry Witherill of Whitewater state university; and Bill Borja, of the Ford Motor company.

Workshops will deal with parental influence, community, students and automobile dealers. They will be followed by reports from the resource people and comments from representatives of the college traffic safety centers. Dr. Howard Matthias, of St. Cloud state college will close the session with a summary. The Saturday session will include an awards presentation and business meeting. It will close at noon.

Thought For The Day

Something bigger than yourself is a basic human need.

A society woman of great refinement and greater ego once went to consult a famous psychiatrist.

He said at the first interview, "Now tell me all about yourself." She needed no second invitation. At the end of the hour the doctor said, "That will do for now; I'll see you again tomorrow." The same conversational formula was repeated five times a week for several weeks.

Then one day the doctor instructed his patient: "Madam, I can do no more for you now. I advise you to take the first train or plane to Niagara Falls, and there take a long lingering look at something bigger than yourself."

As Jesus once said to people of big ego: "You are the ones who make yourself look right in men's sight, but God knows your hearts. For what men think is of great value is worth nothing in God's sight." (Luke 16:15 TEV)

—Rev. Paul Biegner
St. John Lutheran Church

Owner's Responsibility

When a dog or dogs causes damage to livestock or other property, the owner or owners are responsible for the wrongdoing of their pets. One of our readers recently wrote us regarding the loss of two sheep to a pack of three dogs—pointing out that the financial loss for the two ewes and expected lambs would total from $125 to $175, depending on number of lambs and at what age they would be sold.

The letter from our reader also contained a clipping of a column from the Minneapolis Tribune, in which columnist Diane Christianson talks about potential damage from dogs not under control of their owners.

"I've seen toy breeds snap the head off a chicken....Large dogs are capable of bringing down a deer, sheep, goat, foal, calves, etc. They also can do considerable damage to horses and cattle before being driven off with a well-aimed kick. In packs, dogs can tire a horse, especially if it is confined in a relatively small pasture. Dogs in towns have frequently killed smaller dogs and cats, so it's not just a matter of livestock.

"....I have asked that people from urban areas not abandon their pets in the country for this very reason. The likelihood of a farmer taking in a stray dog is remote. Any farmer who has suffered financial loss from roaming dogs is not interested in seeing any more. He'll probably shoot it."

And she notes that Minnesota law states: "Any owner or caretaker may kill any dog found chasing, injuring or worrying his sheep or other livestock or poultry....and any owner or caretaker of sheep may kill any dog found on his premises where sheep are kept if it is no under the restraint or control of its owner or other person."

Such law may seem harsh—but so does the loss of valuable property in a needless fashion. The columnist told about coming home from work to find $300 worth of rabbits destroyed by a large dog or dogs.

"They were best in show winners, champions, all purebred and pedigreed," she said of her lost rabbits. "Years of work building up a herd to the point of being worthy show competition was destroyed. It left me with an empty feeling and a hatred for any dog not confined to its own yard or under control."

Responsibility goes with ownership.

Ups and Downs

Improbability of the following account adds to the humor of the situation since it may not be proper to make light of the misfortunes of others:

A man hired by a construction company was asked to fill out the details of an accident that put him in the hospital after less than an hour on the job.

His job was simply to carry an excess of bricks from the top of a two story house down to the ground. This is his meticulous report:

"Thinking I could save time, I rigged a beam with a pulley at the top of the house, and a rope leading to the ground. I tied an empty barrel on one end of the rope, pulled it to the top of the house, and then fastened the other end of the rope to a tree. Going up to the top of the house I filled the barrel with bricks.

"Then I went back down and unfastened the rope to let the barrel down. Unfortunately the barrel of bricks was heavier than I, and before I knew what was happening, the barrel jerked me up in the air. I hung onto the rope, and halfway up I met the barrel coming down, receiving a severe blow on the left shoulder.

"I then continued on up to the top, banging my head on the beam and jamming my fingers in the pulley.

"When the barrel hit the ground, the bottom burst, spilling the bricks. As I was now heavier than the barrel, I started down at high speed. Halfway down I met the empty barrel coming up, receiving severe lacerations to my shins. When I hit the ground, I landed on the bricks. At this point, I must have become confused because I let go of the rope. The barrel came down, striking me on the head, and I woke up in the hospital. I respectfully request sick leave."

Who Owns National Parks?

Answer to the question of "Who owns our national parks?" would probably be something like "All Americans own our parks." To a degree that might be true, but did you know that large portions of our national parks are still not in public ownership?

According to an article by Ken Hampton in the Conservation News, published by the National Wildlife Federation, the public still doesn't own Yosemite National park although it was established 83 years ago. Large chunks of private property covering 5,126 acres with a total value of $12 million still remain inside the park's boundary.

How about Grand Canyon national park? Nope. Despite the fact that it was established 65 years ago, almost $150,000 worth of private real estate is left within its borders.

Hampton continues:

"But these must be isolated cases, highlighted for emotional appeal.

"Not at all. Want some examples? How about Rocky Mountain national park where the federal government is $4.8 million in arrears on property acquisition, or the Everglades park which still contains more than 25,000 acres of private land valued at $12 million, or Zion with a backlog of over 5,000 acres worth $1.4 million yet to be acquired?

"Still not convinced?"

"Then consider these grabbers: Grand Teton national park still has $22 million worth of privately-owned property on 4,661 acres and, in Death Valley, more than 7,500 acres of real estate valued at $23 million remains in private hands. And so it goes. One can call the roll of our venerable national park system and identify more than 50 units where Uncle Sam is still in hock to private property owners.

"The truth of the matter is that the federal government needs an extra $100 million just to acquire private 'inholdings' in the units of the national park system already established. Add to that another $227 million to purchase lands in recently authorized (by Congress) areas, $236 million to acquire property covered in such priority legislation as Big Cypress national fresh water reserve, and another $160 million to satisfy other legislative proposals—real or anticipated—and the dollar need rises to more than $720 million.

"But that isn't all of the sad tale. Vast additional sums of money are needed to acquire private inholdings and to expand the other national systems—forest, wildlife refuges and wild and scenic rivers. The U.S. forest service for instance, needs almost $1 billion to acquire about four million acres in or adjacent to national forests. The total estimated federal requirement: about $2 billion to acquire approximately five million acres. And that doesn't include the money needed to develop or operate the parks after the land is purchased.

"Our present policy is to meet outdoor recreational needs with money from the land and water conservation fund. The income of the fund established by act of Congress almost a decade ago, is not less than $300 million annually. Revenues are derived from federal recreation tax. Additional funds are appropriated from the Treasury or outer continental shelf mineral receipts to assure the annual $300 million income. Fund money becomes available for expenditure only when appropriated by Congress. The bureau of outdoor recreation, department of the interior, is responsible for administering the fund."

Despite the $300 million annually, Hampton notes, the nation is losing in the race to acquire additional public lands because of inflation and soaring real estate prices. Not all of the available funds are always appropriated due to directives from the White House.

"Another reason for the backlog," Hampton writes, "is that, in the judgment of conservationists, the true intent of the land and water conservation fund act is being twisted by government administrators to justify giving financial support to projects aimed at building asphalted playgrounds and the like in high density, inner city areas instead of acquiring the rapidly-disappearing land and water needed to enhance outdoor recreation outside of urban centers."

He notes that there are other agencies to aid the cities but no other federal program desigend to acquire outdoor recreation-oriented land and water.

"In the meantime," he summarizes, "we can draw consolation from the fact that at least century-old Yellowstone park—that wonderful granddaddy of them all—truly belongs to John Q. Public. Well, all but 69.5 acres that is!"

Ingvald Anderson, Secretary

by Dr. RUDY SKOGERBOE

Inflation is increasing with no end in sight. Figures from the U.S. Department of Labor, January, 1974 indicate that using 1967 as a 100 per cent base line, 1973 showed a price index of 136.3. This means simply that in order to buy what $100 would buy in 1967, one would have to spend $136.30 for the same amount of goods in 1973.

It would seem from this amount of increase would come a nation-wide effort to reverse the trend. Just one year ago, President Nixon declared, "There is no room for the postponement of the reductions and terminations proposed in this budget." Congress, however, didn't listen. Instead with the terrible pressure on the President through Watergate and all its side effects, the present course seems to be one of accomodation with the big spenders at any cost.

The Wall Street Journal noted, "Stern fiscal discipline, last year's Sacred Cow, is this year's dead horse. Whereas last year's budget vowed the Administration firmly intends to hold spending in fiscal 1975 to $288 billion, the total projected now is $16.4 billion higher."

Just a few of the programs that will receive increased funds are: Public service jobs, library aid, research training grants, area economic development assistance and health planning grants of all kinds. The President now declares that "Federal human resource programs have grown dramatically.

Between 1969 and 1975, outlays for these programs will have increased by 139 per cent. Cash benefits under Social Security programs will rise from $26.2 billion in 1969 to $62.9 billion in 1975. The total increase in social security payments will be 70 per cent which is far in excess of the rise in cost of living. Food stamp benefits will be increased by 20 per cent, federal education and manpower aid goes up from $6.5 billion in 1969 to $12 billion in 1975. Federal aid in the health industry will increase from $11.6 billion to $26.2 billion in 1975.

Apparently the President's intent to approach a balanced budget is completely forgotten. From where is all the pressure for this unreasonable increase coming? Certainly it's not from the working man. He's going to pay for it through longer hours and less take home pay.

Our national debt is now increased to a level that costs us $30 billion a year just to pay the interest. If we would reflect for just a moment, it should be quite easy to see we're in deep trouble.

The social planner type of congressmen, or in other words the majority of our national congressmen today are big spenders. They are working overtime trying to find even newer and "better" ways to waste money the government obviously doesn't have. Mr. Nixon up to now has put the brakes on a lot of spending, but the prospect doesn't seem very good for the future—at least until after Watergate is over. We will change things for the better only if we let our congressmen know how we feel. If we don't, they will continue to support expensive causes. The road to failure is paved with good intentions and spending our way out of trouble is one of them.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

by Arch N. Booth

Executive Vice President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Once upon a time there was a small farm family: a father, mother, son and daughter.

They lived on a farm in a very remote place, supplying most of their needs themselves.

As this was in the days before tractors, they depended upon a horse to do their plowing. In ways both direct and indirect, this horse was really the source of their material well-being.

The horse worked hard and the land was bountiful. They all ate well and lived the good life.

But as must happen some time, the father grew old and died. The care of the farm then fell to his son.

The son, though basically a good person, had long chafed under the father's authority. He thought—as youth often does—that his ideas for running the farm were better than his father's. He thought the farm needed more "central planning."

Given this background, the son can hardly be blamed for a certain lack of caution—perhaps even a touch of arrogance—as he set about running the farm. After all, his motives were good. He was as sincerely interested in their joint prosperity as his father before him.

The son's first aim was to increase the farm's yield of grain. To do that, he decided to cut down on the horse's feed and "redistribute" the seed to the fields, so there eventually would be more for everyone.

"He's getting fat at our expense," said the son of the horse. "Why should he have all the grain he wants when we need it in other areas?" And in truth, the animal did have a sleek, prosperous look.

Being no fool, the son realized there was a minimum beyond which the horse's rations could not safely be reduced. He therefore appointed his sister, who had once read a book on biology, to conduct a study and recommend an appropriate level of feed.

The sister found the job difficult. She had little to go on, since the matter of how much to eat had been left pretty much up to the horse previously. Nevertheless, she duly concluded the horse could get along adequately on an allocation equal to 76 per cent of its former feed, largely because that figure had a nice ring to it. And so it was done.

All went well for awhile, leading the son to believe he had been right from the start. The horse did seem to be losing its fat, but that was merely proof it had been overfed before.

Then one day the horse began to slow down. It could neither plow as much ground nor pull the plow through ground as hard as it had been able to do before.

This development was a serious threat to the son's strategy for maximizing production: If he could not get the energy he needed to plow more ground, he could not use the seed he had saved to plant more grain. The parts of his little "economy" seemed to be more closely interrelated than he had realized.

The daughter hastily reviewed her food allocation program for the horse and decided that its rations should be doubled to make up for lost time.

But the poor animal overate, because it feared a quick return to smaller rations. And in the ensuing condition of bloat, it could do no plowing at all.

The son, seeing the collapse of his schemes for a "better-planned" farm, convened a commission of inquiry.

The daughter testified that she could not be at fault, since the horse failed to perform well even when its rations were doubled. The son testified that his theory could not be wrong if the daughter's calculations were not wrong.

So he accused the horse of deliberate sabotage and sloth, and he beat it to punish it and force it to work.

The horse died.

And they all lived unhappily ever after.

Moral: The goose that lays our golden eggs needs food for the job, and there's not enough horse sense in Washington to decide how much.

On March 26, 1940, U. S. commerical airlines completed a full year of flying without a fatal accident or serious injury to a passenger or crew member.

Easter Bunny

Reward little egg hunters with a sweet treat that's as good for them as it's good to eat. Use enriched bread dough to shape an Easter Bunny, coat him with fluffy frosting and nestle him in a bed of coconut.

Enriched flour provides significant amounts of several nutrients vital to maintaining good health — the B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, and the mineral, iron.

Easter Bunny

- 4½ to 5 cups enriched flour*
- 2 packages dry yeast
- ¼ cup milk
- ½ cup water
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ cup oil
- ¼ cup butter
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, room temperature
- Oil
- Confectioners' sugar icing
- Gumdrops

Stir together 1¼ cups flour and yeast. Heat milk, water, sugar, oil, butter and salt over low heat until warm (120 to 130°), stirring to blend. Add liquid ingredients to flour mixture and beat until smooth, about 2 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer. Blend in eggs. Add 1 cup flour and beat 1 minute on medium speed. Stir in more flour to make a moderately stiff dough. Turn onto lightly floured surface and knead until smooth and satiny, about 5 to 8 minutes. Cover dough; let rest 20 minutes. Divide dough into six equal portions. Roll five portions into 22-inch long ropes. Twist 3 ropes together; place on greased baking sheet and swirl into pinwheel shape to form body. Twist 2 ropes together; swirl into pinwheel shape to form head. Roll remaining dough into 24-inch long rope; divide into 6-inch long portions. Twist two together to form each ear. Seal ends and pinch together to shape point of ear. Brush with oil. Let rise in warm place until doubled, about 40 to 60 minutes. Bake in preheated 375° oven 20 to 30 minutes, or until done. Cool completely before frosting. Tint ¼ cup frosting with desired food coloring to make bow around neck. Frost with white, add gumdrop eyes and nose. Shape bow.

*Spoon flour into dry measuring cup; level. Do not scoop.

NOTE: If self-rising flour is used, omit salt.

Energy consumption concerns will renew interest in wood products in place of metal and plastic for housing and home furnishings, John G. Haygreen, head of the Department of Forest Products, University of Minnesota, says.

Plastics have been replacing fine hardwoods in furniture and steel and aluminum have been considered in lieu of softwood dimensional lumber for framing in home construction. Also, carpeting is often accepted as a substitute for hardwood flooring in new homes.

But the energy "crunch" will encourage the use of wood products with the impressive savings in energy in using wood as compared to metal and plastic. Haygreen says it takes about 450 kilowatt hours to produce a ton of lumber, 2,500 to 10,000 kilowatt hours for a ton of steel and 17,000 kilowatt hours for a ton of aluminum. Not enough information is available yet on energy requirements to draw firm conclusions on the environmental impact of a major shift back to wood, but it is obvious that more power is required to produce metals than wood products and that other environmental costs are probably less with wood.

Burgeoning costs for coal, crude oil, natural gas and electricity should put large power consuming industries in a tough cost squeeze compared to the forest products industries with relatively low energy requirements. So the amount of energy used in the production of materials may become a much stronger determinant of the competitive edge a material holds, he adds.

Shortages of raw material might someday place wood at a disadvantage over other materials if timber lands are not properly managed. The renewability characteristic of forest products provides the potential for meeting this country's need for wood, but increasing world population is placing heavy demands on materials for housing and written communications. Materials for these products largely come from forest products. Housing could be made from metal and plastic and paper could be made from platic, but these are largely nonrenewable sources. Petrochemicals are needed to manufacture plastics and fossil fuels are needed to manufacture metal products. But if the advantages of wood materials gain widespread public awareness, then public policy measure will be enacted to safeguard the enviornment and provide for productive forest land managment.

Although coal is plentiful in the U.S., much of it is a low grade type high in sulfur that presents serious air pollution problems. Research is underway to develop practical mthods of converting coal to a gas or a liquid, which would allow its conversion to other forms of energy without creating undesirable pollutants.

"But a sound case could be made for the use of wood versus coal simply because coal is not a renewable resource. Also, environmental problems associated with strip mining of coal are extremely severe compared to those of timber harvesting," Haygreen says.

Paint the energy crisis in shades of gray, says Susan Meyers, extension family life specialist at the University of Minnesota. If we classify activities or energy-consuming life styles in terms of good or evil, black or white, we oversimplify.

This is the stage many of us are now in, she says. We rush for simple answers and overlook subtle factors. We may condemn snowmobilers or owners of large cars for wasting fuel without recognizing our own less obvious but equally fuel-hungry activities. Intolerance results, Mrs. Meyers says.

"Each person may be doing something to conserve, but we're doing different things. One person's solution may be all wrong for his neighbor," Mrs. Meyers says. "The snowmobiler may shun TV and ride to work on a bus while the leisure time skater may have a houseful of appliances and uses tremendous numbers of plastic disposable items."

She predicts a greater understanding of energy and its many uses will make us more tolerant of others' conservation attempts. "Right now we're concentrating on short-term benefits. But is it really worth saving a few dollars' worth of fuel oil to have an elderly person suffering in a 65 degree house? His or her other energy uses are so limited."

Some grumbling and resentment may stem from a person's insecurity about how he will fare in rationing or an extreme shortage situation, she suggests. "The immediate concern in a crisis is usually 'What will I do?' or 'How can I protect myself,'" Mrs. Meyers says. "If voluntary conservation efforts reassure people that we can make do without any real suffering, there may be less complaining and hoarding and more cooperative spirit. This may lead to greater tolerance of others' fuel-use habits, even if different from our own."

Taxpayers Favor State Basic Skills Program

Four out of five Minnesota taxpayers favor spending tax dollars for basic skills programs in reading, arithmetic and mathematics for all state residents regardless of age, and two of three favor development of basic skills programs for preschool children, according to a poll commissioned by the Minnesota department of education.

Results of the poll were released Monday by the state board of education, meeting in St. Paul.

Based on interviews with 995 Minnesotans, the poll's purpose was to test opinions to a plan by the state education department which would guarantee tuition-free preschool programs, assure all Minnesota residents basic educational skills regardless of age, remove the 21-year limit as an eligibility for tuition-free education, and provide special incentives for high achievers.

The opinion poll was included in a report to the state board by Wayne Erickson, education department staff member who helped develop "Purposes, Philosophy and Goals of the Minnesota State Education Agency," a plan for action.

Erickson presented the board with a 102-page document of reactions to the proposals collected from statewide meetings with the general public and educational organizations. In all, 2,199 comments about the state plan were catalogued in the report, not counting the opinion poll, Erickson said.

Poll results were termed positive by state education officials. A similar set of questions, asked of Minnesotans at 36 regional meetings last fall, were less positive, however.

Of the comments, Erickson said those which dealt with specific aspects of the state plan would be "strongly considered" when another draft of "Purposes, Philosophy and Goals..." is prepared.

He said the guarantee system, as well as the other areas covered in the project, would be submitted to the Minnesota legislature for possible action.

Generally, Erickson said, the more educated, affluent and younger residents polled tended to react more affirmatively to survey questions.

Two survey questions dealt with basic skills for preschool children and adults. Eighty per cent of the people polled said they favored spending to develop basic skills in reading, arithmetic and mathematics in individuals—of any age—which are needed to survive in society. Sixty-seven per cent said they favored development of preschool programs geared toward developing basic skills necessary for school entrance.

Other poll findings revealed that 55 per cent of the Minnesotans contacted approved dropping the 21-year restriction on tuition-free education which would allow individuals to attend two years of college or vocational training at any point in their lives. An even 60 per cent said they favored tax spending for a program to guarantee tuition-free education at any publicly supported school even though some individuals, due to rapid advancement, might be able to finish college.

East Marshall Residents Rally 'Round Referendum

Julius Kleinwachter

Percy Stokke

Robert Fincher

Gene Busch

Lowell Lindemoen

PETITION EFFORTS were reviewed Thursday at Newfolden by Mrs. Leonard Blazejewski, left, and Mrs. Arlie Peterson, who had put in several days seeking signers.

While speakers explained their thoughts . . .

. . . interested county voters listened.

In an attempt to muster strength for location of a law enforcement center and suspected county courthouse in the Newfolden community, approximately 500 people gathered in the Newfolden school gymnasium Thursday evening to hear information and ask questions. The meeting was moved to the gymnasium from the village hall due to the large crowd in attendance.

As a number of persons came to the microphone on the gym floor or asked questions from the audience, it was evident that old wounds have not completely healed and that location of the county seat in one corner of Marshall county is not popular.

"Just because a mistake was made once," several speakers said about having the present courthouse in Warren, "is no reason the same mistake has to be made again." Opinion was expressed freely that the two-story law enforcement center—proposed by the Marshall county board of commissioners to be built at Warren—was actually the beginning of a new courthouse there.

Formal organization of the Marshall County Improvement association followed the meeting. Representatives of various communities in eastern Marshall county were elected in group meetings held in separate areas of the gymnasium. These representatives then met in group session to elect officers and map strategy for securing of petitions which may lead to a county referendum on the law enforcement center question.

Robert Fincher of Viking was elected chairman of the new association with Howard Lunsetter of Gatzke as secretary and Lowell Lindemoen of Newfolden as treasurer. Other members of the association board are Harry Engen, Holt; Leonard Blazejewski, Strandquist; Orlin Ostby, Grygla; Earl Hanson, Holt; David Koehnstedt and Kenneth Nelson, Strathcona. Nelson and Koehnstedt are both residents of the Huntly township area north of Middle River.

The board will meet next Monday evening at the Orlin Ostby home at Grygla prior to a meeting of the Marshall county board of commissioners at Warren on Tuesday, April 9. Attendance at the county board meeting was encouraged by speakers at last Thursday's session to show interest by eastern Marshall county residents in the controversy.

Petitions are being circulated throughout the county this week as the new association and its supporters seek several thousand names in support of a referendum vote. Times contacts with members of the association board this morning indicate that success in obtaining signatures has been good, but that storm conditions in the area this morning are likely to slow down the process.

Gene Busch, superintendent of the Newfolden schools, presided at the meeting Thursday evening. Robert Fincher, one of several east Marshall county residents who attended a meeting of the Marshall county board the previous week, reviewed the information received at that meeting and added his own comments and opinions.

Mrs. Leonard Blazejewski and Mrs. Arlie Peterson gave a combined report on their early experiences in securing signatures on petitions, particularly in the northern area of west central Marshall county. They also reviewed their confrontation with Herbert Pagnac of Stephen, one of the Marshall county commissioners.

Lowell Lindemoen, who had also attended the county board meeting with Fincher and two others from eastern Marshall county, as also called on to report. He stated that the inclusion of courtroom and offices for the clerk of court and district and county judges on the second floor of the proposed law enforcement center make it more than just a law enforcement center.

"It's a start of a new courthouse pure and simple," Lindemoen said. But he assured the people in attendance that all the group wanted was a chance to hold a county-wide referendum vote. "If the people vote to have the building located in Warren, so be it," Lindemoen said. "We will abide by that decision. But we think the voters should decide."

Question of whether or not a referendum may be held was brought up at the meeting. It was stated that the Marshall county attorney had said he did not think the county board had the authority to hold such a referendum. This was reaffirmed by county commissioner Julius Kleinwachter, speaking in rebuttal near the end of the program.

Noting that he and commissioner Nilo Rantanen had come to the meeting to listen and not to talk, Kleinwachter said the board had been informed by the county attorney that it could not conduct a referendum. He

Pennington Share Of School Bill Would Be $88,104

U. S. House of Representatives last week passed legislation providing $18 billion for the next four years to fund and extend major federal programs in elementary and secondary schools.

Accordint to U.S. Rep. Bob Bergland, a supporter of the bill, it will mean increased federal financing for schools in all but one of the 28 counties in the 7th District. Pennington county's annual share will be $88,104, an increase of 29 per cent over the previous $70,371 per year.

Red Lake county share would jump a whopping 162 per cent, second highest in the district, from $40,548 to $106,414. Roseau county share would climb from $99,4434 to $138,370; Marshall increase from $91,172 to $289,141—by far the largest percentage increase in the district at 217 per cent; and Polk would gain 83 per cent from $187,361 to $343,576.

Bergland said that "although complex, the new formula places less emphasis on census data," which he said has proven inaccurate in the past and "promises a more equitable distribution of funds." He also praised the bill for consolidating several "categorical aid" programs into two broad areas giving local districts greater flexibility in spending the funds.

"Schools have often complained that they were forced to buy the unnecessary to lose funds while being unable to spend funds on something they really needed," he said.

Bergland said the administration "looks favorably" on the House version of the bill but that similar legislation in the Senate "contains provisions the President says are unacceptable." Bergland concluded that the bill's final fate will depend on what kind of a compromise can be reached by the House and Senate.

TRF Doctors Quizzed On Antibiotics Use

More than 20,000 physicians are taking the nation's first televised self-assessment test on the diagnosis of infectious disease and its treatment with antibiotics. This is one of the largest medical quizzes ever given in the United States and is designed to elicit judgments similar to those the physician must make in actual practice.

In Thief River Falls, the test is being administered at Northwestern hospital, where physicians will join colleagues at almost 400 other hospitals across the country during this two-week period through April 7.

The 80-minute program called, "The National Antibiotic Therapy Test" is being given on videotape by the Network of Continuing Medical Education (NCME), an independent television service linking medical schools and hospitals throughout the nation.

Earth week in Minnesota will be observed April 21-26, with a wide variety of activities in communities throughout the state. Organizations of all kinds, including garden clubs, schools, Jaycees, environmental groups and many others are planning programs and activities to focus on their own environmental awareness. Some are planning speeches or films, while others will sponsor outdoor activites such as neighborhood clean-ups, bike trips or tree plantings.

Richard Johnson, Fosston, regional coordinator for Earth Week '74, says that the celebration will help to demonstrate statewide concern for the environment and to help each organization see how many others are also concerned. It will not, however, serve as a substitute for environmental concern the year around.

At its February meeting, the Region 1 environmental education council endorsed Earth Week as a program for the northwest region of Minnesota.

Plummer Science Fair Held Wed.

More than 100 students at Plummer participated in the school's annual science fair Wednesday. Several changes have been made in the event since it was first organized three years ago by Don Fox, a science teacher at Pershing high school.

Participation in the first science fair was compulsory for all high school students enrolled in science classes. However, students presently compete on a voluntary basis, receiving class credit for their efforts. In addition, participation has been opened to students in grades three through six.

Judging the event this year was Bob Hoyum, a science teacher at Oklee. Three places and three honorable mentions were awarded in each of the three age groups; senior (grades 10 through 12), junior (grades seven through nine) and intermediate (grades three through six).

First place in the senior division was awarded to Rod Shand, a senior, who prepared an exhibit based on the vortex tube theory. Second place went to an organic fertilizer display entered by sophomores Janice Culkins and Candy DuChamp. Zodi Robidoux, also a sophomore used principles of the oscilloscope for her entry for third place. Honorable mentions in the senior division were awarded to projects by Grance Shand, a junior; Steve Rosten and Gary Grove, sophomores; and David Walter and Neil Konickson, sophomores.

First place in the junior division went to a geology exhibit by eighth graders Bob Brekke and Mike Skjerven. Stanley Tvedt, eighth grade, demonstrated the use of solar energy for home heating to earn second place. Seventh graders Peggy Skjerven and Melanie Skjerven compared fats and proteins for third place. Honorable mentions were awarded to Ted Witt, eighth grade; George Westlake and Lonnie Eskell, eighth grade; and Francella Boucher and Echo Robidoux, seventh grade.

Hirst And Panagakos Vows Exchanged At Williams

Candelabra, together with lavender and white carnations, formed the chancel setting at the Bethany Lutheran church in Williams for the wedding March 3, of Miss Rosalyn Hirst and Sgt. Steven Panagakos.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hirst of Graceton and formerly of Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. William Panagakos of New Bedford, Mass.

Special guests at the ceremony were the bride's grandparents: Mrs. Hazel Hirst and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Voldness of Thief River Falls; and her godparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Voldness of McVille, N. D.

Rev. Paul Gustafson of Warroad and Rev. Gary Harrington of Williams officiated at the double-ring candlelight ceremony. Providing the nuptial music were the organist Mrs. George L. Olson of Williams and the vocalists: Jan and Roxann Block of Williams, who sang "Because," Wedding Song," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a white velvet floor-length gown fashioned with a molded bodice with long sleeves, high neckline and a sheer nylon V-shaped bib trimmed with lace and seed pearls. Matching lace edged her train-length veil of bridal illusion. She carried a lace covered Bible which her mother had carried at her wedding. Topping the Bible was an orchid corsage. Her only jewelry was a pair of tiny pearl earrings, a gift from her personal attendants, Mrs. Carl Paulseth of Roosevelt.

The bride's only attendant was a friend, Marie Pedersen of Graceton. She wore a lavender double knit floor-length gown styled in empire silhouette with white lace trim. The neckline was complemented by a gold cross pendant. She carried a basket of yellow and white carnations interspered with purple and lavender stephanotis.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Mike Panagakos of New Bedford, Mass. Bob and Tim Hirst of Minneapolis, brothers of the bride, served as acolytes and ushers. The groom was attired in his U. S. Marine uniform. His best man, the ushers, and the fathers of the couple wore conventional suits with lavender shirts, white ties and lavender carnation boutonnieres.

The bride's mother and the mother of the groom wore long-sleeve, double-knit floor-length gowns in pink and medium blue, respectively. Complementing their gowns were identical corsages composed of white carnations and yellow baby mums. Similar corsages accented the floor-length gowns worn by the bride's grandmothers and godmother. The bride's grandfather and godfather were presented with white carnations for their lapels.

The parents of the bride hosted a reception in the church parlors following the ceremony. In keeping with the bride's chosen colors, decorations were in lavender and white. Serving as host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hirst of East Grand Forks, uncle and aunt of the bride. Mrs. Joe Beyak of Rainy River, Ont., Canada, registered the guests as LuAnn Lofgren of Williams, a friend of the bride, and Jon Hirst of Graceton, brother of the bride, served the punch.

Centering the serving table was a white three-tiered wedding cake decorated with lavender sweetpeas and yellow roses and topped with a miniature bride and a uniformed groom. The cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Ed Weisenhaus of Graceton, who together with Mrs. Paulseth cut and served it. Great-aunts of the bride, Mrs. Tillie Thompson of Newfolden and Mrs. Ernest Voldness poured.

The groom's cake was distributed by James Hirst of Graceton, brother of the bride. LuAnn Buegler of Williams and Patty Pederson of Graceton presided at the gift table as Janie Reberchek, Candy Schuh and Patty Nagle, all of Graceton, served as waitresses. All are friends of the bride. Presiding in the kitchen were members of the LCW Mrs. Herb Reese, Mrs. Anna Oftedahl of Graceton and Mrs. Albert Vratisovsky, of Williams friends of the family.

Among the guests attending the wedding were Jack Hirst of Rock Island, Ill., Pam Bonawitz of Moorhead, Palmer Voldness of Hoyt Lakes and Mr. and Mrs. Roland Sande of Thief River Falls.

Following the reception, the parents of the bride hosted a wedding dance and midnight lunch at the Nitehawk at Roosevelt. The Tony Svitaks orchestra provided the music.

For traveling on a wedding trip to New York city, Boston and New Bedford, Mass., the bride wore a two-piece pantsuit in a blue fabric with white flecks. Her blouse was beige.

The newlyweds are now at home at 2681 Virginia Drive, apartment 29, Yuma, Ariz. The bride is employed by the Yuma police department and the groom is stationed with the U.S. Marine Corps in Yuma.

SLOW DOWN AND SAVE!

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

by Ellen M. Spray

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

Mrs. Rodney Bergerson of rural Thief River Falls

Thoughts while trying to retrain my fingers in using a thimble. . .I wish it were possible to awaken my fingers as instantaneously as the people of the state were aroused by the introduction and passage of the last bill in the 1973-74 legislative session, giving the legislators an increase of $300 a month. In the language of the wage earner, that would be an increase of $75 a week, or $15 a day, or $1.85 an hour. In other words, the increase is greater than the present $1.80 minimum wage law. No wonder the people of the state began beseiging the governor with protests. Why wouldn't they be upset? Consider the young mother, who rather than accept welfare for herself and her child, is working for $1.80 an hour. She walks to work, pays a baby sitter and makes do on what is left. The plight of a young father isn't any rosier. Rather than accept help from his parents, he is trying to support his wife and child on the minimum wage. (It is true that most people must start at the bottom and work their way up, and it is also true that in most cases, the ones who use that saying are the ones who inherited "papa's" business. Papa was the one who started on the bottom so Sonny and Sister could start on the top.)

There are generally two sides to every issue. Just recently our own county officers were granted a nice pay increase. It just wouldn't make sense if we, the people, would expect our state employees to work for less money than some of our county employees. That is a senseless as the provision allowing $33 a day living expenses to outstate legislators and $25 to those that live in the cities and must commute to work. Big Deal! Who pays our living expenses? With those conditions I wouldn't blame anyone for going into politics. If I were 25 years old instead of a step away from the banana peeling, I'd do the same.

To understand the reasoning behind it all is as confusing as trying to clearify the different views on streaking. Some of the comments heard are: "It is the funniest thing that has happened in a long time," "it is better than smoking pot, taking dope or killing people," "it's obscene," "they must be sick to do anything like it," and it isn't a Sodom and Gomorrah issue." The Thief River Falls Police department is to be commended for settling the issue in this community by the stand they have taken.

It is interesting to talk with people to get their views on current subjects. The views are sometimes as disillusioning as the first time I tried to use a thimble after breaking my wrist.

Todays recipe comes from Mrs. Rodney Bergerson and she like so many of us who name our recipes after the persons who gave them to us, stated that it was "Aunt Dorothy's Chocolate cake. Thanks to you and to Aunt Dorothy.

Aunt Dorothy's Chocolate Cake

2 cups sugar
3 cups regular flour
1 teaspoon salt
one-third cup cocoa
2 teaspoons soda
2 teaspoons vinegar
¾ cup salad oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups cold water

Method: Sift together dry ingredients, add all the liquids and stir until smooth. Bake in an ungreased cake pan for 35 minutes in a 350 degree oven. (The cake can be mixed in the pan if you prefer.)

Frosting

½ cup vegetable shortening
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 egg
1 cup sugar
one-third cup warm milk
dash of salt

Bat the ingredients about 10 minutes. Mrs. Bergerson stated that the longer it is beaten, the better it gets. This makes a large recipe, enough to frost a layer cake. It will keep if stored in a covered container in the refrigerator.

Mrs. Bergerson recently left the ranks of the employed to stay home and care for her home and family. She worked as a secretary for Thief River Transport for a number of years. The Bergersons live on a farm in Smiley township, where they raise feeder pigs. They have three daughters: Diane, 15; Joni, 13; and Heidi, 12, who attend school in Thief River Falls. In addition to farming, Bergerson is employed as a mechanic for Wedul Trucking.

They are members of Trinity Lutheran church.

Mrs. Jaycees Tour Sheltered Workshop Facilities

Operations of the Northwest Area Sheltered workshop were explained to members of the Mrs. Jaycees at a meeting of the chapter held recently at workshop.

Chris Twomey explained the operations and also conducted a tour of the facilities. He stated that the workshop was not a charity organization. Its purpose is to give employment to individuals who are unable to work in normal situations or under normal circumstances. He concluded by proposing that members of the chapter assist in the project by taking a girl into their home, one day a month, to assist with household chores, such as cooking and grocery shopping.

Vice président Sharon Sims presided at the meeting. She also presented a going-away gift to LeAnn Clark, expressed appreciation for her work in the Mrs. Jaycees, and extended best wishes as she leaves to join her husband in Fertile.

Several reports were given. State delegate Karen Lehrer reported on the TOYM meeting held in Duluth. She stated that amendment for electing first and second vice president was defeated, as was the proposal of having an absentee ballot. Mrs. Lehrer also announced that the Summer Awards will be held in Crookston and that the State convention has been set for May 17-19 in Minneapolis.

In reporting on the Charity Ball, Mrs. Lehrer thanked those who made the ball a success. She stated that the profit will be about $1,700.

Kathy Belmont was appointed new chairman for the Block Parent program and Sandi Kohler and Jan Godfrey were selected as co-chairmen of the Gift of Life program. The club was asked to consider sponsoring a candidate for district vice president or district chairman. The club was also asked to serve the Friendship club in May and to assist a Canadian chapter in collecting Leggs containers. The club voted to assist in serving an Appreciation tea in May for Girl Scout leaders. Mrs. Sandi Kohler volunteered to assist in the Boy Scout Exposition set for April 28.

The meeting concluded with the presentation of the slate of officers by Smitty Luschen and the distribution of information sheets on the Tips for Talks Regional competition.

ARC To Meet On April 9th In Red Lake Falls

Informational meeting for the Pennington-Red Lake ARC will be held in Red Lake Falls at the Red Lake county state bank meeting room on Tuesday, April 9, at 8 p.m.

Pennington and Red Lake counties have a joint association for retarded citizens now. Because of the energy crisis and distance of travel involved, interest has been shown in each county having its own organization.

Members of the organization and parents of retarded should not be the only ones concerned with the proposed change. Relatives and friends of retarded could benefit from getting together and learning from each other and teachers could help educate the public about the great untapped potential of mentally retarded persons, A spokesman for the association said.

"Businessmen will realize that retarded people can become good employees and cutomers if given a chance. Doctors can play a key role in the lives of retarded people. Young people can discover interesting careers after learning more about services for retarded," the spokesman said.

"Special ministry for the retarded can be very helpful from clergymen. Lawyers and policemen know retarded persons have the same rights as every other citizen."

The association works to improve conditions for all retarded. Local A.R.C. members support the state and national A.R.C. which are voluntary organizations promoting welfare of the mentally retarded by advancing research, treatment, services, facilities and broader public understanding.

The public is invited to this meeting as guests or as prospective members.

Sen. Humphrey Named Honorary Cancer Chairman

Former Vice President and now Senator Hubert H. Humphrey has been named honorary crusade chairman for the Minnesota division of the American Cancer society.

Humphrey will be honorary spokesman for the society during its upcoming April fund-raising and educational crusade throughout Minnesota.

"April", Humphrey noted, "has once again been set aside as cancer control month by Congress, by the President and by the Governor of Minnesota, and I am very happy that I have been given the opportunity to join in the battle against this dread disease.

"I am much encouraged", Humphrey said, "by the progress made in recent years in the attack on cancer. Twenty years ago, I am told, the five-year survival rate for all cancer was 1-in-4. Ten years ago it was 1-in-3. Today it could be 1-in-2 if patients were treated in time. And I understand that today there are 1.5 million men, women and children alive, cured of cancer.

"There's good reason for optimism, but we can do much more. And we need money to do it. This year's state-wide goal to support the many research, educational and service programs of the cancer society is $1.25 million, and it behooves us all to contribute as much as we possibly can to this important and worthwhile effort.

"Cancer is strictly nonpartisan", Humphrey concluded, "and it is absolutely vital that all Americans team together in the fight against the disease, because, as this year's cancer society theme so aptly states, "We Want To Wipe Out Cancer In Your Lifetime."

East Marshall Residents Meet On Referendum

reviewed the background of the law enforcement center, stating that the idea had originated with the state crime commission. Connection of the proposed new building with the present courthouse in Warren would be to take advantage of existing building, not start a new courthouse.

The commissioner said that an elevator in the building was required by a plan to move the welfare department to the second floor of the courthouse, and that an elevator would be necessary to permit physically handicapped people to visit that floor. He said that there would be no surplus of space in the present courthouse if the court and law enforcement offices were moved; that the architect said the present courthouse would stand for "50, 75 or 100 years"; and that a $180,000 building fund and revenue sharing moneys would be used to finance the building without a bond issue.

Percy Stokke, mayor of Newfolden, called the Thursday meeting and answered questions about availability of property at Newfolden for location of a law enforcement center there. He said ample property was available and could be purchased at a modest price.

Stan Holmaas reopened old territorial wounds when he recalled that a little help from Warren people would have permitted a home for the aged to be built at Newfolden, but that such help was refused. Asserting that eastern Marshall county people had been shabbily treated by west residents in the past—"they call us brush rabbits and everything else"—Holmaas said it was time for the eastern part of the county to show its own strength.

Local Doctors Are Quizzed On Antibiotics Use

diseases, department of medicine at Columbia university college of physicians and surgeons, who helped prepare the test, said that, "It is actually a learning and self-assessment experience. The unique learning format, conceived for the videotaped test, makes it possible for the participating physician to gain new knowledge designed to keep him abreast of accurate, current and basic information about antibiotics and their use."

It is a method of self-assessment, according to Dr. Neu, because "it permits the physician to check his prescribing skills and helps him review his diagnostic decisions. It permits him to compare these decisions with pre-established norms while maintaining the privacy of his own score.

"Physicians know," said Dr. Neu, "that the proper use of antibiotics can cure certain diseases and can save countless numbers of lives. But they have many antibiotics and combinations of antibiotics to choose from. Yet, only one-third of the most widely used were known 15 years ago when a good many of the physicians now in practice received their training."

Format of the test includes patient problems and related questions presented with the patient's complaint, visual evidence of physical and laboratory findings, the medication prescribed, and a progress report that may or may not challenge the medication that was given. As the case is presented on videotape, the physician-viewer will have to separate relevant information from other data, just as he must do in practice, then answer pertinent questions.

After the question posed for each situation has been answered by the physician taking the test, the case is reviewed by physicians on the program for the pertinent aspects of the problem as well as the essential physical and laboratory findings. They then answer the question that was posed, and explain the correct choice and why the other choices were incorrect.

A preview of the national antibiotic therapy test recently was given to three groups of physicians affiliated with medical schools for the purpose of establishing a "peer base" with which to compare the results of the test when taken by the 20,000 physicians. The preview tests were given to physicians at the Columbia university college of physicians and surgeons in New York, the Louisiana state university school of medicine in New Orleans, and the Temple university medical school in Philadelphia.

Thought For The Day

The book of Proverbs gives us some good wisdom on the subject of "Words". Words at their best will be "honest", "few", "calm" and "apt". We find this in Proverbs 16:13, 17:28, 17:27 and 15:23.

Proverbs also tells us that there is a definite weakness of words.

(1) They are no substitute for deeds: 14:23.

(2) They cannot alter the facts. The most impenetrable charm has, in the end, no chance against the facts it may disguise: 26:23-28. Excuses will make no impression on the final judgment: 24:12.

(3) They cannot compel response. This is true with both good words and evil words. The most spicy gossip has power over the listener only in so far as he himself is willing and has a taste for such words: 17:4.

Can Or Should

Comments on the energy crisis are heard or read every day as the great debate goes on. Russell W. Peterson, chairman of the council on environmental quality for the National Wildlife federation conservation conference, stated the following in December of 1973:

The energy crisis is teaching us that Poor Richard is not toally out of date: a gallon saved is still a gallon earned. We are re-learning old lessons our grandfathers knew about living within their means. Conservation as a way of life may become stylish again; mottoes like "Waste not, want not," may come back.

We may be technologically capable of doing something but decide it is wise not to do it. The fact is that we can build all American homes and offices of glass, and devise monumental ways of heating and cooling them; and we can build enormous automobiles with everything automatic except the pilot; and we can move everything and everyone by car and plane instead of by train: but the point is, should we?

Can the consumption-of-energy curve in American continue to surge upward? I think we are learning to agree that it cannot. That in this field, as in many others, there are indeed limits to desirable growth.

Endangered Species

According to the National shooting sports foundation, the plight of endangered species has become one of the most popular—yet least understood—topics of the current ecology craze. Much of the confusion has been caused by the myth, popular in some circles, that hunters are to blame for the near extinction of hundreds of wildlife species.

While market hunting—a big business in the latter half of the 19th century—did hasten the decline of certain animals, the real enemy of wildlife has not been the gun, but the plowshare and railroad, the superhighway and suburbia.

American bison, for example, once estimated at 60 million, were shot for their valuable hides. The railroads of Kansas alone shipped over 1,250,000 to eastern tanneries in 1872 and '73. But even if they had never been the target of commercial killers, it would be impossible for vast herds of buffalo to roam the western plains today. What would many a western town or farm do in the face of a stampeding herd!

While the buffalo is now making a comeback, nine species of modern-times U.S. mammals are extinct, according to the Department of the Interior. Of those, only three could even possibly have been pursued by sport hunters—eastern elk, Merriam elk and Badlands bighorn sheep.

All were wiped out before 1910, during the settlement of their respective ranges. They were hunted for food by the pioneers, and for market—a pound of venison often selling for as much as $20 in a booming mine town. Save for the activities of a handful of wealthy English sportsmen, these species were long gone before sport hunting achieved any popularity in their regions.

As for birds, 32 species native to the 50 states are no longer to be found. Twenty-four of these lived in Hawaii, and were never hunted by sportsmen. They succumbed to the appetites of domestic cats and mongooses introduced to the islands by man.

Of the eight remaining species of birds, only two—the heath hen and the passenger pigeon—were ever hunted for sport. The heath hen lost out to the rapid advance of civilization in the densely populated Northeast. Once one of the most abundant bird species in America, the passenger pigeon was killed in droves by market hunters' guns, nets and even dynamite. But his bird's worst enemy was the loss of vast stretches of oak and beech forests needed to support its tremendous flocks, sometimes numbering over a million.

Today, not only are no endangered or threatened species hunted by sportsmen, but the sportsman-wildlife manager partnership has been—and continues to be—almost totally responsible for returning many American wildlife species to healthy population levels, including the elk, pronghorn antelope, wild turkey, beaver and wood duck.

Costly Stuff

You think food prices are high? How would you like to go down to the market for some Californium-252? No, it isn't orange juice. It is a rare, man-made element for use in the precise analysis of biological samples.

University of North Dakota scientists are scheduled to receive $100,000 worth of the substance through a one-year grant from the Atomic Energy commission and the Intelcom Rad Tech Californium-252 demonstration center. How much of the element will a hundred grand buy? Would you believe 3-10,000 of an ounce?

When it arrives, the Californium-252 will be stored in 500 gallons of water surrounded by two feet of concrete block—partly to minimize radiation exposure but mostly to safeguard the sample. Radiation level is relatively low—similar to that of a standard x-ray unit.

Initially the sample will be used in the analysis of samples from the USDA human nutrition laboratory which is affiliated with the university. Researchers will analyze tissues, blood, urine, sweat and other samples to deterimine levels of trace elements such as zinc, copper, iron, chromium and selenium.

A hundred thousand dollars for three ten-thousandths of an ounce! Wow! That makes the price of beef steak look pretty reasonable.

Scrap Price Controls

Following editorial is from the Waseca Journal:

Efforts to curb inflation through price controls have been a failure. The only remedy we see is to scrap the controls before they do more damage.

Prior to controls the nation was experiencing an inflation rate of between four and five per cent annually.

Since controls the inflation rate has shot to 10 per cent and more.

Corporations sought controls to curb labor demands. Now they find themselves facing a far greater problem.

Huge D. Luke, chairman of the board of Reliance Electric Co., Cleveland, puts it bluntly when he says:

"We're paying $140 a ton for steel scrap at our foundry, up from $40 a year ago, and we're having trouble getting enough."

In Waseca industry is having trouble with paper, yet the nation is exporting pulp.

This illustrates the basic problem with the administration of price controls. The United States can control domestic prices but the United States cannot control prices in foreign countries.

In the case of oil we see crude being imported at high prices, higher than oil producers in the United States are permitted to charge.

A most ridiculous situation has arisen which finds raw materials being exported to Europe to gain higher prices. Europe in-turn sells them to U.S. industries at unregulated prices and they come back as imports.

Some smart operators have discovered that the ships carrying exports, need to go out 20 miles from U.S. shores, turn around and bring the load back as a price free import.

Inflation brings on many problems but it cannot be controlled. Why can't it be controlled? Because so few people are against it. The man with property glories in the fact that his property is worth more today than it was before. The owner of securities, merchandise, foods, anything you can mention is pleased to see what he owns increase in value. He isn't going to climb to the housetops to demand a roll back of all prices. He may name a selected few but when he does he dilutes his argument.

We have almost resigned ourselves to a policy of letting the kite fly as high as it will, then it will go into a tailspin—the result a bust. After all those who lived through the bust of the late 20s and early 30s learned some valuable lessons.

Borrowed Nonsense

Two ministers visiting the Dominican Republic attended worship services on Sunday morning and, not understanding French, decided to follow the order of service by standing and sitting when a man in front of them did.

At one point the man rose, so did the ministers—and laughter swept the church. They learned later that a baptism had been announced for the next Sunday, and the father of the child was asked to stand.

A magazine tells of a woman who was given a ticket for making an O-turn. She began making a U-turn, she said, and changed her mind.

Teenager pointing to crumpled fender on the family car: "Great news, dad! You haven't been pouring those insurance payments down the drain after all."

Although we killed most of them off, they still own the land. Despite what the U. S. Government says.

Max Thrall

Dear Mr. Editor,

It was with interest I read the article, "Don't Blame The Children." Of late we are hearing a lot about "Alcoholism", how they are trying to make out that alcoholism is a disease and I would like to express my thoughts concerning this matter.

The realities of personal 'guilt and sin' have been glossed over as only symptoms of emotional illness or environmental conditioning for which the individual isn't considered responsible... I believe there is sin.. which cannot be subsumed under verbal artifacts such as 'disease, delinquency, deviancy.' There is immorality...wrongdoing.

Let's consider: If alcoholism is a "disease" or "sickness", as many today insist, it is the only one—that is contracted by an act of the will—that requires a license to propagate—that is bottled, sold, and requires public outlets to spread it--that produces a revenue for the government--that provokes crime--that is habit forming--that is spread by advertising--for which the 'sick' are fined because of the results of having contracted--which causes major highway deaths--that is without a germ or virus cause--and for which there is no human corrective medicine.

Finally, it is the only 'disease' or 'sickness' that bars the patient from heaven, for "No drunkard shall inheart the kingdom of God." 1 Corinthians 6:0,10.

Can I ask Mr. and Mrs. America, "Who made it possible for the 18 year olds to buy alcohol?

I know a real cure for the alcohol problem and I speak from the experience in our family. "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Romans 10:13 Jesus Christ is the only 'SURE CURE' for this sin and every sin. Try HIM and see.

Cordially yours,
Floyd Dalzell, Evangelist

To The Editor:

Ever since it became public knowledge that plans were being laid for the construction of a law enforcement center in Warren to serve the area of Marshall county, many people have become quite aroused and this controversy has evoked much emotionalism. The fact that the citizens have been alerted and are ready to voice their opinion is a step in the right direction.

The crux of the situation is not whether we should have a jail or not; but where should it be located.

I personally feel that the taxpaying citizenry of eastern Marshall county is justified in questioning the advisability of locating another county facility in Warren. Also there is sentiment that a bit of restraint should be used, and not rush into an investment of this magnitude without a full understanding of all the possible complex involvements.

Simple common logic shows that it would be economically feasilbe to have it centrally located, making it equally accessible to all residents of this county. I don't feel any personal animosity but only that we must do what is best for all concerned.

Another thought that enters my mind: "Is this a devious method to circumvent the legal requirements for the construction of a new courthouse without consulting the taxpayer of the county?"

My personal opinion is that we should not perpetuate a mistake that was made a generation or two ago. If possible, this might be a good time to correct this defect of location. In the event we do nothing, but permit things to go along as they are, we have no one to blame except ourselves.

This is government by and for the people, and those who serve in this government, serve at the pleasure of the people. If what has been happening is the wishes of the majority of the people, then so be it. But if not, then let's change it.

Therefore, a group of interested persons is planning a discussion session on Thursday in the Newfolden village hall at 8:00 p.m. I would like to see a good turn out of people. This is no time to be apathetic. Be at this meeting and make yourself heard so we can speak with a unified voice.

Mrs. Leonard Gonsorowski

notes from the governor

Several decades ago a former police chief described the life of a policeman as follows:

"He is denounced by the public, criticized by preachers, ridiculed in the movies, berated by the newspapers and unsupported by prosecuting officers and judges. He is shunned by many, hated by criminals, and deceived by everyone. He is exposed to countless temptations and dangers, condemned when he enforces the law and dismissed when he doesn't. He is supposed to possess the qualifications of a soldier, doctor, lawyer, diplomat, social worker and educator, and he gets paid less than a daily laborer."

There is a growing understanding in our society of the policeman's mission. And we are making real progress in modernizing our system of criminal justice and elevating the role of the policeman within that system. Yet for too much of the quotation from the former police chief holds true today.

When I became governor I felt there was a need for some recognition by the state for law enforcement officers who are asked to risk their lives in countless situations involving the protection of citizens and their homes and businesses.

The 1973 Legislature shared that concern and enacted legislation providing for the award of $25,000 to the family of every Minnesota peace officer, including firemen, who are killed in the line of duty. This past year the families of seven peace officers received such awards.

For the past three years, the Minnesota Chiefs' of Police Association has, through its "Police Officer of the Year" awards, recognized the many other ways in which today's policemen serve the communities they serve.

I had the honor earlier this month of presenting these awards to six deserving officers. The top honor went to Jerome Shanahan Jr., a 33-year-old Minneapolis police sergeant who, unarmed, ended a potentially tragic domestic argument by subduing a knife-wielding father.

Other officers cited by the association included Capt. Wayne Ebsen, Pipestone; Patrolman Howard Skollings, St. Paul; Sgt. Linus Fritz, Fridley, and Patrolmen Robert Skomra and Roger Brotkowski of Minneapolis.

The Chiefs' of Police Association, obviously, can honor only a special few for exceptional service. It is well to keep in mind there are many others throughout the state who are deserving of such commendation.

Senate Report

— by —

Senator Richard Fitzsimons
Minnesota District One

In spite of having annual sessions of the Legislature, some of the same hectic hours of meetings prevail at this session.

Both the House and the Senate have spent long hours in floor debate, conference committees and committee action.

The Conference Committee on No-Fault Insurance reported a bill back that is far superior to the bill passed by the Senate. This bill now does not include mandatory first-party coverage for motorcycles. The previous Senate file would have imposed an almost prohibitive premium policy on them. The weighting factor as it affected farm trucks was greatly modified which is of great benefit to farm truck owners as far as insurance premiums are concerned. With the compromise between the House and Senate in other areas, Minnesota should have one of the best no-fault insurance programs in the nation. I don't think the reductions in premiums that were anticipated due to the no-fault concept will be realized in rural Minnesota because of a variety of factors.

Among the actions of the Senate last week was a bill calling for a $350 million increase in the housing bonding authority. Three years ago, the Legislature approved a $150 million housing bonding authority. Under that authority, not a single housing loan has been made in Northwest Minnesota. I was not satisfied that any would be made in Northwest Minnesota under the new authority, in spite of a great demand for this kind of loan money. The bill was passed with 34 votes, the bare majority needed to pass a bill. I opposed the bill on the basis the proponents of the bill did not convince many members of the Legislature in outstate Minnesota that it would meet their needs.

Much of the debate in the last week has centered on the subject of how much money this session of the Legislature could appropriate without any tax increase. Commissioner of Revenue, Art Roemer, indicated this week that he projected a $25 million surplus at the end of the year. It appears this session of the Legislature will authorize new spending of an amount at least equal to that. The Senate Finance Committee was forced to turn down many requests for new or additional funding on the grounds no money was available.

One bill of significance to Northwest Minnesota that passed both houses last week was a bill postponing rule-making authority of the DNR on drainage. The Legislature set the time for the new rules at July 1, 1975. This gives the Legislature a whole session to review these proposed rules.

With the session coming to a close, Capitol corridors buzz with comments on the successes and failures of this new concept of annual sessions in Minnesota. Nearly everyone close to the operation of the Legislature are free with opinions on the subject. I will have some comments of my own in this column next week.

U.S. Might: Farm Power

The United States is one of the world's few areas of highly productive agriculture. With only 7 percent of the world's land area, it produces three-fourths of the world's soybeans, half of its corn, and more than a fourth of its beef, pork, and milk.

Tamper-Proof Vehicle Title Cards Adopted

Starting April 15, the motor vehicle services division of the Minnesota department of public safety will adopt use of a new, tamper-proof certificate of title. Though the title law has been in effect in Minnesota since Oct. 1, 1972, the April 15 change affects only the document itself.

The new certificate of title will bear a "latent image" "OK" which cannot be successfully altered, forged or counterfeited.

Commissioner Hoaglund explained, "This document has many of the built-in security features present in our American currency. One of these is very fine steel engraving giving the document a raised image which is immediately recognized by touch. The invisible letters "OK" appear only when viewed from a prescribed angle, and the inks used are resistant to alteration because of their sensitivity to chemicals.

"Police officials are reminded that not all registered vehicle owners will have the new certificate. None of the presently issued title certificates will be recalled. The new certificates will be issued only to owners who purchase vehicles after April 15."

At the bottom of the title appears a seller's and buyer's record receipt which is detached and retained by the seller or buyer only at the time of sale. This feature is the first of its kind in the country providing a breakthrough in consumer protection.

Stock Producers In State Show Meat Growth

Consumers owe Minnesota's livestock industry and the pork producers in particular, a vote of appreciation for literally "saving their bacon—and Easter ham", insists agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald.

Preliminary statistics on 1973 livestock slaughter and red meat production identify Minnesota as one of the major holdouts against national cutbacks that raised consumer concerns on possible meat shortages that briefly triggered record retail meat prices.

Minnesota hog farmers posted the biggest increases in the nation. The 5,336,000 porkers sent to slaughter in 1973 were 249,000 hogs or 4.9 per cent more and the total live weight of 1,311,430,000 pounds was 66.6-million pounds or 5.6 per cent greater than for 1972. Unofficially, that represented nearly 890 million pounds of pork, bacon and ham.

Only Missouri and Kansas farmers joined Minnesota in sending more hogs to slaughter in 1973, and only Missouri paired with Minnesota in providing a greater live weight and pork yield total than for 1972. Minnesota is the nation's third largest pork producer, behind only Iowa and Illinois.

Nationally 1973 hog slaughter and live weight totals were nine per cent below 1972.

According to the state-federal crop and livestock reporting service summary, Minnesota's total livestock slaughter for 1973 was only 700 animals fewer than the 6,818,800 total livestock slaughter for 1973. However, a nearly 17 per cent cut in beef slaughter last year resulted in nearly 204 million pound reduction in live weight of all meat animals slaughtered in Minnesota last year, compared to 1972.

Minnesota slaughtered 1,241,000 cattle for beef, totaling 1,363,983,000 pounds live weight, in 1973. These were cuts of 252,000 and 271.6-million, respectively. However, Minnesota did maintain its ranking of seventh highest state in beef output.

Calf and sheep and lamb slaughter joined hogs in Minnesota's increased meat production. The 7,800 calves totaling 1,888,000 pounds represented a 25 per cent weight increase over 1972. Sheep and lamb slaughter was 233,300 animals, up 2,000, totaling 25,110,000 pounds on the hoof, up three per cent from the previous year.

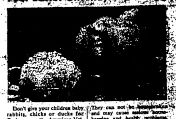
Your Easter Gift May Lay An Egg



Don't give your children baby rabbits, chicks or ducks for Easter, urges the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA). Not only is it cruel to give these animals as gifts, in many states and cities it is illegal.

Rabbits, chickens and ducks are farm animals; they rarely survive in the home. A young child's enthusiasm over the new pet often results in unknowing cruelty as legs are broken and wings crushed. If the animal dies or is injured, it is a traumatic experience for the child. If the animal survives, it generally ends up in an animal shelter.

Because so many thoughtless people continue to give baby rabbits, chicks and ducks as gifts, shelters are unable to handle them and most have to be destroyed. Even if the animal should live to maturity, many local ordinances would prohibit a family from keeping it.

These are outdoor animals. They can not be housebroken and may cause serious housekeeping and health problems. Many are disease carriers. The National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta and other public health authorities warn that children and adults in close contact with these animals may be exposed to salmonellosis, a severe gastro-intestinal infection. While the disease is rarely fatal, it requires medical treatment, often including hospitalization. In addition to the family, other pets in the household may become ill.

Because of the problems surrounding Easter "Pets," many communities have passed laws prohibiting the sale of these animals, including rabbits, ducklings and other fowl.

Easter and the coming of spring should be a time of joy and rebirth, not a period of physical illness, psychological trauma and the needless deaths of young animals. Be sure your Easter gift doesn't lay an egg.

Computer Aids Medical Program At University

by Lisa [illegible]
University Staff Writer

It has been a long day for the physician, and at 10:30 p.m. he is getting ready to go home and have his first meal since breakfast.

But the phone rings and the caller from University of Minnesota hospitals tells him that an infant has just been brought in from outstate Minnesota for diagnosis. The baby's hometown physician has noted that the baby hasn't eaten well for several days and he can't decide what's wrong.

The case apparently isn't urgent, so the physician can either go for a bite to eat and return later or go straight to the hospital to look at the baby.

This is the first of a series of choices presented to medical students in this imaginary case history. It's offered as a computerized learning program for medical and health sciences students at the University of Minnesota's Learning Center.

For a student playing the part of the physician in this "case," each choice he or she makes presents new difficulties in the case—which call for more choices. Ultimately, the imaginary infant either dies or survives, depending on what options the student as "physician" has selected in managing the case.

The Learning Center offers this and other kinds of audio-visual programs designed to enhance textbook and classroom learning. Computers, video cassettes, slide projectors, models, even Viewmasters enable the student to experience close up and at his or her own speed areas of medicine that often can't be presented as well in lectures or textbooks.

In addition to the audio-visual materials, the Learning Center provides students with periodicals, lecture notes, and reference texts.

Students can watch dissections, [illegible] blood cell abnormalities, hear the sounds of healthy and defective heartbeats, and examine [illegible] plastic models of the brain, the heart, and other parts of the human anatomy.

And, with the computer learning programs, the students can participate in a case and make choices to guide its outcome.

Medical students learning about iron metabolism last year were split into two groups by their instructor so that half attended traditional classroom lectures and half learned the unit from the computer. Final examinations showed no difference between the two groups, according to their teacher, Dr. James McArthur, formerly associate professor of medicine.

The students preferred human teachers in small group tutorial sections for this unit, McArthur said, but generally they were in favor of computer instruction.

McArthur, now assistant director of the Health Sciences Learning Resources Center at the University of Washington in Seattle, said that the crowd of students usually found at the Learning Center is an indication of its success. He calls Minnesota's one of the most successful centers he has seen in the country.

Continuing education for physicians and other health professionals, particularly in outstate areas, could be based on resources available through the Learning Center, according to Dr. Robert McCollister, assistant dean for Medical School curriculum affairs.

Depending on the kind of equipment available locally, he said, a program requested by the area's health professionals could be sent by the Learning Center for viewing at their convenience.

"It's a very handy resource to have," one student said. "A lot of our material is visual, and here we can see what we're reading about."

Help For The Problem Drinker Now Available

by Bill Hafling
U of M Science Writer

Peggy, a doctor's wife, was in and out of treatment for the "disease of alcoholism" eight times before she got her drinking under control. Today she is proud to be a member of Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) and publicly says, "yes, I am an alcoholic." Following the AA way, she refuses to take even one drink, fearing it will "set her off again," because it has happened before.

Dan, a newspaper editor, is known as a "hard drinker." Yet he has "never missed a day of work," and might punch you in the nose if you call him an "alcoholic." After wrecking two cars, he admits he has a drinking problem which he is getting help with now though he does not believe he has an "illness" or a "disease." He is not interested in following the AA way, though he has gone to meetings.

Admitting that "we still don't know all the answers," Dr. Gary Schoener, director of the walk-in counseling center in Minneapolis, recently outlined many of the ways in which problem drinkers can get help.

Speaking to nearly 80 professionals at a conference on alcoholism sponsored by the University of Minnesota and the Minnesota Psychological association, he said he "rejects the traditional notion that there is a single well-defined disease called 'alcoholism' and that there is any one specific treatment for it.

"Different subpopulations of alcohol abusers do better in different types of treatment," he said. "Treatment methods and goals--if anything is to be accomplished—must be appropriate to the particular person being helped."

The key question, he said, is "which program or method brings about what type of outcome in what type of person at what cost in time and money?

"Abstinence from alcohol alone, as with abstinence from any other drug, does not guarantee improvement for some people," Schoener said, citing research studies, which show that "although many show marked improvement, others deteriorate with total abstinence."

At one extreme is the chronic skid-row drinker—the person who comes to mind when alcoholism is mentioned—but who is only a small part of the alcohol-abusing population, Schoener said. "He's wiped out after 20 years of heavy drinking, brain-damaged, and physically impaired. He has no real future. Unfortunately, here, full treatment aimed at complete rehabilitation is not a reasonable goal," he said.

Various goals for different people range from complete abstinence from all drugs, including cigarettes, over-the-counter drugs, and alcohol, to abstinence from alcohol alone, to the controlled use of alcohol. Hoped for effects, as these goals are sought, are changes in physical and emotional health, an improved job situation, and improved social and interpersonal relationships, Schoener said.

Schoener listed the variety of treatment methods now available as follows:

(1) Medication—Minor tranquilizers, anti-depressants, LSD, and aversive drugs, such as Antabuse. Following the medical model under which the prescribing of medications falls, Schoener said "some surgical research is also underway." He added that the problem with prescribing medications is that "they offer a drug solution to a drug problem."

(2) Talk therapies—Individual counselling, psychotherapy, couples and family therapy, group counselling, and "attack therapy." Based on results with narcotic addicts, "attack therapy" involves heavy confrontation, teasing, and questioning of the drug abuser's life style. Schoener said results from the more pleasant couples and family therapy approach, though limited, indicate that "a good payoff seems highly possible."

3. Behavior therapies—Aversive conditioning, systematic desensitization, hypnosis, and positive reinforcement. The use of these methods is increasing as success is proven for certain individuals without the "side effects" found in medical treatments.

Aversive conditioning involves pairing unpleasant consequences, such as vomiting, with drinking. Systematic desensitization, similar in many ways to hypnosis, is aimed at helping the person overcome anxiety and nervousness in facing life's problems so that a drink is not needed.

Positive reinforcement, a psychologically-sophisticated technique, generally works to reduce drinking by rewarding behaviors which are incompatible with drinking behavior. Research shows that the behavior therapies have been particularly effective with many chronic drinkers, Schoener said.

Other therapy methods include "structured accountability" in which all of a person's time is accounted for; work, ranging from menial duties to counselling others; vocational and educational rehabilitation; information-awareness programs which teach about alcoholism, its effects, and defenses against it; and a large array of activities aimed at development of spiritual awareness, racial consciousness or pride, and self-esteem building based on cultural roots and national heritage.

In addition to the variety of methods available, Schoener said, there is an even larger number of programs in which the methods might be used. These range from loosely structured information and referral centers to detoxification centers to halfway houses and live-in centers. In some areas, non-alcoholic bars for socialization have been set up and drop-in centers are available.

In one study of problem drinkers, Schoener said, 75 per cent of them reduced drinking significantly after their spouses had received outpatient therapy, though they themselves refused any treatment.

Schoener said a change in life situation or pattern brought about by moving from one community to another or by changing jobs is sometimes helpful. "Unhappiness and stress may be due to a person being in an inappropriate environment given his or her needs or life expectations at the time," he said.

U of M To Offer Study Options For Dietitians

University of Minnesota's department of food science and nutrition this coming fall quarter will introduce a coordinated undergraduate study option that is expected to increase the availability of registered dietitians and community nutritionists in Minnesota.

A five-year $81,285 grant from the Louis W. and Maud Hill family foundation will help get the program started, announced Elwood F. Caldwell, head of the department of food science and nutrition.

Beginning with a small class this fall, the study option will allow undergraduate students in dietetics and community nutrition to have internship work experiences at Twin Cities area hospitals and community service agencies while they complete class work at the Twin Cities campus. The students, if they choose the new option, will receive course credit for their out-of-classroom work.

Some details of the program, including approval by American dietetics associaton, remain to be confirmed. However, the new study option is expected to be a prototype for the utilization of a consortium of colleges and clinical facilities for training dietitians, and has been dubbed the "Minneso Plan."

Presently students must complete an internship year at a hospital, after completing a four-year bachelor of science program, before they are eligible for registration by American dietetics association. More registered dietitians are needed nationally and regionally than can be trained by the present system of a four-year B.S. in nutrition and dietetics and a one-year hospital internship.

Dietitian positions in hospitals are going unfilled, while students who are able and willing to complete a four-year undergraduate program either do so and fail to secure an internship appointment, or decide on another major after learning that only about one in three graduates succeed in getting an internship appointment.

The need for dietitians and the number of students desiring to enter the nutrition health care field have increased markedly over the past decade, while the number of hospital dietetic internships has remained static or declined slightly. Internships for dietitians have come under scrutiny by hospital administrators anxious about the spiraling cost of patient care.

The coordinated four-year, undergraduate program, by combining clinical and community experience with classroom and laboratory instruction, should help solve the problem of insufficient hospital internships and also improve the professional capabilities of dietitians by relating their on-campus studies more closely to the actual practice of dietetics.

Directing the program is Mrs. Dorothy Verstraete, a registered dietitian who is a specialist in clinical nutrition and in patient education. A major part of the Hill family foundation funds are earmarked to hire a community nutritionist for the nutrition and dietetics program.

University of Minnesota
Agricultural Extension Service

Are you curious about how you are doing on energy conservation? Let your utility bills tell the tale, says Edna Jordahl, extension home management specialist at the University of Minnesota.

Compare this month's heating fuel and electricity statements with those you received for the same period in 1973, she says. Don't just look at how much you paid in both months because the rates per unit used may have increased.

Instead, compare the number of kilowatt-hours of electricity (KWH) and the number of hundred cubic feet of heating fuel (CCF) to gauge whether lowered thermostats, daylight savings time and other economy measures are having the hoped-for results in your home.

If it appears your efforts to conserve aren't working, it may be because of changes in lifestyle, differences in heating or cooling requirements because of wheather variation or differences in the number of people at home, Mrs. Jordahl says. If you have additional appliances this year such as dishwashers or clothes driers, you may be using more energy despite cut-backs in lighting, heating or cooking.

Are there more people living in your home now to explain increased use of energy? A college-age youth who returns to the parents' home, for example, will increase energy requirements through stepped-up demands for hot water and service from household appliances. Similarly, a new baby's arrival may mean heating a room that previously was closed off and using a washing machine and automatic dryer more regularly.

Keep these changes in mind when deciding if your conservation measures are successful, Mrs. Jordahl says. Without fuel-saving steps, you probably would use considerably more energy than you do now.

Energy consumption concerns will renew interest in wood products in place of metal and plastic for housing and home furnishings, John G. Haygreen, head of the Department of Forest Products, University of Minnesota, says.

Plastics have been replacing fine hardwoods in furniture and steel and aluminum have been considered in lieu of softwood dimensional lumber for framing in home construction. Also, carpeting is often accepted as a substitute for hardwood flooring in new homes.

But the energy "crunch" will encourage the use of wood products with the impressive savings in energy in using wood as compared to metal and plastic. Haygreen says it takes about 450 kilowatt hours to produce a ton of lumber, 2,500 to 10,000 kilowatt hours for a ton of steel and 17,000 kilowatt hours for a ton of aluminum. Not enough information is available yet on energy requirements to draw firm conclusions on the environmental impact of a major shift back to wood, but it is obvious that more power is required to produce metals than wood products and that other environmental costs are probably less with wood.

Burgeoning costs for coal, crude oil, natural gas and electricity should put large power consuming industries in a tough cost squeeze compared to the forest products industries with relatively low energy requirements. So the amount of energy used in the production of materials may become a much stronger determinant of the competitive edge a material holds, he adds.

Shortages of raw material might someday place wood at a disadvantage over other materials if timber lands are not properly managed. The renewability characteristic of forest products provides the potential for meeting this country's need for wood, but increasing world population is placing heavy demands on materials for housing and written communications. Materials for these products largely come from forest products. Housing could be made from metal and plastic and paper could be made from plastic, but these are largely non-renewable sources. Petrochemicals are needed to manufacture plastics and fossil fuels are needed to manufacture metal products. But if the advantages of wood materials gain widespread public awareness, then public policy measures will be enacted to safeguard the environment and provide for productive forest land management.

Although coal is plentiful in the U.S., much of it is a low grade type high in sulfur that presents serious air-pollution problems. Research is underway to develop practical methods of converting coal to a gas or a liquid, which would allow its conversion to other forms of energy without creating undesirable pollutants. "But a sound case could be made for the use of wood versus coal simply because coal is not a renewable resource. Also, environmental problems associated with strip mining of coal are extremely severe compared to those of timber harvesting," Haygreen says.

Mineral Center At University Said In Doubt

Future of the mineral resources research center (MRRC) at the University of Minnesota will be in the hands of the 1974 legislature, according to J.E. Lawver, director of the center.

State funding for the MRRC, which developed and promoted the use of taconite as a substitute for high-grade iron ore mining in Minnesota, will expire on June 30 when the 1973 appropriation of $200,000 runs out.

The 1973 legislature cut the MRRC's state special appropriation of $550,000 to less than half for the current biennium with the expectation that state support to mineral research would be phased out.

Unless basic research in metallurgical engineering is continued, Lawver said, the nation will face a mineral crisis similar to the energy crisis.

"No nation, with the exception of Switzerland, has ever achieved a lasting stable economy without fully developing its agriculture and mineral resources," Lawver said.

In an interview, Lawver said that unless the American people learn to live differently or continue to fund mineral research, they may soon find they don't have the metal to produce a new automobile, not to mention the gasoline to run it.

In cutting the state funds, some legislators said the MRRC does free research for industry and takes political stands in favor of the steel companies.

Lawver admitted that MRRC has been too tied to funding by the federal government and the mining industry, but he has a number of proposals to change that.

With an increased state appropriation, Lawver said, he could add staff in ecology and mineral economy and technology and study methods of extracting ore through underground technology which would minimize environmental damage. He also plans to expand his advisory committee to include people from outside the mining industry.

"We could go on speculating about future programs for some time," Ronald L. Wiegel, deputy MRRC director, said recently in Duluth, "but if funds are not restored within the next few short months the research efforts by the mineral resources research center on behalf of the state of Minnesota will cease—after some 50 years of successful and resultful operation."

Lawver said the MRRC has begun research on copper-nickel development, primarily an evaluation of the resources in Minnesota and the technological means of extracting them. One process is being explored which may substantially reduce pollution, but work is only in the test-tube stage.

Lawver completed research five years ago on extracting iron from a more impure ore called semitaconite, which is only now being given serious consideration by industry.

He said that in this developmental research the MRRC has learned some lessons from the taconite experience. Environmental considerations are now considered as important as economic ones, he said.

The technology to extract minerals from lower grade ores will be necessary if the United States is to continue using its natural resources and to become economically self-sufficient, Lawver said.

He said that continuation of his program could not be justified on the basis of student enrollment, because there has been a declining interest in metallurgical engineering, despite an increasing need for the graduates.

Lawver said he would like to see mineral research funded on the same basis as agriculture with a guaranteed income from the state.

He added that his operation could limp along on the remaining federal and industrial contracts for a short time, but that would not support the kinds of long-range programs he says are needed.

Mammenga To Speak At BSC Science Fair

Former state senator Eugene Mammenga, who is now the lobbyist for St. Paul school systems in the Minnesota legislature, will be headline speaker for the 21st annual Northern region science fair on April 6 at Bemidji state college.

Mammenga is a former faculty member at BSC. The subject of his 1:30 p.m. address to the youthful scientists and their teachers will deal with the involvement of scientists in the political life of America. He will speak in Hobson union ballroom.

Dr. Adela Elwell, co-director of the science fair, estimates that more than 75 entries will be submitted to the fair from schools throughout northern Minnesota.

Boundaries of the Northern region run roughly from the International border south to Wadena, east to Brainerd and Aitkin and include all of Aitkin, Itasca and Koochiching counties. Any junior or senior high school science student may enter either papers or exhibits in the fair and prizes are awarded to winners in each of a number of divisions.

Overall winner of the fair is eligible to exhibit in the International science and engineering fair at Indianapolis, Ind. later this year. Northern region will defray the cost of this trip to Indianapolis, and other winners will be eligible to compete in the Minnesota state science fair.

Dr. Elwell indicates that non-participants in the fair are invited to the 1:30 p.m. awards ceremony at which Mammenga will speak, as well as touring Sattgast hall at BSC throughout the morning to examine displays by the young scientists.

Further information about the fair is available from Dr. Elwell or Dr. William Britton at 218-755-2920.

PHIL JORGENSON of Thief River Falls and Patricia Allen of St. Cloud are preparing for their roles in Mozart's comic opera "Cosi Fan Tutte" which will be performed Wednesday through Saturday at Bemidji state college. Jorgenson shares the lead male role with another singer, performing on alternate nights.

Phil Jorgenson Has Lead Role In Comic Opera

Don Alfonso, a cynical philosopher in Bemidji state college's production of Mozart's comic opera "Cosi Fan Tutte", declares that no woman can be trusted. When he says this to his friends and includes their fiancees in the accusation, a wager is made and he has 24 hours to prove his point to the young men with Phil Jorgenson of Thief River Falls in the lead role of Fernando.

Alfonso's friends cooperate and announce that the king has ordered them to war. Following a touching farewell, the young men disguise themselves and return as foreigners to win the affections of each other's fiancees. During the subsequent wedding, the deception is revealed.

The college's music department will present performances Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. in Bangsberg center. Additional information may be obtained and reservations may be made by calling 775-2915.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this means of bringing to the attention of the readers of the Thief River Falls Times, the announcement elsewhere in your paper, regarding the American party meeting to be held in the Terrace room of the Rex cafe in downtown Thief River Falls on Tuesday, April 2nd at 1:30 p.m. and also make a few more little comments, if I may.

As the announcement will say, this meeting is mainly for American party county officers and staff but that other interested persons are invited to attend. I would like to enlarge on that invitation and say that "interested persons are urged to attend."

If a person is interested in the future of our nation then certainly that person should be looking for ways to insure that future and I'm sure that the speaker, Mr. Ronald Putz, will be more than glad to explain what the American party hopes to be able to do for the preservation of freedoms that we have enjoyed, but also have taken for granted in the past.

It appears to me that we are losing many of those freedoms, as time goes by, and I wonder just what our forefathers would say if they could see all the Amendments that have been made to the original Constitution of the United States, that they worked so hard to perfect.

I am still reading your editorials and as I have mentioned before I don't always agree with all of them, but I do admire your for putting your opinions right out there in black and white, for people to read and agree or criticize, but whichever way they may feel, it causes us all to "think".

I believe that the main reason that our country and probably the whole world is in such a "dither" today, is because the average citizen has not been thinking.

We have all been so involved in our own little everyday worlds, that we have let a few other "brains" to do the thinking for us, and it appears to me that they have just about "thought" us right under the table.

Sincerely,
Mrs. L. Carpenter
American Party 7th District, Chairwoman

To The Editor:

First—I've decided to get a lift; not just a face lift, mind you, but a complete lift. What with television coverage the way it is, and with streaking being the "in" thing to do—one can no longer be with it, if he has sagging buttocks or an obvious pot.

When all this is over, I'm going to make a well publicized unannounced streak, through every bingo game in the country (that's where the people are). Next I'm gonna form a new political party and call it the DEMISOCIODIXI-REPUBLICRAT party, and then I will announce my candidacy for public office.

Of course I will eventually hope to become president, but for starters I am willing to settle for U.S. Senator or Congressman, as I believe I have already demonstrated sufficient lack of knowledge and good sense to be completely qualified for even the highest government office.

I will show no favoritism. I will accept contributions from anyone and with our voter registration law it would be risky not to vote for me, so watch it.

Although the air conditioning season is many degrees and months away, you may be considering the purchase of an air conditioner at off-season sale prices.

Keep your cool and preserve your electricity budget by buying wisely, says William Angell, extension housing specialist at the University of Minnesota.

Cooling requires about 10 per cent of the energy used by air conditioned households. Select a unit with a high energy efficiency ratio (E.E.R.), Angell suggests. Although they may cost more initially, they use less energy and cost less to operate.

The E.E.R. is based upon the unit's cooling capacity (B.T.U.'s) divided by wattage required to run it. An air conditioner with an E.E.R. of 10 will cool your home twice as efficiently as one with an E.E.R. of 5.

A competent dealer or engineer also can recommend the right size unit for your needs. Once you have chosen a unit, help it operate efficiently by ventilating your attic. Temperatures can reach 160 degrees and burden a seemingly-adequate cooling system. Vents and, if necessary, a thermostat-controlled fan, can improve air conditioning efficiency between 10 and 40 per cent, Angell says.

Awnings, shade trees and louvered screens can reduce heat gain within your house by as much as 10 per cent. Never put a window air conditioner in direct sunlight.

Other tips for efficient air conditioning include:

(1) sparing use of lighting, ranges and other appliances that give off heat.

(2) setting your thermostat at 78 degrees or higher. This setting rather than 72 degrees can reduce cooling costs by 25 per cent.

(3) cleaning filters at least every 2 months during the cooling season and cleaning condenser coils at least once a year.

(4) leaving storm windows and doors on to prevent the seepage of cooled air. Many of the improvements that add to your furnace's efficiency (insulation, weatherstripping and caulking) also benefit your air conditioner.

(5) closing fireplace dampers and freeing air registers from furniture and draperies that may block them.

(6) shutting air conditioning off when you will be away from home for 2 or more days. Although energy will be needed to cool the house when you return, it will be less than needed to maintain a constant low temperature during your absence.

MEA To Bargain For Teachers In Most Districts

In this first full year of public employee bargaining elections, teachers in 91 per cent of the school districts that have selected exclusive agents—including Thief River Falls, have picked the Minnesota education association (MEA).

"We are very pleased with the results so far," observes W. M. (Mort) Mondale, MEA president. "Now that teachers have the legal right to bargain for themselves and to select their bargaining agent, these figures are vivid proof that the MEA speaks for teachers."

In this year's elections to date—beginning with Aitkin in mid-February—95.91 per cent of the teachers eligible to vote in the 16 elections have exercised that right.

In one of the 16 elections—Stewartville, where the MEA local affiliate lost by two votes—the certification has been rescinded pending a hearing on improper practices by the teacher union, Mondale said.

Legislative Letter from ANDREW SKAAR

STATE REPRESENTATIVE

We are in the closing days of the first annual session in our state's history. As we view the results of annual sessions one fact seems clear to most of us—the cost of operating state government and the legislature will increase tremendously. As one department head recently stated: "With the legislature around all the time I just can't get my work done."

Sessions in an election year such as this time lead to excessive political maneuvering by some legislators and too many insignificant bills being passed.

There seems to be increasing support within the legislature to return to biennial sessions. A bill was recently introduced providing for a constitutional amendment calling for a return to biennial sessions just like it was before 1973. Two other bills have been introduced which would drastically limit the length of the present annual sessions. Without a definite deadline when a legislative body must complete its work it's extremely difficult to bring a legislative session to an end.

The present session is a continuation of the 1973 session and during the two sessions over 2,700 bills have been introduced. I am not sure how many of these bills have been passed into law but it gives you some idea of the volume of bills being considered.

One of the major bills to become law this session is a modified no-fault auto insurance law with a mandated premium reduction and the bill will go into affect the first day of 1975. Another law that was passed brings all private and cooperative gas and electric utilities under state control effective Jan. 1, 1975.

One of the few major bills to be defeated was that to create a department of transportation. This bill was approved by the House but failed in the Senate. Personally, I was opposed to this legislation and was happy to see it defeated.

At the beginning of the session some analysts stated that at most there were three bills of note that the legislature would need to pass. These bills were no-fault insurance, an energy bill and a strict ethics law. It is evident that existing agencies can do what is necessary relevant to the energy crisis, but in spite of that fact the legislature created a new agency to deal with energy.

If Minnesota permits the public financing of elections, it will be the first state to do so. How will a taxpayer at tax filing time react to the candidate he wants to support next November? The independent voter and independent candidate will be severely handicapped.

With the public financing provision is coupled a provision to limit spending. This provision gives another obvious advantage to the incumbent. As we are pushed more and more towards a professional legislature, one can expect more and more provisions to help perpetuate the tenure of the incumbent.

Minnesota politics have been clean. If there has been an abuse, it is the fact that volunteer committees are not required to disclose the source of contributions. Several attempts by the Conservative legislature to require each candidate to disclose the source of all contributions made to himself, or of his committees, while seeking office and while in office, as well as all expenditures, have been defeated by the D.F.L.

A meaningful full disclosure bill is unlikely to pass. A lengthy, ambiguous monster, with loopholes and practically unenforceable, will pass. The measure will be a reaction to Watergate, but it will not be designed to do it well.

All in all, very little meaningful legislation has been enacted but a large volume of inconsequential bills have been considered and many of them passed into law.

Tony Dorn's announcement Saturday of his decision to attend the University of Minnesota next fall and accept a hockey scholarship offer from Gopher hockey coach Herb Brooks continued a remarkable succession of Lincoln high school athletes who have been recruited by major colleges and universities—a tribute to the outstanding Thief River Falls athletic programs.

Last year Thief River Falls football stand-out Kent Smith was actively recruited by a number of large schools before he finally selected to go with then-national champion Nebraska—a situation similar to Dorn's choice of going to now-national champion Minnesota.

Tom Goddard, another 1973 Lincoln graduate, also went onto college athletics, playing as a freshman for the University of North Dakota hockey team this winter.

Two years ago Thief River Falls football stand-outs Rob Swenson and Rande Smith were recruited, with Swenson choosing Dartmouth and Smith picking North Dakota State. Swenson was expected to see plenty of varsity playing time as a sophomore last fall before a leg injury sidelined him for the entire season. Smith was a starting tight end for the Bison until illness sidelined him at the end of the year.

Nebraska opened its 1974 spring football practice today (Monday), with Thief River Falls' Kent Smith and Mahnomen's Ken Spaeth hoping to impress Cornhusker coaches.

Smith and Spaeth both started on the Nebraska freshman squad last year, Smith in the defensive backfield and Spaeth at tight end. Smith will have a real opportunity to play as a sophomore this fall, according to head coach Tom Osborne. "Our biggest problem on defense is finding replacements for three secondary people who played key roles in making us the number one pass defense team in the nation," said Osborne. "However, we've got a lot of eager, talented young people coming into the secondary so the situation is not bleak."

After a lapse of nearly a decade, an all-star high school football game will be played in Minnesota this summer.

"The game, to be named "the Shrine All-Star game," will be played at the University of Minnesota Memorial stadium July 27 under the auspeices of the Minnesota Shrine clubs and the Minnesota football coaches association and with the assistance of the state coaches association.

Members of the north and south squads will be 1974 graduating seniors. The rosters will be announced later with the players undergoing a 12 day training period at the University of Minnesota prior to the game. The south squad will be comprised of players from the Minnesota state high school league regions one through four. The north team will be made up of players in regions five through eight, with the metropolitan Lake and Suburban conferences being split between the north and south squads.

Jeff Rhoden, a 1973 Lincoln high school graduate, recently completed his freshman season on the Bemidji State College basketball squad.

A 6-4 forward, Rhoden started every game on the Bemidji freshman squad, averaging eight points in 18 games.

Captain and most valuable player on the 1972-73 Prowler squad, Rhoden was a two-time Northwest Conference all-conference selection during his prep career under coach Lee Swanson.

The Bemidji freshman squad finished its 1973-74 season with a 9-9 record.

Two former district 31 stand-out tennis players, Jay Forney of Thief River Falls and Bob Menzhuber of Crookston, will be counted on to be mainstays of the 1974 University of Minnesota-Morris tennis teams this spring. The Cougars open their seaon Wednesday at Concordia College in Moorhead.

Mike Broten, a 1973 Northland community college graduate, has been elected captain of the Concordia College hockey team for the 1974-75 season.

Broten, a Roeau native who led the 1972-73 Northland sextet in scoring with 31 goals and 16 assists for 47 points, led this year's Concordia squad in scoring with 13 goals and 21 assists for 34 points.

Dorn Agrees To Play For NCAA Champion Gophers

Lincoln high school athletic stand-out Tony Dorn announced Saturday that he will attend the University of Minnesota next year and play hockey on the NCAA championship Gopher squad.

Dorn's announcement ended a five school recruiting struggle for the 1973-74 Prowler hockey captain who was also sought by WCHA schools Denver, Wisconsin, North Dakota and Minnesota-Duluth.

Although Dorn, a 6-2, 210 pound senior, informed Gopher coach Herb Brooks of his decision Saturday, he won't be able to officially sign Big Ten, WCHA and national tenders until the April 17 deadline.

"We're extremely happy with Tony's decision," said Brooks who made another of his frequent airplane flights to Thief River Falls Saturday. "I don't remember exactly how many trips I made to Thief River Falls, but it was quite a few—more than anybody else," commented Brooks who quickly added, "It's all worthwhile, though. Tony's an outstanding all-around athlete, and just as equally as important, he's a fine all-around young man, too."

Brooks, who guided Minnesota to the coveted NCAA hockey championship in his second year at the Gopher helm, predicts a bright collegiate future for Dorn who starred in both football and hockey for the Prowlers this year and is among the top weightmen in region eight track competition this spring. "Tony has a world of potential," said Brooks. "He's got an excellent shot at cracking our line-up next year."

Dorn played on defense in high school, but Brooks might switch the all-state football and hockey player to a forward position next winter. "Tony's unquestionably a proven defenseman, and he might possibly fit in as a right winger. We try to recruit to fill holes, and we lose most of our right wingers and right handed shooting defensemen, so Tony will get a real look at both positions."

Dorn, seemingly relieved after making his decision, said his decision to play at Minnesota was based alot on people. "I guess what influenced me most was the people involved in the Minnesota program," commented Dorn.

"Herb Brooks is a super guy, and everybody I talked to down there—John and Robby Harris of Roseau and Joe Micheletti of Hibbing—had nothing but good things to say about the school, the coaches and the program."

The Gophers' first ever national title was also a drawing power to Dorn. "I've always wanted to play WCHA hockey and when Minnesota won the national championship playing with all Minnesota boys, it had a lot to do with my decision."

Dorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Dorn, Sr. of Thief River Falls, was also presented with football scholarship offers after an outstanding fall with the Prowlers. "At the beginning of the year I was confused with the football offers, and I was approached about playing football along with hockey at Minnesota," said Dorn. "But hockey is a six month sport and it takes all of my concentration."

"Naturally, I have my sights set on playing as a freshman, that's everybody's goal," stated Dorn. "It's all up to me, I guess, and how hard I want to work for it." "All freshmen have to go through a period of adjustment," pointed out Brooks, "but Tony has the mental make-up and desire to step right in. He should have a real shot at a varsity spot," repeated Brooks who did point out that Minneson's varsity reserve program is one of the finest in the nation, though, with the Gopher JV's playing some 40 games and scrimmages a year. "We need varsity help quick, though, and we hope Tony will be able to help us," Brooks mentioned once more.

"Brooks' high regard for Dorn is quickly reflected in the fact that only six hockey scholarships are made available to Brooks, and Dorn, along with already committed Robin Larson of St. Paul Academy, were Brooks' top two recruiting prospects. "Robin and Tony were our number one and two recruiting prospects," said Brooks. "That shows how highly we regarded both of them. They're both right handed shooting defensemen and they're both fine athletes, fine students and fine young men."

Warmer Weather Causes Hazards For Snowmobiles

Many snowmobilers are taking advantage of the warmer weather for a few final flings at snowmobiling before spring really arrives. Some special hazards may exist when snow and ice begin to thaw, and the following safety pointers are offered to help snowmobile riders be aware of possible dangers:

(1) Slush! Can hopelessly mire machines. Rider can become wet and suffer frost bite and frozen limbs. Over tiring from exertion trying to free machine.

(2) Posts and buried hazards! Reappearance of hazards as snow levels become lower. Steel posts in ditches and farm implements are especially dangerous.

(3) Open Water! As rivers become swelled with spring water, fast currents above and below melts ice rapidly.

(4) Machine Maintenance! Machines that have been operated all year without maintenance may require attention now that snow cover is frozen and hard.

(5) Forgetfulness! Remember our privilege of operating in town and on the river is one to conserve. Let's not become foolish and reckless near season's end and create bad feelings which will generate laws prohibiting operation in given areas.

(6) Clothing! It's still cold out! Don't undress while snowmobiling and catch cold, flu or suffer from frost bite.

(7) Skating on thin ice? If you've ever wondered how much weight can be supported by ice, here's what the department of natural resources says: 1 inch—keep off! 2 inches—might hold one person; 3 inches—one man; 4 inches—several ice houses, spread out; 5 inches—snowmobile; 7½ inches—one car, two ton gross; 8 inches 2½ ton truck; 10 inches 3½ ton truck; 12 inches 8 ton truck.

Thief River Falls has a group of young men called the Snowmobile safety patrol, according to Terry Sexton, manager of training development for Arctic Enterprises. Their function is one of assisting snowmobilers in trouble, reminding snowmobilers of their responsibilities of safe snowmobiling and providing a source of information for regulations on snowmobiling in our area.

"We have some excellent privileges of snowmobiling in town and on the river," Sexton said. "Local snowmobilers are very appreciative of having these areas to snowmobile in. The snowmobile safety patrol is a volunteer group of gentlemen who put that extra effort into supporting our great winter sport."

Blue Gill Time

To many fishmen the month of April is the time to fish for the blue gill. While the crappie is the spring's best catch there are many who concentrate on the blue gill after the ice goes out. One of the best lakes for this fish is Lake Osakis at Osakis, Minnesota. Carl Aaberg who runs the local fishing contests reported that blue gills weighing up to one pound 11½ ounces have been taken this spring. Crappie fishing has been good.

1973-74 Nordic Basketball Statistics Are Announced

Despite finishing the season with a solid 17-7 record, the Marshall County Central high school basketball team struggled through a frustrating 1973-74 campaign, according to veteran head coach Ron Ueland.

"We had the potential to be one of Newfolden's finest basketball teams," said Ueland, "but we lacked consistency. At times when we put it all together we played some of our finest basketball ever. But we also played some of our poorer basketball too when we didn't play together."

Newfolden pieced together a 13-5 regular season record that included a mid-season eight game winning streak after the Nordics lost three of their first four ball games. The Nordics won the east sub district 32 basketball tournament title by beating Warroad 61-41, Greenbush 62-29 and Roseau 54-50 in the championship game. Newfolden ripped Stephen 72-54 in a first round district 32 game before suffering through a disappointing 63-44 semifinal loss to Argyle. Newfolden dropped a 50-43 district consolation game to Kennedy to finish the season.

Ueland's convinced his latest Newfolden squad was better than a fourth place district team, though. "I really think we were as good as anybody around here; there's no doubt in my mind about that," reflected the Nordic coach. "We just choked against Argyle in the district semifinals. We didn't handle the ball against their press—something that if we would have done we would have beaten them; we did during the year."

Newfolden regular season wins were recorded over Argyle 61-59, East Grand Forks Sacred Heart 56-46, Middle River 55-36 and 44-43, Baudette 83-55, Goodridge 63-59, Warroad 91-30, Strandquist 75-42, Badger 56-34, Kennedy 69-42, Warren 50-44, Roseau 71-48 and Gonvick 63-53.

The Nordic regular season losses were suffered at the hands of Roseau 48-36, Stephen 57-56, Alvarado 62-54, Greenbush 46-34 and Karlstad 61-60 in two overtimes.

"We weren't as consistent as we should of been and we didn't get the good outside shooting to open up the middle for us," pointed out Ueland, "but I think the most disappointing part of our play this year was our rebounding. We just didn't rebound as a team like we thought we should."

Senior guard Gary Kujanson and senior center Dave Strandquist supplied most of the Nordic scoring this year with Kjuanson averaging a team-high 14.4 points per game, followed by Strandquist with a 13.5 mark.

Strandquist was by far the team's top rebounder, pulling down 238 caroms. Freshman Mike Ficher showed promise of a bright future by pulling down 171 rebounds to go along with a solid 8.9 scoring average. Strandquist, a 6-3 pivotman, spearheaded a tough Newfolden defense which limited opponents to a 48 point scoring average with an eye-catching 42 blocked shots this winter.

Other individual Newfolden team statistical leaders found Strandquist leading the list of regulars with a 48.2 shooting percentage from the field; Kujanson topped the team with a 77.9 shooting percentage from the free throw line; Steve Sparby led the team with 48 steals; Dan Magner shared the loose ball recovery leadership of 27 with Kujanson; and Kujanson led the team with 75 assists.

Prowler Swimmers Show Continued Improvement

Climaxed by a pair of state meet entries for the first time in the school's history, the Lincoln high school swimming team continued its rapid year by year improvement during the recently completed 1973-74 winter season.

The steady Thief River Falls improvement was reflected in the season's final times, showing that Prowler swimmers set new school records in nine of the sport's ten swimming events during the year.

The new records established by the Prowlers this season included three new individual standards set by senior Doug Williams. Williams broke the old 200 yard individual medley mark of 2:29 with a 2:17.1 clocking, he set a new time of 1:01.6 in the 100 yard butterfly, bettering the old record of 1:06.3; and he turned in a record 51.7 effort in the 100 yard freestyle to break the old mark of 57.4.

Sophomore Dan Cork set two new individual Prowler swim records this winter with a 1:59.5 in the 200 yard freestyle to snap the old mark of 2:06.8; and a 1:02 clocking in the 100 yard backstroke to break the old record of 1:03.4.

Two other individual Prowler records were established by junior Dave Borning and sophomore Dan Heieren. Borning shattered the old school 50 yard freestyle record of 24.1 with a 22.8 effort for a prestigious sixth place finish in the state meet while Heieren was clocked in 5:38.5 for the 500 yard freestyle, a new event to the high school scene this winter.

New Lincoln school records were also established in both relay events. The Prowler 200 yard medley relay team of Neil Sjulson, Jeff Carter, Williams and Borning was clocked in 1:49.4 to break the old mark of 1:53.4. The Prowler 400 yard freestyle relay team of Williams, Borning, Sjulson and Cork turned in a 3:41.1 effort to snap the old record of 3:51.2.

"I was real happy with the kids' performances all year," said second year Prowler head coach John Kopari. "We came on at the end of the year like you're suppose to, with nearly all the records being set at the end of the year when we were preparing for the region meet."

Thief River Falls finished the season with a solid 11-5 dual meet record, beating Detroit Lakes 93-73 and 48-34, Grand Forks Central 51-31 and 103-57, Moorhead 69-61 and 96-71, Two Harbors 58-21, Grand Forks Red River 83-18 and 48-32, Bemidji 49-34 and Fosston 59-23.

The Prowler regular season dual meet losses were suffered at the hands of Fargo North 53-30 and 50-33, Fergus Falls 106-66, Brainerd 54-31 and Minot 94-72.

Thief River Falls also won a triangular meet involving the Prowlers, Bemidji and Fosston; finished second in a triangular meet involving the Prowlers, Grand Forks Red River and winner Bismarck; and competed in a large invitational meet at St. Cloud.

The team closed its season by competing in the first ever state qualifying West Central region meet at Fergus Falls. Thief River Falls finished fifth in the region standings, sending Borning and Williams to the state meet.

"We're improving all the time," said Kopari. "There are still things we would like to accomplish, though. We're trying to become more competitive with teams like Fargo North, Fergus Falls and Bismarck. Depth is our biggest road block, but we're getting there."
